over for

WEDNESDAY 26 JUNE 1996

Blair prepares poll on political reform

ANTHONY BEVINS Political Editor

Tony Blair is considering a dramatic extension of his commitment to offer refrendums on constitutional questions.

Labour plans for a Scottish parliament and Welsh assembly are expected to be opened up to a referendum within months of a general election, giving Mr Blair a powerful additional mandate to drive legislation through Parliament.

The referendum initiative would add to the pressure already being placed on the divided Tories by Sir James Goldsmith's Referendum Party.

The Labour leader has already ledged a referendum on electoral reform and, possibly, a European single urrency. The shadow Home Secretary, Jack Straw, has said public consent would have to be tested before English regional assemblies could be set up. But the logical extension of the policy to Scottish and Welsh devolution could reate new tensions within the Labour Party, with an inevitable demand that some frontbench critics should be allowed to campaign against the party line.

The plan to plug into popular public support for constitutional change would be used to outflank John Major, who will gain highlight his determination to resist constitutional change in a speech to the Centre for Policy Studies tonight. At a stroke, Mr Blair would be shoot-ng Mr Major's fox - a key element of he Prime Minister's election strategy pointing out that the voter will be guareed the last word.

In full pursuit of the Tory strategy, Scottish Secretary Michael Forsyth yesterday exploited a report from the in-dependent think-tank, the Constitution Unit, to challenge Mr Blair on the need for a referendum.

The report echoes our challenge to Labour on a referendum," he said. "It. is a supreme irony that those who claim 2017/23], se to give them a say on the issue." Movietr Forsyth also warned that Labour's An Justion plans would require "a dras-

> QUICKLY England's burning desire The attractiveness of a tan and a desi

MPs and therefore to a weakening of

But shadow spokesman George Robertson said Mr Major's plans to create an assembly in Belfast did not include any proposal to cut the number of Ulster MPs at Westminster. He said devolution would "be good for the state, and bind Britain together".

That formula would certainly be used to defend plans to extend referendums. A paper on English devolution published last year by Mr Straw, A Choice for England, said plans for English regional assemblies would have to be submitted to Parliament for approval. But it added: "It would not come into effect until local people had given their consent to it through a referendum or some other objective measure of public opinion."

But the referendum device was used by opponents of devolution to kill off Labour proposals for Scottish and Welsh assemblies in 1979. The plans did not receive the required amount of public backing: that rejection helped bring about the downfall of the Callaghan government.

Labour's current devolution plans were yesterday subjected to sympathetic criticism by the Constitution Unit, a group of academics and former civil servants set up at arms' length from the party to look at the "nuts and bolts" of reform. The unit's report suggests the number of Scottish MPs be cut by 13 and the number of Welsh MPs by seven.

It says the offices of Scottish and Welsh secretaries of state would be "largely redundant", and should be replaced with minister responsible for "relations with the nations and regions of the UK".

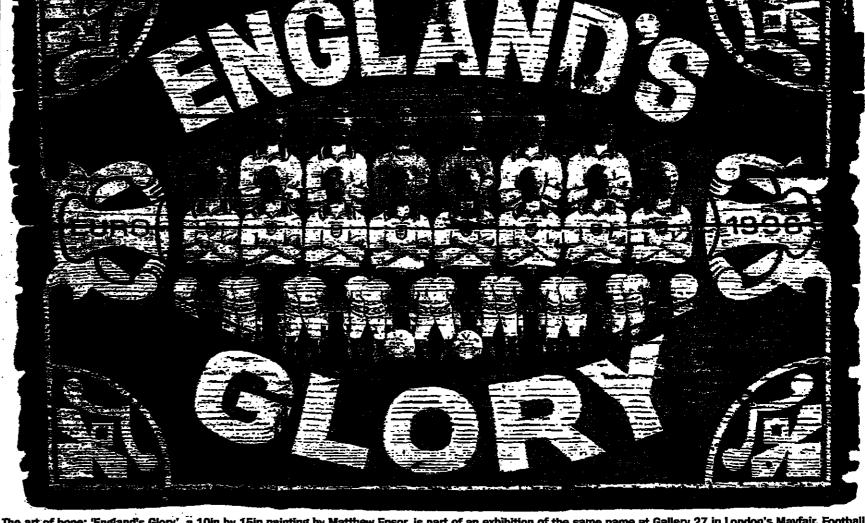

On Wales, the unit says a referendum "could help decide the question of principle whether Wales wants an assembly". And it suggests a law-making assembly would be better than an executive body, which has been derided as a glorified lo-cal council. "It should be done properly or not at all," said a unit member. It also calls for regions and nations to be represented in a reformed House of Lords.

	_	_	_	_		_	_
		-		Ŧ	7.1	٠-	7D.
		E۵	N	ш	۲.	`	T	į
	•		- '	•	•	•	•
Section 1
BUSTNESS

tic reduction in the number of Scottish

Andrew Marr, page 13

The attractiveness of a tan and a desire to "get their money's worth" from a holiday makes the English ignore the link between cancer and sumbathing. Page 3 Sugar to leave Amstrad Sugar, the former East End barrow the became one the City's most wheeler-dealers, is set to quit ad. Page 4 Service 'disaster' The GP service faces "disaster" as young doctors reject it as a career and older GPs	NESS 15 MENT 11 ETTE 11 REPORT 12 REPORT 13 RES 14 RES 15 RES 17 RUSTS 16 RES 12 RES 1
--	--

The art of hope: "England's Glory", a 10in by 15in painting by Matthew Ensor, is part of an exhibition of the same name at Gallery 27 in London's Mayfair. Football

1966/1996

Oasis aren't the Beatles And Blur are not the Kinks As Double D. and Watney's Pale Were not designer drinks And aerials weren't dishes And football songs weren't hip Weren't German football strip And Mitchell wasn't Gamett As Death was not a fool

And Hamburg found the Mersey Sound As much as Liverpool And Klinsmann isn't Haller As Shearer isn't Hurst And Ramsey was as much revered As Venables is cursed

Still hammers at the hun A powdered egg-bound xenophobe Marooned in 41 He hears the grainy wireless Across the sun-parched lawn

But mad old Tommy Tabloid

"4-2, 4-2." He must be true To lion and unicom And younger generations For whom his cant is meant Will dress alike and dance alike With or without consent As sons of Thames or Tyneside The Elbe, Rhine and Spey Will only speak in footballese Upon the field of play.

Martin Newell

hegan n and reens,

ecome

scares

Wever

ll year

broad

for 25

ite ed-initely well-looks look

т очет

; is a es not nakes

nd the hiter.

o Ms

threat

WITE-

d that belief better

if vou

Major fails his 11-plus test

So, John Major has bottled out. There will be no return to the 11-plus. There will be no insistence on a grammar stream in every comprehensive. There will not be a grammar school in every large

The White Paper published vesterday, designed to give a big boost to selection in state schools, reveals that ministers have chosen not to take on local authorities, schools and parents, most of whom oppose selection.

When Tony Crosland began the comprehensive revolution in 1965, he sent out a circular urging local authorities to set up comprehensive schools. Ever since, Conservative governments have been afraid to impose grammar schools on parents.

The Secretary of State for Education, Gillian Shephard, and the Prime Minister have shied away from the "Socialist" solution of a fundamental reform of the school system. They are hoist on the petard of the Conservatives' favourite educational slogan -"parental choice". No-one, they say, will force new grammar schools on parents who want commrehensives.

So, in most places, they will not happen. Every attempt to reintroduce selection in the last decade has foundered on the opposition of middle-class parents, frightened The much-vaunted return of the grammar school is nothing of the kind, says Judith Judd by the prospect of their children being consigned to secondary modern schools. In Solibull and Lincoln and now in Milton Keynes, they have campaigned against selection. Comprehensives in many places work well, particularly if they have enough middle-class pupils. Research shows most parents are the proportion outside grammar schools would be much higher. A Harris poll this spring for the Association of Teachers and Lecturers showed only 47 per cent of the under-45s back a return to selection. For the population as a whole, the figure is 54 per cent. Schools have proved reluctant to to select all their pupils. A further choose 10 per cent of their pupils but 35 of these select for aptitude in music and drama rather than general academic ability.

The Funding Agency for Schools, the quango in charge of grant maintained schools, has

Main points of the Whiter Paper

■ All schools must ask parents each year whether they would like to introduce selection ■ Grant-maintained schools will be able to select up to 50 per cent of their pupils by ability or aptitude

■ Local authority schools can select up to 20 per cent of their pupils

Local authorities must give schools 95 per cent of the total budget available happy with their children's education. A Keele University study of secondary school parents in 1994 showed 87 per cent would recommend the school their child attended. Parents understand what the Prime Minister's promise of a grammar school in every town means: 70 or 80 per cent of children in secondary modern schools, which proved a failure in the Fifties and Sixties. In many towns, select pupils. Grant maintained schools, which the Prime Minister believes will spearhead the move back to grammar schools, have shown no enthusiasm for selection. They already have the right to be-come grammar schools if they get the Secretary of State for Education's permission. Out of 4,500 secondary schools, 644 are grant maintained. Only 14 have introduced even partial selection and just three have chosen

■ Specialist technology and language colleges can select up to 30 per cent of their pupils by ability in their specialist subjects ■ Grant-maintained schools can increase their numbers by up to 50 per cent, open a nursery class, run a sixth form or start a school transport service without special permission poured cold water on the idea that new grammar schools can be created without more money. The agency has cast doubt on parents' enthusiasm for grammar schools. Finally, there are local authorities who decide admissions policies. Ministers have balked at handing over admissions to individual schools. Governing bodies of schools which wish to become grammar schools will have the right of appeal to the Secretary of State for Education if the local authority refuses to back the change. Yet, local authority schools are even less enthusiastic about selection than grant maintained schools.

Full report, page 2

The White Paper's aims are not educational but political. It tries to exploit Labour's opposition to selection and to highlight the decision of Tony Blair and Harriet Harman, the party's health spokeswoman, to send their children to grant maintained and grammar schools. John Major believes nostalgia for grammar schools will play well with voters and his right wing.

There may be some tinkering at the margins. A significant change is the requirement for schools to consult annually with parents on selecting 20 per cent of their pupils. The result will be a patchwork of grammar schools, half-grammar schools, specialist schools and grant maintained schools, with local authority comprehensives still mopping up all the remaining pupils. The politicians call it diversity. Their critics call it a mess. Leading article, page 11

EXHILARATION

CLASSIC M 100-102

Tories' top fundraiser resigns

CHRIS BLACKHURST tminster Correspondent

The Conservatives' head of fund-raising has left the organisation, with the next general ing exercise should be at its election only months away.

At the same time as Jeffery Speed has departed, John Earl, a key member of the election campaigning team who was pilloried in a tabloid newspaper a fortnight ago for his extramarital affair with a fellow Central Office worker, has

A senior party insider said within the party hierarchy - to yesterday the resignation of lose him now is a mystery."

Mr Speed, Director of Fund- . Raising and the Treasurers' Department, was a big surprise in the run-up to the election. when the Tories' cash-generat-

He said Mr Speed, the brother of a senior Tory backbencher, Sir Keith Speed, did not agree with Dr Brian Mawhinney, the combative Conservative Party Chairman. "He did not get on with Dr Mawhinney," the campaigner said. He added: "Jeffery was a very senior civil servant

Another Tory described Mr Speed, who has been awarded diplomacy has not produced a the CBE, as the "ultimate party worker." A Smith Square stalwart, he is credited with having overseen the transformation of the party's finances, almost wiping-out the £15m pendent showed local support-overdraft and building-up a ers are refusing to give cash war chest for the election. Dr Mawhinney announced three months ago that the overdraft of loans.

was down to £2.5m. maintained ties with the constituency associations during a period when grassroots activists became disaffected with the March, they only met 40.3 per resurgence of donations from constituencies, fuelling questions as to where the money is Mr Speed's place is being takreally coming from. Figures en by Tim Cowell OBE. revealed recently in the Inde-money they give is in the form The leaked figures reveal a Mr Speed is said to have growing reluctance among constituency associations to dip into their pockets. In the financial year to the end of

ers are refusing to give cash payments and insisting that any

Office - £1.107m in donations against a target of £2.746m. This total was £33,000 down on the 1994-95 tally of £1.140m.

Mr Earl, whose affair with Caroline Hoy, a Smith Square press officer, was highlighted in a tabloid newspaper a fortnight ago, is also moving job, from Director of the Elections Unit, to replace Mr Cowell.

Mr Earl played an important role in trying to win the recent Hemsworth and Staffordshire South by-elections and the cent of the target set by Central local government elections. As head of the unit, he ran a sixdesign and production of leaflets and posters for the next general election.

Coincidentally, it was Ms Hoy who fielded calls about the management shake-up yester-day. She denied there had been a row between Mr Speed and Dr Mawhinney. Mr Speed, she said, is 59, and "the standard retirement age is now 60. Jeffery is coming to that age and as the party's finances are at such a good level he decided to leave now, to let someone else in."

SIGNIFICANT SHORTS

A judge at Knightshridge Crown Court in London

Nessertiay imposed fines totalling £37,500 following the collapse of a seiting stand during a Pink Floyd concert at Earls Cearts authorized to make the concert in October in fixed: About $4,000 form were affine concert in October 1994, what the stands totaling more than 1,000, collapsed as the stow began.

The vestigs owner Earls Count tid was fined £12,000, the chartest engineer. David McCallum, was fined £12,000, the chartest engineer. David McCallum, was fined £18,000 and Jonatham Smith, a former director of the searing condendor. Assis Promotional Eachlities, fined £7,500 and all authorited breaches of the Health and Safety at Work Act. They were also each ordered to pay £5,000 prosecution costs. Judge Timothy Portius said:— This was an accident waiting to happen.

Eglit people are being questioned over child sex educe allegations as part of a major police inquiry initiated after a teacher gift confided in a teacher. Police initiated after a teenage girl confided in a teacher. Police said five memerant a woman were detained when detectives and social workers raided homes on the north Cornwell coast Vesterday after search warrants were issued under the Protection of Children Act.

The ment, aged between 35 and 53, were arrested on suspicion of taping girls aged between 13 and 15 years. A shift man was later arrested in north Cornwell on suspicion of similar offences and officers from Devon and Cornwell police travelled to Telford last night to interview a severithman who was arrested by Shropshire police.

A church professor who was yesterday acquitted of five Acharges of indecent assault, afterwards described the tengthy trial as "an enormous waste of public money". The Rev Professor Donald Macleod, 55, of the Free Church of Rey Protessor Donald Macreod, 55, or the tree Charch of Sociand, was cleared after a sheriff agreed that he had been the victim of a conspiracy to bring about his downfall.

Gwing his verdict after a 90-minute judgment at Edinburgh Sheriff Court, John Horsburgh QC rejected the evidence of four women who claimed that the professor bad assaulted their between 1985 and 1991. He said he was taking the unusual step of explaining his reasons. because the outcome of the case could have "serious implications" for both the accused and the Free Church.

Douglas Hogg, the embettled Minister of Agriculture, was defended by his junior colleague, Tony Baldry, yesterday in a Commons debate on a motion censuring him for "mishandling" the beef crisis. Replying to a Liberal Democrat charge that 60,000 cows - the latest addition to the cull - would be "wantonly sacrificed, just to save Hogg's bacon", Mr Baldry said his minister had "worked that out" to try and resolve the crisis and secure a fullure for the beef industry.

Speculation on Mr Hogg's future as a Cabinet. minister has been rife in Westminster, but Mr Baldry said he was honourable man who had "remained above personal attacks and mudslinging" Stephen Goodnin.

is proliferation of supermarket "loyalty cards" has given young criminals extra chances to make take credit cards, West Midlands police sald yesterday. Officers claimed that teenagen are reprogramming the cards mag-netic strips with details of real credit cards.

They also said instructions on how to do this are being picked up from the internet, where algorithms are available to generate valid card numbers. A spokesman said frauds worth up to £5,000 per day are being carried out in this way-The Cards are used for telephone and mall order services, and for low-value store purchases which are below the level where a shop would seek authorisation of the holder's credit limit. Chartes Arthur.

Estate agents and building societies would berequired to provide information to house buyers on the likely energy running costs of homes on their books under a Bill to be introduced in the Commons today by Tim-Yeo, a former environment minister. The legislation will not reach the statute book, because of lack of Parliamentary backing the Bill, believe it will fielp to bring forward the day when building societies and estate agents pay more attention to energy costs. Colin Brown

A tiny snail's last stand against the Newbury by-pass collapsed yesterday, when a High Court judge refused to grant a judicial review of government decision-making to a coalition of leading environmental groups. Mr Justice Sedley said there would only have been grounds for a judicial review if ministers had acted irrationally or with improper motives - neither of which were demonstrated. The decision clears the last legal obstacle in the way of the long-delayed, £74m road. Nicholas Schoon

Quanting battles at sea are set to continue off the Scottish coast today, as a Greenpeace ship tries to stop 13 Danish trawlers fishing for sandeels on the Wee Bankie near Edinburgh. Activists, who are demanding an end to the unregulated industrial fishing of the tiny sandeels which are processed into meal and oil, have used a variety of tactics to try to sabotage the fishing, leading to sometimes violent confrontations. Nicholas Schoon

The Government is to act to double the benefit cut of lone parents who fail to co-operate with the Child Support Agency, Andrew Mitchell, a junior social security minister, said last night in a Commons written reply. Legislation is to be introduced to cut by 40 per cent for three years the adult income support allowance of parents with care who fail to co-operate with the CSA without good

Education White Paper: Prime Minister's dream of a grammar school in every town

Parents will choose type of schools

FRAN ABRAMS Education Correspondent

Schools will have to ask parents every year whether they want selection under the Government's new White Paper on schools. Although no school will be forced to go selective, governors will have the right of appeal if a local authority tries to prevent them from doing so. Wherev-er a new school is needed, the funding agency for grant mainsidet whether a new grammar school should be built.

Last night Gillian Shephard. the Secretary of State for Education, stressed that the Prime Minister's dream of seeing a grammar school in every town, expressed in a speech in Birmingham last September, would depend on the wishes of parents

We are not proposing a return to a two-tier system. The point is that we want schools to develop their strengths. In a town you might have a fully selective school or a school with a selective stream together with a specialist college and a comprehensive," she said. Labour's Education spokesman, David Blunkett, able to select 30 per cent and dismissed the proposals as "the local authority schools 20 per However, new por schools had chosen to select by sultation with parents, whether academic ability under the current system, he said. "There is no demand, there is no need and there is no money for this policy of bringing back selection. It has nothing to do with increasing excellence and standards for all and everything to do with the short-term political agenda."

The paper has three main functions: extending selection: giving more freedom to grant maintained schools; and extending a greater proportion of the budget to local authority schools. In future all grant maintained schools will be able if they want to increase their

Archbishop Tenison School in south London. From September, all new pupils will be selected on academic ability their pupils without special permission, specialist technology povernor must decide, in con- povernment to send they might contribute to the choice available locally by sea grant maintained school regardless of how many pupils in the area are already in optedout schools. At present it can only do so where more than 10 per cent already attend them. and how this might be extended through selection. Grant maintained schools will no longer need to seek permission to select up to 50 per cent of numbers by up to 50 per cent, open a nursery class or start a sixth form. They will also be and language colleges will be able to run their own transport

However, new powers are last gasp of a government which cent. Each year, every school's also to be introduced for the squads" into failing grant main-tained schools. If a local authority school fails it can be lecting some pupils. taken over and made to go grant Where a new school is need-maintained, but there is no taken over and made to go grant ed, the Funding Agency For Schools will be able to propose such measure available in opt-ed out schools at the moment.

Powers will also be introduced for the Government to inspect local authorities to see whether they are meeting their Authorities will be forced to

In doing so, it must consider the level of choice in the area increase the amount of money they pass on to schools from 85 per cent to 95 per cent of the total budget. This would increase schools' spending by £90 ical gesture designed to apper pupil, Mrs. Shephard said.

The paper was dismissed by Conservative Party.

local authorities, teachers' organisations and opposition politicians last night as a polit-

Mrs. Shephard understood the strengths of the comprehensive system but had been forced into backing more selection by the Prime Minister,

David Hart, general secretary the National Association of Head Teachers, said the proposals would prevent Britain from meeting its targets for raising educational standards.

"The government is living in Authorities' education com-cloud cuckoo land if it believes that more selection will raise standards for the average and pupils will lead to a rising underclass and to the creation of Sink schools," he said.

Nigel de Gruchy, general secretary of the National Association of School Massociation of School Massociation of Women Teachers

"Opening new schools and expanding existing ones requires money. With a £3bn backlog on repairs and mainsaid: "Allowing comprehensive cent of pupils makes a mockery a single token project.

Privately, Gillian Shephard must be hoping that she will never have to implement any of the zany ideas put forward in the White Paper. However, the local authori-

Photograph: Jane Baker

mixed bag of sense and predictability.

Graham Lane, chair of the mittee, said the renewed role of local authorities in improving schools was welcome, and that below-average ability pupil. increased delegation of spend-Creaming off the most able ing would be accepted. But none of the proposals would solve the education services' untenance, the government knows schools to select up to 20 per it can barely afford to fund even

Good Evans come to the aid of the party

For many years Tory MPs had surnames like Douglas-Home and, Boyd-Carpenter, and their Christian names tended to be Ouintin or Alec. These demotic days - thanks to the déclasse Thatcher era - most of them are called Evans. And between them the Tory Evans family dominated much of the day's proceedings in the House.

The first Evans was Roger (Monmouth), junior social security minister, answering questions from the second Evans, Nigel (Ribble Valley), Roger and Nigel are not obviously related. Nigel is thin and rangy; so much arm, hand and neck protrudes from his clothing that he gives the unsettling impression of being at once naked and fully clothed. Neighbouring MPs have to repress the urge to ask him to be put away. Roger, on the other hand, is squat, buck-toothed and slightly long-haired. Like a greying rabbit he hounces to the despatch box and gives ac-about child benefit for 16- to 18year-olds at school. At least twice a week he finds an opportunity to criticise Gordon Brown's plans to stop paying this benefit as "a new tax". Yesterday he described it as "leaking [sic] off the backs of 16-yearolds ... taxing them for staying on at school".

> TO OUR MEMBERS WE'RE THE 4TH EMERGENCY :

DAVID AARONOVITCH

Now this is odd logic for a Conservative. Our third Evans - David (Welwyn) would presumably have no truck with it. As we know he resents "the taxanybody - especially, he told us ing the anti-fraud campaign, to the despatch box and gives actorly emphasis to every other word (my HONOURABLE friend is ABSOLUTELY right).

Mayord — specially, he toto us the carming approving smiles from the designer-rumpled Jeremy black economy" (probably the friend is ABSOLUTELY right).

Nigel has a bee in his bonnet and "bogus asylum-seekers". This left me confused. Which Evans truly spoke for modern Conservatism? The benefit doling Nigel? The benefit slashing David? Or the AC/DC Roger, who seemed to lean both ways? Not, incidentally, that things were any clearer on the other side of the House. There was the handsome MP for Nottingham South, Alan Simpson (who every week, writes a column in Tribune about how awful a Blair government will be and how it will betray the poor piver" forking out in benefits for and needy) effectively rubbish-

(Lab, Birkenhead) who believes strongly in the need to remoralise the benefit system. With his soft voice, pointy ears and his dapper, slightly fey ap-pearance Mr Field needs only a pair of gossamer wings to be the Tough-But-Tender Fairy.

But let us not digress, for this is not the end of the Evans. David was on the list for Prime Minister's Questions and he made his presence felt. Would the Prime Minister remind those under 35, was it the Conservative Party that had let inflation rise to 29 per cent? "NO" roared the Tories. That raised the top rate of tax to 98 per cent? "NO". That had 176 MPs sponsored by the "Oonians"? "NO". "ORRRRR" lotopsit?!" Of course it was thalotopsit. Thalotopsit sat and enjoyed every moment of Mr Evans rant. "More," they cried. So it is interesting to speculate how different political life would be if the Evanses were to get the promotion their efforts deserve. Suppose that instead of Mr Major answering the ques-tion about the England football team with the immortal Majorism "I hope they play well and have a satisfactory result", it had been David at the despatch box. As rendered into Evans this might have become the rousing, "Ooo won the 1966 World Cup? Us or thalotopsit?"

In which thalotopsit is, of course, the Germans.

THE INDEPENDENT ABROAD

ustraSch40	Miands P5.00	OVERSEAS SUBSCRIPTIONS
elgiumBF:80	Italy L4,500	Ar creat, 13 weeks: Europe £110.79; Zone 1 @Aide
aresiesPts300	Madeira Esc325	East, America, Africa and India) £184.08; Zone 2 (Fe
		East and Australiana) £206.70. To order, please sen
Sermark Dig 18	Norwey Mis/20	cheque payable as Johnstons International Media Senace
tsh Rep45p	Portugal Esc325	Lacto 43 Milherbour, London E14 9TR or Jelephone 0171
		538 B289. CRoft cards welcome.
ermanyDM4.5	Sweden Skr21	BACK ISSUES
≥cece D⊧450	Swizerland . SM4.00	Sack esses of the independent are exclusive from:

3pm Saturday, and you're crying on the hard shoulder.

Get where you're going with the AA. Join now from only £39°.

To join, call free now on 0800 444 999. Ask for Extension 6108. Immediate cover available. Internet: http://www.finea.co.uk/these

SIGNIFICANT SHOP

Why sun tans have a fatal attraction

Skin disease second only to lung cancer

GLENDA COOPER

Mad dogs and Englishmen still go out in the midday sun, despite a greater awareness of the links between skin cancer and sun exposure, according to the British Psychological Society. Psychologists studying why peo-ple take risks said that while Britons knew about the dangers of sunbathing, the belief a tan is attractive and desire to "get their money's worth" of two hot weeks abroad meant that they did not always take the hazards sufficiently seriously.

The situation is not helped by images of tanned models in travel brochures and women's magazines or advertisements such as the current Diet Coke ad where a man on a building site strips to his waist in the sun in front of admiring women. Cases of skin cancer are increasing in the UK and it is now the second most common cancer after lung cancer. More than 40,000 people are diagnosed every year and between 1974 and 1989 the number of new cases reported annually increased by more than 90 per

About 2,000 people die from skin cancer each year, of which 1,500 die from the most serious form, malignant melanoma - the incidence of which is increasing faster than any other kind of cancer in Britain.

A husband and wife team from Exeter University carried out research into people's attitudes towards sun exposure and their behaviour. They compared 132 British beachgoers at the Devon resort of Dawlish Warren with 142 Italians at Viareggio, North

While Britons were more prepared to acknowledge the risk of sun-bathing they were almost twice as likely as Italians to say lying on the beach was their ideal holiday.

"The British are making up for lost time and lost sun." said Richard Eiser, professor of psy-chology at the University of Exeter. "This is a typical northern European experience."

also found in men and women's attitudes to sunbathing, according to a study of 176 British students. Women were more likely than men to acknowledge the health risks, tending to agree with statements such as 'the middle of the day is especially dangerous time to sunbathe' and to say that they would use a sunscreen. However women were also more likely to say they enjoyed sunbathing and felt a tan made them look more healthy. While many may pay lipservice to sun protection, a survey of holidaymakers in Tenerife found that only seven per cent of Britons were wearing high

While visitors to the resort reported greater susceptibility to sunburn they were also more likely than the locals to agree with the statement "The more tanned I am the more attractive I am to others" and the more frequently they visited hot resorts the more likely they were

Those who had also been burned badly in the past, were worringly less careful about safe sun and taking a very optimistic view of their chances of getting skin cancer.

Dr Christine Eiser, reader in health psychology at Exeter said that men of all ages were at risk from skin cancer but particularly those who work outside on building sites or in gardens. Children and young people should also be carefully protected because medical evidence showed that a bad bout of sunburn before the age of 15 led to an increased risk of skin

"There is also the increasing problem of the damage to the ozone layer," said Dr Eiser. "A young person will have a longer period of time exposed to the thinner layer than an old per-

Dr Eiser said that we must not forget that people saw sunbathing as a pleasurable activity. "We need to acknowledge

Taking the rays: From decorous days to skimpy bikinis and even nothing at all. How we have soaked up the sun or dressed carefully to avoid even the slightest rays penetrating clothing the positive and negative," she with a SPF of 7 or higher insaid. "it is not enough to pro-vide information. We need to give advice about dealing with

صكنا من الاعل

According to the Health Edu-38 per cent thought having a suntan was important in 1995 compared with 48 per cent five cheaper.

creased from 33 per cent to 48 per cent between 1990 and

The psychologists called for a whole change of attitude and cation Authority the message is said advertisers should shy beginning to get through. Only away from using tanned models and that efforts should be made to make sunscreens

Government to work with trav- off their bodies, the whole noel companies to promote "healthy holidays".

"I think there is potential for health educators to get alongside holiday companies and start changing attitudes," he "At the moment we have 20-year-olds going for disco-burn on the Costa del Sol. They're years earlier. Using a sunscreen Professor Eiser also urged the waiting to strip down and show tion of package holidays is getting people on to hot beaches.

"We have to work carefully with the holiday industry to provide different kinds of options - travelling, sightseeing, activities - something generally other than lying there and cooking. It is a niche market but it can be built up and more people en-

Hue and cry over pursuit of golden look

In the Seventies, a dark bronze suntan was as essential to a fashionable woman's wardrobe as a cheesecloth maxi dress, shiny lip gloss, or the skimplest of string

That was the decade of the allover tan; the first time women basked in nothing but a layer of baby oil (plain old chip fat was considered an effective suntan lotion in the innocent Seventies) and the tinicst G-string.

The post-war history of the suntan moves hand in hand with that of the bikini, which was named after the atomic bomb that was exploded near Bikini Atoll in 1946. The bikini and radiation are still inexorably linked as millions of women book up their straps in search of the deep tan feel-good factor. But golden hasn't always been the required shade for a fashionable skin. Elizabeth I looked positively alabaster-like compared with modern-day royals like Princess Diana or Sarah Ferguson. But then, you would never have seen Queen Bess sailing off to hotter climes with Walter And while the Victorians loved spas for medicinal reasons, a pale complexion was considered more tasteful and upper crust than the ruddy, sun-kissed cheeks associated with peasant girls or railway navvies. Indeed, well-heeled Victorians, who were the first to really discover travelling overseas for pleasure, would insist on sailing in the shade, port out, starboard home - thought to be the origin of the word posh.

The working people could go burn themselves all they liked in the new resorts of Blackpool and Brighton, but for toffs, parasols, panama hats and the chalky white skin of a Japanese Geisha girl were much more fashionable than a freckled nose.

The French Riviera is to blame for the tan as we know it today. The fast set took to motoring down to Deauville and, by the steaming summer of 1928.

rigeur. It was not until the Sixties. however, that package holidays in Spain became accessible to the masses and the novelty of a Mediterranean suntan was

ast CJ ath

"I have f i natural d is one of

sid afterv

w cnough uestion of 3 remains really low

d been an ner wife,

wenue.

his roas

i m convi

d him, top with cattl uld have

f people

H Sure.

iologist,

from L

r, who car

ination

ıld the inq

no statist

netween

id that as the o

orker in d told t

meat, esp

had grad

a period

urst, he lo

ie unable i fered from ent by, h

ok uncor lied at hi reet, York ked at at trying to CJD can beef that cted with oncerned

rs might

something to be flaunted. By the Seventies, things began to get out of hand. Men and women would use hair lightening products to make their hair look blonde and sun-soaked. Lotions were used to speed up a tan, rather than the sun screens, used nowadays to slow down the process. A deep tan also became the symbol of the downmarket package holiday-maker.

Bo Derek had the sundrenched look to die for, as did Jerry Hall, Rod Stewart and the Bee Gees. Tom Jones has been building on his tan ever since.

Despite all the health scares that dog sun worshippers, people still believe a tan, however light, is fashionable. The all year round tan has become the norm. with people topping up their skin colour between trips abroad with the aid of sunbeds. At The Tanning Shop, which has branches nationwide, over 750,000 customers book in for 2.5 million stand-up sunbed sessions each vear.

Lisa Armstrong, associate editor of Vogue, says: "It's definitely not fashionable to be too welldone. Mahogany is out. It looks very old-fashioned to look stained, like you've spilt beer over yourself." Ms Armstrong is a great fan of fake tan; she does not dispute the fact that a tan makes your teeth look whiter and the whites of your eyes look whiter.

Fake tans have become remarkably sophisticated in the mid-Nineties, with spray-on lotions that react with the skin to tan you the same colour as the sun would. According to Ms Armstrong, "It's not the threat of cancer, but the threat of wrinkles that scares people and that shows how vain we are.

"We're still stuck on the belief that bronzed skin looks better than pallid skin, although if you have perfect skin, there is noth-

Last voyage for Canberra, the Great White Whale of the Falklands

The Great White Whale is preparing for her final voyage after 35 years of service on the waves. She carried a generation of emigrants to Australia: took British soldiers to battle; and hosted honeymooners on cruises around the world.

The owners of the Canberra, as the cruiser is officially known, have decided not to make cost-

she will retire after a last lap around the world in the autumn, than 3m miles of sea. Her fate is not entirely certain, but P&O Cruises, who commissioned the ship nearly four decades ago, are anxious the Canberra should avoid the scrap heap. They are negotiating alternative uses for her when she returns to Southampton for her retirement next spring.

"Canberra is now an elderly lady and although she remains a much loved ship, no vessel can continue indefinitely," said Gwyn Hughes, the managing director. "We very much hope the vessel will not be scrapped. Various organisations have approached us about possible uses for the ship. These include her becoming a floating hotel or

The Canberra, dubbed the Whale by the troops who sailed in her during the Falklands conflict, cost £17m to build. She made her maiden voyage to Australia in 1961, carrying Britons who had saved up £10 a ticket for the promise of a new

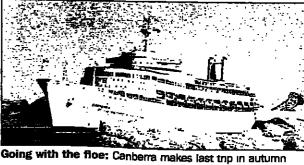

It was a short-lived success, and her career nearly ended prematurely in 1970, when the arrival of the Jumbo Jet opened up the skies for faster travel. Six Jumbos could carry as many a people to Australia in a day as Falklands War in 1982 that she the Canberra could take in three weeks.

She was saved by a resurgence of interest in cruises among elderly couples and newly weds. Rather than scrap the Canberra, P&O refitted her with a casino and transformed into a cruise ship. A timely boost to stirling inspired British holiday makers to book cruises

But it was for her role in the is best remembered, when she was called up as a troop ship, carrying 6,500 soldiers and 3,000 prisoners of war, and a manded her through the conflict, Captain Dennis Scott-Masson, said: "We are all mortal. There has to be a time when she comes to the end of her life. For a ship like that to last for 35 years is quite re-

If you see a mechanic under a

Daihatsu Fourtrak, call an ambulance.

The Daihatsu Fourtrak. Reliable enough to carry a three year unlimited mileage warranty. Dependable enough to be rated Top 4x4 in Top Gear's 1996 Customer Satisfaction Survey. Yet reasonable enough to start at just £14,497 on the road. Great news for everyone except mechanics. For more details call 0800 521 700.

call free on 0800 521 700, or send this coupon to Daihatsu Information Services, FREEPOST 506. Sandwich, Kent CT13 98R

NO NONSENSE VEHICLES FROM JAPAN PRICE CORRECT AT TIME OF GOING TO PRESS INCLUDES VAT, DELIVERY, NUMBER PLATES (AT 1425 INC. VAT) AND SIX MONTHS' ROAD FUND LICENCE AT 177

Boy who won spurs in street market turns to football

Alan Sugar is set to quit Amstrad the company he created 28 years ago. Patrick Tooher reports

Alan Sugar, the former East posed sale. "He's not riding off End barrow boy who became into the sunset," an adviser inone the City's most audacious and wealthicst wheeler-dealers, volvement with Amstrad in a is set to quit Amstrad, the consumer electronics group that he founded 28 years ago.

The man who made his milions flogging cheap and cheerthetically challenged satellite dishes, is on the verge of sell-ing his creation to Psion, the firm best known for its computerised personal organiser, for at least £240m. The deal would net him about £80m.

levote more time to Tottenham Hotspur, the north London football club he controls, and to If there was a market in massprepare for a High Court bat- produced nuclear weapons le with England coach Terry Venables in the autumn.

Last night sources close to sisted. "He'll continue his indeal-making capacity."

But Mr Sugar will not even have a seat on the board.

Amstrad was always his company - the company's name is ful hi-fi systems, cut-price an acronym of Alan Michael personal computers and aes-Sugar Trading. Having left school at 16, he began his business life selling car aerials from the back of a van in his native Hackney, east London.
From the outset, he followed his highly developed instinct to spot a gap in the market to Mr Sugar apparently wants to make a fast buck. Mr Sugar evote more time to Tottenham once said: "We're interested in mass-merchandising anything. we'd market them too."

Amstrad was floated on the stock market in 1980 and quick-Mr Sugar sought to play down ly built up a reputation for exploiting the potential for cheap

Wheeler-dealer: Left, Sugar in 1986 on the crest of Amstrad's wave; right, Sugar

but professional home computers and good-value audio and video equipment. To keep costs down, production was contracted out to the Far East. At first the formula won him many City admirers and by 1988 he was worth an estimated £600m. But by the Nineties, recession and an influx of new competitors had driven computer prices down, leaving Amstrad horribly exposed. The company made its first as rivals such as IBM started to encroach on the market. Amstrad continued to struggle, losing money in the three years to 1994, though a decision to concentrate on mobile phones Amstrad's travails. Five years the public helped make a small profit last year.

Analysts suggested Mr Sug-ar's new-found enthusiasm for football was another reason for For word processor, read Amstrad

...and ten other products that became household name adhesive tape 🧀 personat stereo ractium cleaner

tea-making atarm clock four wheel drive vehicle paper handkerchief Mpoint pen ...

Xerox Kleenex

potential of football has grown.

Perhaps more than any other football club chairman, he realises the potential goldmine in pay-per-view television. He was instrumental in securing an ex-clusive £670m deal with satellite broadcaster BSkyB to transmit live Premier League football into the next century. The deal quadruples the television income of clubs like Spurs to about £10m a year. But ago he teamed up with Terry according to a survey by market research group Harris. While that partner-when digital television is inship ended in acrimony, Mr Sugar's interest in the business years Spurs could earn up £121m a year from viewers paying £10 a game. But perhaps the most im-mediate explanation for Mr Sugar's decision to quit Amstrad is litigation. He is involved in a long-running legal battle with Terry Venables, and is bringing a High Court hearing in Octo-ber claiming he was defamed in Venables' autobiography.

Surprise takeover, page 16,

If we can't get you there underground, we'll try and get you there

We'd like to apologise for any difficulties caused by the industrial action.

And ask our Underground customers to take an alternative route into work, using another form of Public Transport.

overground.

It is also in everyone's interest to try not to bring cars into London. This will enable buses to run more smoothly. No extra parking will be provided and existing parking controls will be strictly enforced.

Perhaps staggering your journey, or travelling off peak, will enable you to arrive at your destination without too much inconvenience.

For up to date travel information, please see BBC Ceefax on page 521, ITV Teletext on page 194 or listen to radio travel bulletins.

Or you can ring Travel Information on 0171 222 1234.

Flood of hate mail horrifies Bonino

SARAH HELM

Theoretically, the arguments over Europe are about sovereignty, economics, and highfalutin matters such as political vetoes or the future of Britain's fishing fleet. But a glance into the bulging postbag of Emma Bonino, the European Union's fisheries commissioner, reveals a reality that is rather more down to earth. Brussels officials are stunned by the extent of the British bile, which they are now seeing more of than ever before. Germans, it is clear, are not the only Europeans who some old-fashioned abuse: it's all here, in abundance. Typical is the letter from Catherine Straker, in Rye: "To Emma Bonino, fishing ... Please go back to your own rotten mafia country and stay there, and stop being a pub-lic nuisance." Or the letter from Mr Hone, from near Grimsby, attaching a "Don't let Europe rule Britannia" sticker to his letter: "Dear Em, From recent reports it sounds as if you have caught BSE. Stop beefing, you silly old moo."

An unprecedented torrent of British bile has been pouring into Ms Bonino's postbag. Previously, "Yours, disgusted" of Tunbridge Wells has shown little inclination to post his thoughts all the way to distant Europe. Evidently, Mrs Bonino upset a lot of people when in May she announced proposals for a 40 per cent cut in the British fishing fleet to try to save Enrope's fish stocks. Mrs Bonino then further annoved the Europhobes when she had the gall to go to Britain and set out the Commission's policy, explaining why it was the British government, not the Commission, which had sold out British fishermen.

But there is more to the torrent of abuse than that. Franz Fischler, the agriculture commissioner, who banned British beef, is not the object of attack. Mrs Bonino is Italian, and Italians are self-evidently dirty and cowardly. And, of course, it is she - not Mr Fischler - who is the "silly old moo" because she is a woman. "Your hygiene is not so high as it is in Britain, judging by reports in the press."

Italy is taking revenge for its defeat in the war, says Richad Swarbrick of Farnham, Surrey, who signs off saying, "regarding your nation and nationals with utmost hate and loathing." Mr Swarbrick has attatched to his letter a drawing of the EU symbol, showing the ring of stars with a skull and cross-bones in the middle.

Mrs Bonino, a hardened human rights campaigner, admits she has been somewhat taken aback by the letters. She intends to reply to each. "I will thank them for their letters of disgust and then try to set out the facts," she says. In some respects the outbursts are positive sign, she argues, because at least Britons are now engaged in the debate directly with Brussels. And she says the letters have belped break down her own stereotyped view of English prejudices. "I always thought the A svelte smart-talking Italian. British were so controlled and

Cycle-friendly councils cash in

CHRISTIAN WOLMAR Transport Correspondent

Sir George Young the Secretary of State for Transport, warned local authorities that they must implement cycle-friendly traffic schemes or face losing grants. Speaking at a conference in London on creating safe routes for schoolchildren to walk or cycle to school, Sir George said that local authorities were recently issued with guidance which specified that they had to consider the needs of cyclists and pedestrians when drawing up grant applications. Grant applications from local authorities which failed to do so meant the authority "would be less likely to get the resources they want for their transport strategy". organisation which is building the national cycle network with £43m of Millennium Commission funding, to also create

"safe routes to school". He said that two local authorities, Warwickshire and Waltham Forest in north-east London have already been given grants to facilitate children cycling to school. The idea behind safe routes to school" is to create cycle routes on the main routes to schools to ensure that pupils can travel to school on their bikes. This would not only be beneficial for children because it is healthy exercise, but will also reduce traffic on the roads. Sir George said that 16 per cent of car journeys during the morning peak are children being accompanied to school. Reducing these journeys would have big impact on pollution and congestion.

While such ideas as safe routes to school used to be put forward only by radical transport planners and were rejected by Sir George told delegates that the Government supported the initiative of Sustrans, the ed the initiative of Sustrans, the the Government, ministers have the conference were from councils keen to carry out the work.

However, one speaker complained to Sir George that restrictive regulations put out by the Department of Transport prevented many schemes from being implemented.

المكناف الاعل

Majority private fi in health a . Dur.

Flood of hate mai

horrifie

Bonino

excle-friends

GPs in crisis: Delegates warn of haemorrhage as recruitment falls

Shortage of doctors a disaster for NHS

Health Editor

The family doctor service - the so called jewel in the crown of the National Health Service - is facing "disaster" as young pro-fessionals reject it as a career and older GPs opt for early retirement, it was claimed yesterday. Doctors leaders warned that inner-city areas, hardest hit by the shortage, private com-panies would seize the oppor-tunity to provide a service which would exclude the poorest and most needy people.

Overall, the NHS is "haemorrhaging" doctors, the profession was told on the second day of the British Medical Association's annual meeting in Brighton, east Sussex. The GP crisis is no longer imminent; it has arrived, the association says.

Dr Ian Bogle, chairman of the BMA's GP committee, urged the Government to take immediate action to increase the number of doctors. "We are facing a disaster ... with the potential for the complete breakdown [of the service] in inner

Dr Ian Banks, a GP from Northern Ireland, said that in east London there were 140 vacancies, and a costly recruitment fair had failed to win a single new GP for the area.

Dr George Rae, a member of the BMA council, said that in Sunderland it was "nigh impossible" to get new GPs, while in the Recibridge and Walthamstow area of north-east London, more than half of the 240 GPs were at or approaching retirement and unlikely to be replaced.

Dr Rae said: "It is an irony of a primary-care led health service, when there are not enough troops to man it."

Nationally more than 50 per cent of GPs training schemes are under-subscribed, with young doctors from other European Union countries - who will not settle here long term increasingly taking their places. The number of GPs in training

Disenchantment with life in general practice is due to an ever-increasing workload. Unsocial hours, low morale, and an increase in complaints triggered by the Patients' Charter are also factors. Between 1985 and 1992, the number of GPs working 60 hours or more a week, more than doubled.

Dr Banks said that the level of newly qualified doctors entering GP training was at its lowest ever, while the number of GPs between 60 and 69 dropped by almost a quarter between 1988 and 1994. "Not only is there not enough water going into the bucket, but there is a hole at one end of it as well," he said. The Government's claims that the number of GP principals have increased by 4.9 per cent did not bear scrutiny, Dr Banks added. The number of full-time GPs actually fell by 700 between 1990-94.

A stress counselling telephone service set up by the BMA in response to demands from members received 800 calls in its first 10 weeks. Complaints about work-related stress were running at levels about four or five times higher than some other professions. The pilot scheme, which cost £250,000 anthat we are coming to the age nually, is to run for a year.

Doctors yesterday turned their nise the reality of underfunding backs on a scheme which allows private investors to pay for National Health Service capital projects such as hospital buildings, and launched themselves on a possible collision course with the Government.

British Medical Association voted by an overwhelming majority to oppose the whole principle of the Private Finance Initiative in health care.

The PFI has become a cornerstone of government health policy. Public capital funding in the NHS has been cut by almost 17 per cent on the basis of money being attracted from the private sector. Six major PFI projects costing £16m have already been given the go-ahead. But doctors fear that the initiative will undermine the NHS and lead to "privatisation by the back door".

At the conference, Dr Sandy Macara, the BMA chairman, attacked the PFI, arguing that hospital trusts were being coerced into accepting private fi-nance deals for short-term gain. He told delegates: "They are being blackmailed into accepting the Private Finance Initiative for one reason and one reason only. That is that the Government is not prepared to recogin the National Health Service "We live in the real world. We know the facts. We will not be cowed by politicians of whatever persuasion running scared or by their media sycophants ... we have to go on from here to decide how to deal with the sad reality of a desperate oted by an overwhelming ma-Government".

Dr John Marks, a council member from the BMA's Barnet and Finchley division in north London, said that not one PFI deal had yet been signed and sealed.

He said: "There is no place for the PFI in a publicly funded health service. The PFI is a continuation of the covert privatisation which started with eye tests, continued through dental care and care of the elderly and is now facing the core of the

Dr Noel Olsen, of Plymouth, wanted to know how much it would cost the NHS to "repay the mortgage" in 20 years time. "If it's just 1 per cent of revenue per year accumulated in 20 years time that's a hell of a percentage of our NHS," he said. The BMA's ruling council will now have to turn the view of its members into policy.

DAILY POEM

Terrible Sonnet

By Eleanor Brown

Tonight, again? Please, not again tonight.
Please close your eyes, for once, when I close mine, soul; do not look for things to talk about.
Please do not argue, scold, discuss, suggest. present the cases, represent the best; particularly, soul, please do not show. And you, my foolish heart, please do not whine. Just regulate your beating to the right and proper level for an eight-hour sleep: believe me, it will comfort you far more than anything from my exhausted store of platitudes. If nothing else, just keep t for another night, and let me see what it is like to sleep. And dreamlessly.

Eleanor Brown was born in 1969 and grew up in Scotland. She read English at York University and in 1993 received a Gregory Award from the Society of Authors. This sonnet to insomnia appears in her debut collection from Bloodaxe, Maiden Speech (£6.95).

Spike rallies to the little people

If you believe in fairies, then clapping your hands is not enough. Spike Milligan, playing fairy godmother instead of Goon, wants you to write a cheque.

He is seeking £100,000 to save the Elfin Oak, a 600-yearold tree carved with fairy figures in Kensington Gardens, central London. Millionaire Paul Getty and pop star Paul McCartney have already signed up.
The little people and anima friends were carved in the oak by Cornish sculptor, Ivor Innes, in 1911 when the tree was in Richmond Park. But since its move to Kersington in 1930, the brightly painted figures have re-peatedly fallen disrepair. In the mid-1960s, Spike Milligan, the writer and humorist, carried out restoration work and in 1985 sculptor Norman Cook undertook a second restoration. Yesterday Mr Milligan returned to the garden to launch the appeal for new repairs and lenance. He said: "In 1964, the Elfin Oak. It was in a wochful state and Laura said. What a pity someone can't mend it c "I set about the task. But that was 30 years ago. Alas the tree is now in a sorry state and needs attention to ensure it: permanent survival.

The tree is in the garden where the writer JM Barrie me the boys who were the inspiral tion for Peter Pan – whose own fairy. Tinkerbell, needed people only to clap to ensure her survival.

CLUB MED OR OASIS. HOW WILL NICOLE DECIDE?

Nícole is in a dilemma. Two stunning models are waiting beneath her balcony - and she has to choose one of them.

It won't be easy. After all, both the Clio Oasis and Clio Club Med special editions share the refined contours of the new style Clio.

Both have tinted glass, a tilt-and-slide sunroof and a stereo radio/cassette with detachable fascia. And both offer a choice of 3 or 5 door versions. What's more, thanks to an all-new

RENADLT

1.2 litre 60 bhp D.I.E.T. engine and a 5-speed gearbox, Nicole will love driving either car. (Thanks to a computer padlock engine immobiliser, no-one else will get the chance.)

Papa is no help. Now he knows both models have front seat belt pretensioners, side impact protection and driver's airbag (optional on the Oasis), he's happy whatever his daughter decides.

They can't be split on value either. Both cost astonishingly little for their equipment levels, with Oasis prices starting at just £7,695 on the road.

No, Nicole will just have to find another way of deciding. Any ideas?

For more information on the Clio Oasis and Clio Club Med, call free on 0800 52 51 50.

TYPICAL EXAMPLE	8.9% APR	£89 deposit*
	O. 370 APR	CLIO CASIS 1.2 3dr	CUO CLUB MED 1.2 3dr
Cash Price inc. on the road costs?		£7,695.00	£8,805.00
Deposit		£89.00	£89.00
Monthly Repayments		£185.71 =48	£212.82 #48
Total Cre	dt Price	£9.103.08	£10,404.36

FROM £89 DEPOSIT & FREE INSURANCE!

mon ing : next had by : Thu ret

OFFICIAL SPONSOR

Defence Correspondent

Tony Blair agreed yesterday stances in which he would order the captain of a Trident submarine to pull the nuclear

I don't think it is ever sensible for a prime minister to forecast those circumstances", the Labour leader said. "I believe in the nuclear deterrent." Asked how he felt about the "awesome" responsibility which, he would carry if he became the next prime minister with Labour committed to keeping Trident, he replied: "I regard it as - awesome."

Introducing his section of the Labour Party's foreign and defence policy document, A Fresh Strategy for Britain, yes-terday, David Clark, the party's defence spokesman, said: "We will retain the British nuclear deterrent. Trident. When satisfied with verified progress towards our goal of a global elimination of nuclear weapons, we will ensure British nuclear weapons are included in such negotiations."

GERMANY.

Meanwhile, Dr Clark said, Labour would continue the present Government's commitment to limit the number of British Trident warheads to 192 - three per missile on four submarines. Labour will also remain committed to Nato, to building up the role of the Western European Union as its European arm, oppose plans to give the European Union a military role, and continue to offer the United Kingdom's services for international peace-

Its most radical proposals related to the reform of the United Nations and increasing its ability to respond to crises quickly, including enlargement of the Security Council - of

ing the UN Secretariat and a many should get a permanent greater role for the UN in seat, he said there was "certainly co-ordinating international economic, environmental and

Robin Cook, the shadow Foreign Secretary, stressed the interdependence of foreign and security policy and foreign aid. We make a big mistake if we imagine that foreign policy is less important to Britain because we are no longer a globpower. It is even more important for our prosperity and security in the modern world that Britain pursues an active foreign policy. If Britain is no longer an imperial power then it is all the more important that we safeguard our security through alliances and main-

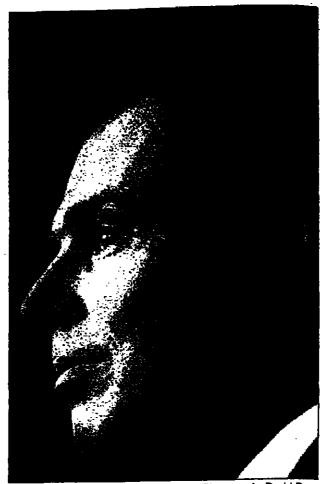

Robin Cook said that "there must be a broadening of the [UN] Security Council to make tain our influence through part-

a respectable case" to be made. but that an additional German seat would increase the existing imbalance in favour of old European powers.

The document repeated Labour's cautious formula that a single European currency "could produce significant benefits", while omitting the Labour leadership's usual qualification that it would require the consent of the British people either in a referendum or a general election.

And, after a fierce internal pattle between Joan Lestor. spokeswoman on development issues, and Gordon Brown, the shadow Chancellor, it contained a promise only to "start to re-verse the decline in UK aid spending", with no timetable. Labour's Strategy for Britain

Tony Blair: Awesome responsibility Photograph: David Rose

Judges up the ante over asylum laws

HEATHER MILLS Home Affairs Correspondent

Asylum seekers left destitute by the Government's controversial benefits crackdown have been uniawfully denied council housing, the Court of Appeal ruled yesterday.

This - the second condemnation in five days of the UK's treatment of those fleeing per-secution - deepens the gulf between the judiciary and the Government and undermines the unprecedented clampdown on would-be refugees. Last week the same court said that Peter Lilley the Social Security Secretary had exceeded his powers when he withdrew all welfare benefits from most asylum seekers, describing the move as "dracoman" and one "no civilised nation" should tolerate. Mr Lilley's response was to announce emergency legislation to overturn the court's ruling rather than appeal. But yesterday's judgement will fuel opposition to the changes being Bill during its third reading in the Loros.

Labour and immigrants' rights groups, with wide support in the Lords, described Mr Lilley's action as an "abuse of process" and "immoral". After uset arder's ruling they called on yesterday's ruling they called on the Government to rethink the plans.

But the Prime Minister yesterday defended the Government's policy towards asylum seekers, telling the Commons: "I believe that it is widely accept-ed that our policy is right. It re-moves benefits from three groups of people: illegal immi-grants, people who enter this country on condition that they said they could support themselves and people who have already been found not to be genuine refugees.

Yesterday's ruling centred on four London local authorities, who, because the Government had withdrawn housing benefit, had withdrawn emergency council housing. But the ruling said that the authorities must treat penniless asylum seekers as in priority need" and not leave them on the streets.

Lord Justice Simon Brown said: "I see no good reason why someone likely to suffer 'injury or detriment' through a total inability to clothe, feed or shelter himself should be any less entitled to priority housing than someone vulnerable through age or disablement."

The court said it had "the greatest sympathy with the difficulties faced by the housing authorities who have limited means to discharge their many responsibilities"

But they had erred in law by construing the provisions of the 1985 Housing Act in such a way rushed through as amendments as wrongly to exclude asylum to the Asylum and Immigration seekers from the category of persons who had a priority need for housing. Chris Holmes, director of Shelter, said the ruling highlighted the "crazy contradictions" in current benefit policy.

"This judgement shows that while one department is slashing benefit and creating a new group of vulnerable people, another department is forced to pick up the tab.

About 8,000 people have been denied benefits since the changes were first introduced last February and refugee charities say many have had to choose be-tween returning to the countries where they feared for their lives or staying in Britain as "beg-gars of the worst kind".

Portillo faces Tory revolt

COLIN BROWN Chief Political Correspondent

More than 60 Tory MPs last night were threatening a rebellion against plans by Michael Portillo, the Secretary of State for Defence, for the £1.5bn sale of armed forces married quarters in an end-of-term revolt. Supporters of John Redwood denied they were behind wood denied they were behind the rebellion to undermine Mr Portillo's support on the right of the party, but the row could do lasting harm to his chances in a Tory leadership contest.

One of the principal organisers of a Commons motion protesting at the sole Julian December 2015 protesting at the sale, Julian Brazier, was a strong supporter of Mr Redwood. It was also signed by David Evans, the Parliamentary aide to Mr Redwood when he was a Cabinet minister.

The purpose of this exercise is to get money for the Treasury. I haven't rebelled often, but I would be prepared to rebel against this," said Mr Brazier.

Tory MPs from both wings of the party signalled their oppo-sition to Mr Portillo's plan. Those signing the Commons motion included Sir Keith Speed, a former defence minister, and senior members of the backbench 1922 Committee.

force a vote on the issue before the Commons goes into summer recess in late July.

We will do everything in our power to defeat the Government and stop this mad scheme going ahead," said David Clark, the Shadow defence secretary.

The Prime Minister appeared to give his firm backing to the sale when it came under fire from Tony Blair in the Com-mons. "The reason this has been pushed through with such indecent haste is nothing to do with the armed forces. It is to do with the Chancellor's need to plug the hole in the nation's fi-nances," said the Labour leader.

It would undermine morale among the armed forces and could damage defence planning. he warned. But the Prime Min-ister said: "He is just wrong about this. Neither has this suddealy arisen. It is a matter which has been under consideration for a number of years to release resources to the Exchequer."

But opponents said the sale of the armed forces houses was rejected by former defence ministers Lord Cranhorne and Jonathan Aitken. It was revived by Mr Portillo in the face of stiff opposition from Lord Bramall, the former chief of the defence staff, the Royal British Legion and Labour was threatening to the Army Families Federation.

KECEIVE SUME

PREPARETO

As one of Euro '96 sponsors, Vauxhall hope that tonight's Semi-Final proves to be a great match. (With England winning by a mile of course).

> VECTRA FROM VAUXHALL

MARIANNE MACDONALD Arts Correspondent

When Jane Austen had the idea for Emma, she observed that she had conceived a heroine whom no-one but herself would much like. But time has proved her wrong: and now gen-erations have fallen in love with Austen's headstrong character, she is about to be reborn.

The updating of Emma - a task bordering on the sacrosanct is being carried out by Rachel Billington, Lord Longford's nov-elist daughter, who is writing a sequel entitled Perfect Happiness.

Judges up the ante on asylum law

As if that were not enough, Andrew Davies, who wrote the BBC adaptation of Pride and Prejudice starring Colin Firth and Jennifer Ehle, is writing a screenplay of Emma to be shown on ITV later this year. This will coincide with a tie-in Penguin edition of the novel and a book, The Making of Emma. Rather like Lizzy Bennet, Emma is one of Austen's most contemporary heroines - spirited, independent, intelligent. Nevertheless, Billington found the task of bringing her story up to date fraught with problems.

Discussions took place over whether to reproduce the style of spelling and punctuation which characterises work of the Regency period and over how much to imbue the sequel with 20th century sensibility.

But the most fundamental problem was plot. Austen's novels are about women in the process of courtship. Emma ends as the heroine agrees to marry the headmasterly Mr Knightley. How would Austen have written about such a married heroine? And, given her negative portrayals of minor characters' marriages such as those of Mr and Mrs Bennet, Mary and Charles Musgrove, or Mr Collins and Charlotte Lucas in Pride and Prejudice, could Mr and Mrs Knightley hope to fare any better?

"I did feel there was going to be problems in the marriage." lington told the Bookseller, referring to Knightley's didactic tendencies. "There's a lot said in Emma about how good he is, and how bad she is - and that's a pretty dicey basis for a

As in the original, Billington's novel revolves around misun-denstandings. Frank Churchill returns to Highbury following the death of his wife, Jane Fairfax, and his relationship with Emma again becomes open to misinterpretation. Emma suspects that he is attracted to the flighty Harriet Martin. Emma is restless and Mr Knightley aloof.

Billington found most inspiration in Austen's letters, which gave her much of the raw material which the novelist herself drew on. But unlike Austen's characters, who tend to oscillate around Bath and Lyme rather than London, Billington takes Emma to the capital.

Jane Austen herself was spending quite a lot of time there, and Emma was dedicated to the Prince Regent, at his invitation. She was taken to what I suppose was Clarence House by his librarian, so it seemed logical to me that Emma in a sequel would have had a wider experience and made and met a different sort of person," she says.

But Billington has not conceded much to what Austen might regard as the coarser tastes of the day when it comes to sex. Austen referred to that activity by the most elaborate indirection, and Billington does her best to follow suit.

"Tve tried to do the same but gone a little further down the road because that seemed right given it is a married couple we're talking about. The book is not a pastiche from the 20th century. I've genuinely tried to feel myself into the story and the

Elinor and Marianne Emma Tennant's sequel to Austen's Serise and Sensibility. In which everything goes hiladously to pot. Col Brandon is packed off to Wales, and Elinor and Marianne prove unequal to fending off their rapacious in-laws and coping with the return of the scoundrel Willoughby.

Emma Tennant again, this time penning the sequel to Austen's Pride and Prejudice. Lizzy cannot conceive, with under criticism, panics in company and flaps about domestic arrangements. Luckily, by means of numerous twists and turns, all's well in the end.

An Unequal Marriage

Emma Tennant once again — her sequel to the sequel of Pride and Prejudice: Taking up the story 17 years after Darcy and Lizzy wed, this tells the story of the next generation: Edward, their son and heir, is a 16 year old Etonian delinquent, while Lizzy and Darcy fall out.

Mrs de Winter

Susan Hill's sequel to Daphne du Maurier's classic novel Rebecca. After spending the war in Switzerland, the de Winters return to England to acquire a new country house, an Elizabethan manor. Unfortunately Mrs Danvers, the housekeeper from hell, returns.

Portillo face Tory revolt

When follow-ups can't be written

Do Winston Smith and Julia look back at 1984 from the council house they bought under the Thatcher legislation. chuckling together about their annus horribilis?

How did the train driver who mowed down Anna Karenina come to terms with his failure to apply the brakes?

These, one sincerely hopes, are among the unwritable sequels. But who knows? If Susan Hill can take the dead housekeeper from Rebecca and write a "prequel" about her child-hood, then few novels are safe from further exploitation. Some writers, though, have anticipated the danger and have made their works as near sequel-proof as is aesthetically

Shakespeare had a prophetic fear of the sequelists, and systematically killed off his most charismatic characters. So we are spared the adulteries and eventual divorce of Romeo and Juliet, and the mellowing of the middle-aged Macbeths, though Tom Stoppard, of course, found scope in two of the minor characters from Hamlet. Dickens has, so far, been avoided by the sequel writers. Unlike the female classic

Brontes, who leave scope in their characters' youthful couplings for unresolved later difficulties. Dickens tended to complete the job. His characters are too emotionally exhausted for sequels. Oliver Twist was never going to run away from home in his teens having gone through rather a lot to find home in the first place.

But there is a wealth of lucrative potential that the sequel writers have failed to spot. Surely there is a budding playwright out there who could speculate in Beckett's sparse but lyrical style what happened when Godot actually turned

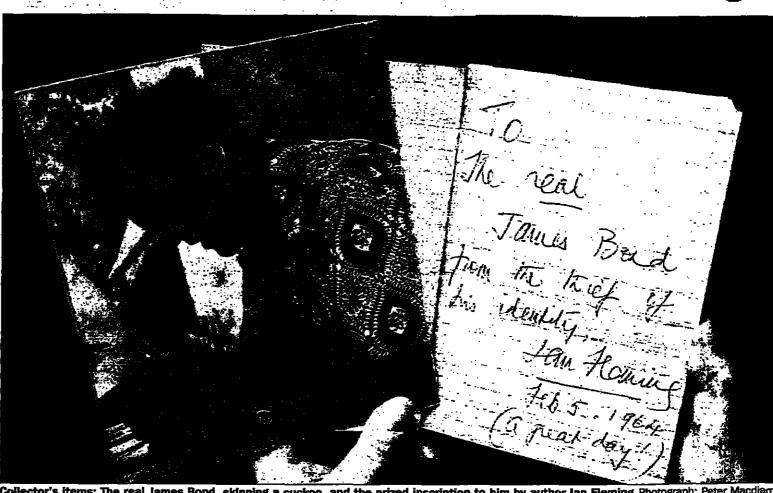

There must be a Joycean who can detail Bloom's morning after, a Bloomsburyite who can agonise about the trip back from the lighthouse, or a student of Pinter willing to take the caretaker on the train to Sidcup to pick up his papers. And then there is the ultimate challenge for Rachel Billington, Susan Hill and the rest. Pastiching Austen and Du Maurier demands skill, but is a safe choice of career. Now.

a sequel to The Satanic Verses ... That demands real stylistic ability. I wonder why no one has

A thank you. . .from the man with the golden pen

عبكنا من الاحل

Collector's items: The real James Bond, skinning a cuckoo, and the prized inscription to him by author lan Fleming Photograph: Peter Macdiarmid

ing's novel You Only Live Twice. which was inscribed by the author to the real James Bond, is expected to fetch up to £8,000 when it is auctioned at Sothe by's in a fortnight. Fleming met the real Bond. an American omithologist, only once, at the former's Jamaican mansion, Goldeneye, and it was on this occasion that Fleming inscribed the novel: "To the real James Bond from the thief of his identity, Ian Fleming. Feb

5 1964. (a great day!)" In 1961 Fleming wrote to Bond's widow, Mary Wickham Bond, whose cosignature graces the book: "I was determined that my secret agent should be as anonymous a personality as possible... it struck me that this et name, brief, unromantic and yet e very masculine, was just what I :e

Though Bond, who cata-logued the birds of Jamaica, was o shy and self-effacing, as his ficional namesake's fame grew he: found himself waved through it customs at the mere mention of gathis name and telephoned in the middle of the night by women whispering, "Is James there?" Serdict the A photograph of lan Flem-torker wing and James Bond at their remarkable meeting will be sold it ural can with the book when it is auctioned on July 11 at Sotheby's ranklin, sale of English Literature and the children

"Will a 14-year-old sociopath bring my company to its knees?"

It can keep you up at night, the thought of some pubescent hacker or, worse, a paid professional, creeping through your company's most valuable information. But if you keep your network sealed tight to avoid the Information Superhighwaymen, you'll miss out on all the opportunities the Internet has to offer.

At IBM, some of our smartest people are working on the problem of information security. One group consists of "ethical hackers" who try to break into your system and reveal the chinks in your armour.

Once we know your vulnerabilities, we erect multilayered firewalls and install the latest IBM AntiVirus protection software from our labs. In the event of a break-in, Emergency Response

Security Teams are standing by around the clock to detect it, contain it and stop it from happening again.

With each day, the world of networked computing offers more opportunities and transformations than ever before. And IBM is committed to helping you get from here to there. Safely.

Stop by www.ibm.com or call 0800 675 675, for our free 16-page booklet on how IBM can help your business thrive over the Internet. We'll also send our brochure on the IBM SecureWay family of products and services.

Solutions for a small planet

"I have i naturaj is one o ose frie ud after uestion

T. If it w

ner wife

Менис.

el'm com ad him, to with car uld have ^[]f people 10logist from I ²y, who ca ination old the in DO Statis between id that as the orker in d told meat. es in enorm a period

ust, he l

beef that cted with oncerned

ig CJD is it can be

Fantasy football wars: Media respond in kind to English jibes but stop short of mentioning the War

"The fatal defect in cows' brains seems to have transferred to the two-legged inhabitants on the island." It was the only rational explanation the Cologne tabloid Express could offer for the outbreak of lunacy among its British equivalents.

"England declares football war on us," screamed the na-tion's leading tabloid, Bild Zeitung, splashing the Daily Mirror's picture of Gazza in helmet on its front page. "Where did they find a helmet big enough?" wondered Andy Kopke, the The moment had come for Germany to fight back, to launch a satirical blitzgrieg against those cocky Englander who had been hurling insults at the German people ever since their cows were relegated from the markets of Europe.

Bild tried the hardest. By yesterday morning, its top guns had come up with "11 Questions to the English" - 11 jibes designed to send Fleet Street's most scurrilous scribes running for their Biros. Here is a small sample: "Why do you wear your swimming costumes in the sauna?" "How can your former colonies beat you at cricket?"

"When did an Englishman last limited to skirmishes in southwin at Wimbledon?"

Biting stuff, this, and there was more. Bild's super-sleuths, no strangers to making up stories themselves, discovered that the "Germany embassy spokesman" quoted by the Mirror as saying that "we surrender", was in fact the embassy porter, and had said no such thing.

Away from the fantasy league, British efforts to undermine morale in the enemy camp may have had the opposite effect. German fans approached Euro 96 with uncharacteristic timidity, and violence so far has been

ern Germany between native thugs and the flower of Croatia's youth. Now the hardcore hoolies who had originally decided to give Wembley a miss may find the lure of gun-powder wafting across the Channel hard to resist. What effect all this has had on the morale of the German players will only become clear tonight, but one suspects that the enemy salvoes might well have stiffened resolve among a team wracked by self doubt so far. Berti Vogts, the manager, en-tered the spirit of the occasion

Kuntz, the striker, struck a more ominous tone. "Let the English enjoy themselves now, because the fun will be all over for them Wednesday evening," he said.

Hun's effort to even the score in the propaganda war. Not even Germany's least sophisticated newspaper dared plunge to depths as low as its British counterparts. Of wars Bild made no mention. Instead of a rousing call to arms, Bild's menacing headlines were merely followed by a lament. The team yesterday by promising not to had played badly against the wave the white flag. Stefan Croats lost General Klinsmann to injury, and, as in the Battle of Britain, England were proving a lot more resilient than egists had anticipated.

Making fun of other nations Alas, that was the limit of the is not really a German thing, and scoring points by evoking past conflicts is deemed distasteful. In Germany, two weeks of football have produced only one pathetic epithet - against the "Pizzas" who held the Germans to a draw in the first round. Jingoism, on the evidence of the two nations' press, is performed with much greater relish and efficiency in England. The vitriol that has been flowing from the pens of British tabloid writers ever since the outbreak of the beef war has therefore been particularly hurtful to Germans. The Bonn office of the Independent, and the bureaux of other British newspapers are rung almost daily by anguished German colleagues seeking an explanation for the latest Fleet Street stunt. "Do the British really hate us so much?" they ask, and "What's all this about the war?" "It's a joke," we assure them.

"Don't you get it?"

although judging by yesterday's evidence, they are beginning to learn. Rather than fanning the flames of nationalism, downmarket papers are giving their readers crash courses on British humour, and trying to explain that all those racist jokes are meant as a harmless bit of fun.

Jokes apart, today's match has great historic significance. "It's a big event," says Michael Reichert, a caterer. "It's taken us 30 years to get the bas-tards." "What about settling tards." scores for another defeat, 51 years ago," I ask. "The war? -Oh, that was too long ago."

Match previews, Sport pull-out, pages 1-4

Peking calls for Bonn's atonement

TERESA POOLE

after by i yesi uor

Until a few weeks ago, Peking viewed its relationship with Germany as a model for China's links with Western countries. But by yesterday Bonn had joined the club of governments around the world ordered by Peking to take unspecified "concrete and effective measures" to atone for alleged misbehaviour.

Since last week's resolution in the German parliament, which condemned China's "policy of repression in Tibet" and called for the protection of Tibetan culture, the two countries have engaged in tit-for-tat diplomatic snubs. China at the weekend damned the resolution as "perverse" and halted a planned visit next month by the German Foreign Minister, Klaus Kinkel. Bonn retaliated by cancelling planned visits to China by the Construction and Environment Ministers, and also froze scheduled meetings between German and Chinese senior military officers.

Mr Kinkel said that the resolution's reference to the Tibetan government-in-exile was not a vote for Tibetan indecontinue to belong to China. There can be no doubt about that," he said, while insisting that the German government "will not let Peking tell us to be quiet about human rights questions or any other matters" But this row between China and its biggest European trading partner has shown that Peking's tolerance for debate is

The row had been rumbling since last month, when China cancelled co-operation with a Chinese cultural festival in Munich after Peking took umbrage at two human rights gatherings. It pressed the Goethe Institute to withdraw support, and refused to give exit visas to Chinese performers. The festival was cancelled.

Then the Friedrich Naumann Foundation was ordered to close its Peking office. Its offence was to host a conference in Germany that was addressed by the Dalai Lama, Tibet's exiled spiritual leader.

During this period Peking pushed behind the scenes for the offenders to cave in to their demands. For China is now supremely confident that the fear of losing business is enough

Return iourney: A woman leaving the Sungei Best refugee camp in Kuala Lumpur on the bus that took Malaysia's last 22 Vietnamese boatpeople than 250,000 Vietnamese landed in Malaysia after fleeing Communist rule in rickety boats when United States troops withdrew in April 1975. The United Nations has said that funding to governments for such camps will be 'drastically curtailed' from 30 June and other countries in South-East Asia are also moving out refugees

Mysteries unravel as mafiosi spill secrets

Rome — It is confession time in Italy. The latest mafioso to turn state's evidence, Calogero Ganci, has owned up to more than 100 violent crimes and shed valuable new light on a se-ries of high-profile killings from General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa in 1982 to Judge Giovanni Falcone a decade later. Meanwhile, a former Red Brigade terrorist called Germano Maccari has come clean after three years of agonising soul-searching and admitted that he was the hitherto shady "fourth man" in the kidnapping and murder of the Christian Democrat leader Aldo Moro in 1978. For the first time, he talked about the intricate planning that went into building the various hide-outs where Moro was hidden during his 55 days in captivity, and gave a de-tailed description of the shooting which finished him off. There are indications, too, that another great Italian mys-tery is edging closer towards elucidation. Last week a London-based mafioso called Francesco Di Carlo was extradited from Britain to Italy to give evidence about the death of Roberto Calvi, the corrupt banker found hanging beneath Blackfriars bridge in London in 1981. The Italian courts have consistently recorded a verdict of suicide but, according to judicial sources, Di Carlo may now be about to confess to

Calvi's murder. It may be that the timing of these admissions is fortuitous but, in a country as contorted and conspiracy-ridden as Italy, that seems unlikely. What links them, if nothing else, is the arrival of a new centre-left gov-ernment – a government made up of parties and interest groups that have been working main left-wing party in power, for years from the opposition benches to combat the Mafia and clear up the mysteries that have plagued the health of Italy's democracy for the past quarter of a century. The prospect of a more authoritative state, guided by a government set to last rather longer than the miserable postwar average of 10 months, will almost certainly have emboldened a man such as Ganci, whose confessions have alien- leonesi clan, which ran Cosa

Italy's new government has gangsters on the run, writes Andrew Gumbel him entirely at the mercy of the state's witness protection ргоегатте.

It has undoubtedly emboldened the magistrates who have been working in virtual isolation to tease out the well-protected secrets behind such mysteries as the shooting down of a civilian

Ganci: His confessions have startled Italy airliner north of Sicily in 1980, or the series of unresolved bombings that began in the Piazza Fontana in Milan as earty as 1968.

"A healthy democracy should not have dark spots muddying its past. A strong government will certainly make it easier to shed light on these events,7 commented Marco Minniti, national co-ordinator for the the PDS.

Since Romano Prodi's government entered office a month ago, the most palpable advance has been in the fight against the Mafia. Apart from Ganci's confessions, police have arrested one of Cosa Nostra's most ruthless killers, Giovanni Brusca, as well as Giovanni Riina, son of the Sicilian Mafia's super-boss turned super-convict, Toto Riina. The feeling is that the Cor-

ated him completely from his Nostra's anti-state terror in the family and friends and have left Eighties and Nineties, is defin-

Eighties and Nineties, is definitively in retreat. In truth, the retreat began in 1992 in the wake of the Falcone killing, which so shocked the nation that it mobilised a massive police and judicial operation to track down the culprits. But the anti-Mafia push suffered a damaging period of thumb-twiddling once Silvio Berlusconi's conservative government came to power in 1994. One of Mr Berlusconi's closest associates, Marcello Dell'Utri, is now under investigation for collusion with the Mafia, as is his party's chief representative in Palermo, Francesco Musotto.

In the political vacuum which preceded April's general elec-tion, the anti-Matia effort virtually ground to a halt. The trial of Giulio Andreotti, Italy's most prominent post-war politician accused of Mafia patronage and murder, hit a brick wall back in January and did not resume until two weeks ago. Now, nearly nine months after Mr Andreotti first appeared in court, the case is at last proceeding at a reasonable pace.

And what of the Mafia's future? Certainly, its "military wing", as prosecutors call the likes of Toto Riina, is breaking up at a spectacular rate. But it would be wrong to assume that the whole organisation is under threat. Illegal trade in drugs and arms is by all accounts booming, especially in Eastern Europe and the former Yugoslavia, and the closed atmosphere of protection rackets and omerta that has characterised southern Italy for so long shows no sign of lifting.

"It wouldn't be the first time that the Mafia had hidden itself in its own territory," said the chief prosecutor of Palermo, Gian Carlo Caselli, this week. "Going underground might put an end to the terrorist wave and the series of illustrious corpses, but only to lower the guard of the state authorities."

In other words, the real war against the Mafia, the war for the hearts and minds of Sicilian society as a whole, is far from

Red tape ploy could save UN chief

DAVID USBORNE New York

Boutros Boutros-Ghali, whose hopes for a second term as Secretary-General of the United Nations have been all but crushed by the threat of an American veto, could yet be saved by a procedural precedent that was engineered – and herein lies the potential for rare irony - by Washington itself.

The scenario, if it were played out, it could render extraordinary damage to the UN at a time when it is already in frail health. But as Mr Boutros-Ghalí tours world capitals looking for support to defy the United States - he is currently in London - it is increasingly being discussed in the corridors of UN headquarters in New York.

What diplomats are pondering is the possibility of replay of events in 1950 when the Soviet Union resolutely opposed the re-election for a second term of the UN's first Secretary-General, Trygve Lie, because of his stand against the Communist invasion of South Korea. The Security Council, which under the UN Charter must recommend a Secretary-General to the full General Assembly, became deadlocked after Moscow blocked Mr Lie with a veto.

What followed was on the urging of Washington, even vention of the Charter. In a rushed vote, the General Assembly approved the re-appointment of the Norwegian by a large majority. Mr Lie resumed his duties in January 1951. Moscow and the Communist governments refused to recognise him, however, and he resigned in 1953.

Mr Boutros-Ghali, who met the Prime Minister, John Major, last night before holding talks this morning with the Foreign Secretary, Malcolm Rifkind, appears determined to thwart the American decision to oust him. With little chance of Washington changing its mind, the Trygve Lie formula appears to be his only route to salvation.

"He might just try and do it,"
one ambassador to the UN privately conceded yesterday. "But he must know that a fight like that could cause the most appailing damage to the institution."

Indeed, the diplomatic fallout from such a manoeuvre would seem almost inconceivable. It could lead to an American boycott of the sitting Secretary-General of the UN which, in turn, would virtually guarantee a complete shut-off of further US funding for the or-ganisation. "You must remem-ber that 1950 was a different era," the ambassador said. Economic considerations aside, however, there is a deep well of anti-American sentiment in the UN, particularly among developing countries, that makes re-enacting the 1950 script more believable. There is outrage over the perceived ar-rogance of Washington in seeking to block Mr Boutros-Ghali at a time when the US is mostly responsible for the UN's parlous financial state. Nor is it forgotten that it was Washington that orchestrated the precedent that prolonged Trygve Lie's tenure. Mr Boutros-Ghali, meanwhile, is giving the impression of striving to amass support on his side. He was endorsed for a second term by last week's Arab summit in Cairo and is expected to be given a warm reception at the summit of the Organisation of African Unity in Cameroon next month. France has expressed surprise at Washington's antipathy towards him. So far the British Government has declined to take a stance but few expect that it will attempt to stand in President Bill Clinton's way.

صكدًا من الاعل

Save

P. 22. C. 14

1111115

A COLUMN S. C. ST.

international 1ev

SIGNIFICANT SHORT

THE INDEPENDENT - WEDNESDAY 26 JUNE 1996

Botswana's army chief defended the purchase of tanks and combat aircraft vesterday, saying the country had a right to decide its military needs for itself.

Lieutenant- General Ian Khama made the remarks after criticism from neighbouring Namibia over Botswapa's pur-chase of 13 SF-5 fighter-bombers from Canada and its attempts to buy 50 German-made Leopard tanks and other weaponry from the Netherlands. A Botsward military source who did not want to be identified and the deal with the Dutch was worth about $15m (£10m). Canada has said the aircraft are worth $20m. the aircraft are worth $50m. "We are the ones to say what is and what is not necessary for Botowana." General Khama said. "We were made attractive offers that we could

General Khama added that the parchases had nothing to do with a long-standing border dispute with Nambia, which the two countries have taken to the World Court in The Hague. Gaborone - Reuter

A berbal medicine may have killed the virus that caus-es Aids in one patient, cured paralysis in another and made some patients well enough to return home, doctors in China said yesterday.

But they said it was too early to proclaim the drug

Saidefu - a cure for Acquired liminine Deficiency Syn drome because it had only undergone clinical trials for three months. We have tested five patients, aild found an Aids serum antigen turn to negative from positive in one patient. Shao Yiming, a researcher at the China Academy of Preventive Medicine, said in a telephone interview. This is only an initial result and does not mean that the medicine is effective because the trial treatment was too short and medical samples too-few." he said. Peking -Reuter

Greece's Prime Minister faces strong opposition in Ghis push to control the ruling Socialist party after the death of the party's founder, Andreas Papandroon.

The Pasok party will start a congress tomogrow to elect Papandreou's replacement as the party leader and Costas Simits is running neck and neck with the Interior Minister Akis Isohatzopoulos. "Simitis may be the logical choice but an increasing number of delegants feel that he can't be both Prime Minister and Pasok president," a senior Pasok official said. Athens - Reuter :

The head of the OSCE said Bosnia's elections would take place on 14 September. The chamman of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe, the Swiss Foreign Minister, Flavio Cotti, said he was giving the go ahead for the polls to take place in line with the timetable set out in the Dayton peace accord.

Meanwhile, in the first clear sign that Radovan Karactic plans to step down, one of his top aides said the Bosnian. Serb leader was ready to "sacrifice his power," in the interest of his people. Mr Karadzic has defied international. pressure to give up his leadership post. Vienna - Reuter

he widow of the slain Chechen rebel leader, Dzhokhar Dudayev, is likely to seek asylum in Finland, a newspaper reported yesterday. According to the daily fluide-hil, a family friend said Alla Dudayeva is in hiding in another country. She fled Moscow this month together with her 13-year-old son. Ms Dudayeva's late Insband led the republic's drive to secode from Russia. Historia - AP

Slovenia moved closer fowards winning membership of the European Union yesterday after the foring:
Yugoslav republic gained associate membership of the Paris EU's fledgling defence wing. Slovenin becomes the 19th associate partner of the Western European Union (WEI)

The percentage of Latin Americans living in absolute poverty continues to increase in spite of the improved: overall economic performance in that region, a World B analyst said. "Latin America stands out as a region whereabsolute poverty doesn't show any sign of improvement," said Shahid Javed Burki, the bank's vice president for Latin America. Mr Burle said the percentage of Latin Americans living in absolute poverty increased from 22 per cent in 1987 to 23.5 per cent in 1993. Washington - AP

The trial of five men accused of the 1992 number of three Kurdish opposition leaders in Berlin took a surprise twist yesterday when Tehran said it would allow witesses living in Iran to testify at the German embassy there: Defence lawyers had been trying for a year to get Iran to allow the witnesses to testify but prosecutors were sceptical about Tehran's decision, believing it could be a ploy to influence the trial. The high-profile case has put a considerable strain on German-Trainan relations. Bette Reuter

Afghanistan's President has asked the cabinet to Aresign today to allow one of his main foes to form an interim peace seeking ministerial team, a presidential spokesman said. Aziz Morad also said Burhanuddin Rabbani had asked some ministers to stay in office as caretakers for the transitional period for a couple of days. Mr. Rabbani said Hezb-i-Islami chief Gulbuddin Hekmatyar was due in Kabul today to resume his post as prime mins ter, ending a two and a half year armed revolt. Kabul -

The editor of a Rome newspaper has been indicted on charges of abetting prostitution, for carrying classi-fied advertisements for sexual services.

In a front-page commentary yesterday, Giovanni Montola of Il Tempo said it was "rather odd if not worrisome" to be the first editor prosecuted for a crime "committed daily by every other editor." Many newspapers carry aimilar classi-fied while television stations broadcast advertisements from telephone sex lines. He could face two-ind-a-half years imprisonment if convicted. Rome - AP

BY THE HIMELING 30

I'M COING TO BE A

MILLIONAIRE

Open wide: Tourists enjoy the view from the jaws of the mythical Mertion in Singapore yesterday. The 37m-tall recreation of a creature combining a mermaid and a lion opened last month Photograph: Jonathan Drake/Reuters

BRADLEY PERRETT

Canberra — An Australian politician with Aids said yesterday he wants an assisted death, but the government is considering quashing the world's first cuthanasia law which would allow it.

"I hope that I can hold out my arm ... one day and have a little needle which takes me off quietly and peacefully after I've said my farewells," Paul O'Grady, who retired from New South Wales' state parliament in January, said on tele-vision. "That's how I'd like to

But the Prime Minister, John Howard, told federal government politicians that Canberra might use its constitutional pow-er to quash a Northern Territosuicides when it comes into effect on Monday.

Mr O'Grady, 35, became a national celebrity in 1990 when he freely discussed his homosexuality in the media. The publicity did no obvious harm to him or the Labor Party, and the influential left-wing member of the party was re-elected in 1995.

Although the euthanasia law comes into effect on Monday, doctors and churches have challenged it in the territory's Supreme Court. Even if the challenge fails, the law's seven-day "cooling-off" period on requests for assisted suicides means the first legal suicide cannot happen until at least a week later.

Mr Howard said the government would seek to have the case moved to the country's highest tri-bunal, the High Court. But the ry law that will legalise assisted territory, unlike Australia's six

*BYTHETIME LY 40

- MILLIONAIRE

PM GOING TO BE A

Linden House, Chart Way, Horsbarn, West Sussex RH12 1BR

Please arrange for a Sun Alliance pensions

Please put me in touch with an Independent Financial Adviser

Please send me a free video and specialist to contact me

further information

states, is a constitutional subsidiary of the federal government, so Canberra can simply override its laws without resorting to a

Under the law, passed in February, doctors may administer lethal injections to terminally ill patients who want to end their lives. Opponents had argued that that the territory's capital, would become Darwin, Australia's death capital. An opinion poll last year showed more than 70 per cent of Australians backed legal euthanasia, but doctors fighting the law say it has the support of only 20 per cent of the territory's 400 doctors.

STILL WAITING"

BECAUSE LIFE'S LIKE THAT, CALL THE SUN ALLIANCE

PENSION

HOTLINE

Bam-8pm Mon to Fri & 9am-1pm Sat /www.sunalliance.co.uk/sunalliance/ Or just complete the coupon below:

"BY THE TIME I'M 50

I'M GOING TO BE A

MILLIONAIRE"

Whatever the future holds, at least you can have the security of a Sun Alliance flexible pension plan. You can stop or start, increase or decrease payments without fuss or penalties. So, however your lifestyle alters, your Sun Alliance pension always works for you. For information and a free video

call Sun Alliance on 0800 300 810

SUNALLIANCE My Life and Pensions Adviser is orded. The value of units can go down as well as up. In the case of plans invested in the unitied with-profits fund, the nominal value of units may be adjusted up or down to take account of invest.

1 of N. 1889-1919. See Alliance Pensions Ltd No50603, are regulated by the Personal Investment Authority. These companies are members of the Sun Alliance Life Marketing Group and are regulated.

Lebed sees off another 7 generals

PHIL REEVES

Fresh from flushing out a cluster of hardliners from his innermost circle, Boris Yeltsin yesterday pressed on with his campaign to win last-minute votes in next week's presidnential election run-off by firing seven army generals.

Among those to get their marching orders in what has be-come one of Russia's biggest recent shake-ups in national security were four officers accused by Mr Yeltsin's new right-hand man, Alexander Lebed, of trying to organise resistance to last week's dismissal of the Defence Minister,

General Pavel Grachev.

The move is another example of General Lebed's sweeping powers in his new job as secretary of the policy-making Security Council and national security adviser - posts which Mr Yeltsin handed him in the hope of winning over a large slice of his nearly 11 million voters in the election's first round. Although Mr Yeltsin did the firing, there is little doubt that it was at the burly former paratrooper's behest.

Yesterday, Mr Yeltsin un-derscored his protégé's new powers in his annual address to the Federal Assembly in which he emphasised that he had conferred all responsibility for national security policy on the Security Council and had instructed General Lebed "to co-ordinate, prepare, pass and implement day-to-day decisions concerning national security".

Although the council held defence minister.

Among those ident appears anxious to spell out General Lebed's sweeping authority - a move which will alarm those critics of the Kremlin who fear that its newest arrival is being given far too much power.

Mr Yeltsin's strategy is most-ly about winning votes for next Wednesday's run-off in the presidential race against the Communist leader, Gennady Zyuganov. But it may also be an attempt to show he is moving to bring the 4-million-strong military and security services under one overall control, a policy that parts of the military have long called for. A notable advocate of this view is General Igor Rodionov, General Lebed's preferred candidate as the next erdict that vorker wit

iurai caus

anklin, 53

full fitness ck in only se of Creu

. I have fo

a natural d is one of lose friend

tid afterw

w enough:

juestion of

) remains (

we it was a id been an

that was it

mer wife, (

Avenue, 3

his roast

I'm convir d him, tog

with cattle

uid have t

if people v ni sure."

rologist.

from Le

y, who can unation

old the inqu usual for triant, he s

between :

ı an abattı

id that !

as the or orker in :

meat, esp

a period o

ie unable t

Tered from rent by, h

юк ивсов

lied at hi

reet, York

ved in the

inister of Defence. At the moment, General Lebed seems to be riding high, getting what he asks for. Mr Yellsin even obliged him yes-terday by booting out two offi-cials from the Security Council. His list of scalps - and, now, powerful enemies - already inchides four top Kremlin hawks: General Grachev: General Alexander Korzhakov, the head of the presidential guard. : the chief of the Federal Security Service, General Mikhail Barsukov and Oleg Soskovets, a First Deputy Prime Minister.

Now the general can claim that he has almost fulfilled his goal of getting rid of the officers whom he accused of trying to resist the firing of General Grachev, his arch-enemy.

Although General Lebed has watered down his claim that they were trying to cook up a coup d'état by trying to persuade General Grachev to place the army on red alert, he was clearly determined to see them go. Their departure marks a clearout of Grachev loyalists.All eyes are now on the next

Among those tipped are General Rodionov, head of the General Staff Academy; General Vyacheslav Tikhomirov, commander of Russian forces in Chechnya and the armed forces chief military expert, General Konstantin Kobets.

"I'M 60 AND trying to CJD can beef that cted with oncerned ng CJD is equires a it can be

Netanyahu not ready to bow to US pressure

PATRICK COCKBURN

Warren Christopher, the American Secretary of State, yesterday held his first talks with Binyamin Netanyahu, the newly elected Israeli prime minister. in an attempt to salvage the peace accords between Israel and the Palestinians and to continue negotiations with Syria. The United States also wants to smooth over its differences with Mr Netanyahu following its overt support for Shimon Peres, his opponent in last month's election. Mr Christopher announced that Mr Netanyahu will visit President Bill Clinton in Washington on 9 July.

Even as Mr Christopher's aircraft landed yesterday morning the prime minister's office curtly announced that "there is no intention to present any [Israeli] positions to Secretary of State Christopher during his visit". It added that it was the American administration which requested the meeting with Mr Netanyahu.

Underlining that his government would not be pressured by the US, Mr Netanyahu said later that his policy of "peace with security" had won a solid mandate in the election. He said that he was willing to resume talks with the Palestinians and Arab states without preconditions, though he has spelt out Israel's determination to concede nothing on the Golan issue, Jerusalem or a Palestinian state. On his flight from Washington Mr Christopher said the US to make a precise recommendation about how he goes about it." Asked about this, Mr Netanyahu repeated his position that he might meet Mr Arafat if it was necessary for Israeli security.

Mr Christopher gave no hint of distress during a joint press conference, but the election of Mr Netanyahu, who has

Netanyahu: Willing to resume edged not to give back the Golan Heights to Syria, has meant that his almost ceaseless shuttle diplomacy between Damascus and Jerusalem has counted for nothing. Syria has made clear that without the return of the Golan, captured by Israel in 1967, there can be no peace agreement.

The frustration of his hopes for Middle East peace may also ensure that Mr Christopher will not be tempted to prolong leader, adding: "I am not going and Damascus more than 20 times each in the last four years and Latin America only once. One of the passengers on his air-craft said yesterday that "When we take off from Shannon after refuelling on our way from Washington even the birds don't bother to look up any more.'

The US also wants to keep the accords between Israel and the Palestinians on track by seeking an early Israeli withdrawal from Hebron. Mr Netanyahu said he was still studying this. In keeping with his style during his first days in power, Mr Netanyahu played his cards close to his chest refusing to be drawn on whether he accepts the formula of "land for peace", which Arab states insisted at their weekend summit was the only basis for peace talks.

Mr Christopher flies to Cairo today to meet President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and Mr Arafat. The US is expected to press Israel to make economic concessions to the Palestinians whose standard of living has fallen sharply because workers and goods cannot leave Gaza and the West Bank Palestinian per capita income has fallen 20 per cent in the last year.

When Mr Netanyahu visits Washington he is likely to receive the same embrace as Mr Peres from President Clinton. However, the White House is nervous that its Middle East policy might be seen as unravelling later in the year if Israeli troops enter Palestinian enclaves or the conflict between Israel and

Talks on Nigeria reach stalemate

JOHN LICHFIELD

The first negotiations between Nigeria and the Commonwealth since the execution of the political rights activist Ken Saro-Wiwn seemed to be running into the sand last night.

On the second day of the talks in London, a Nigerian delegation was said to have again rejected the Commonwealth's request to send a high-level mission to the country to examine human rights abuses. Despite the release of seven political detainces in Nigeria and the "friendly" atmosphere at the talks, the Nigerian Foreign Minister, Tom Ikimi, was said to have adopted a hard line. Nigeria was suspended from the Commonwealth after the execution of Mr Saro-Wiwa and eight other minority activists last November. Mr Ikimi suggested a four-step settlement, including the reinstatement of Nigeria in return for a three-year "transition" from military rule. But this was dismissed by Commonwealth officials as inadequate.

"It was all pretty thin. I don t think the Nigerians realised what was expected from them or how upset the rest of the world is with them," said one official involved in talks between the Nigerians and an eight-nation Common-wealth Ministerial Action Group (CMAG). "If this doesn't get sorted out, there is a chance that we will go our way and they will go theirs. Things do not look stunningly good at the moment," the official said.

The Nigerian military regime first refused to admit a CMAG mission earlier this year. The group recommended a series of sanctions, including a ban on arms sales, but these were held in abeyance to give Nigeria time to come to London to negotiate.

Mr Ikimi's plan called for the suspension of his country to be lifted immediately, and that all sanctions be abandoned. In return there would be a "high-level dialogue" and a three-year transition to democracy, funded by the Commonwealth

"I don't think they're going to get what they want. A lot will depend on a CMAG mission being allowed into Nigeria in the future," one Commonwealth official said.

Insurance cover is comprehensive and low cost.

Discounts for home security.

Free pen with

For your free no

below. We will be your quotation.

Call us today!

obligation quote simply

call us on the number pleased to answer any questions you have on

SAGA Home Insurance.

0800

414 525

Smugglers' paradise in a rocky gateway to the Third World

My Spanish friend Antonia and invaded from the south. Six I drove from Europe to Africa the other day and were back by lunchtime. Melilla, Spain's possession in Morocco that is about the size of Richmond Park, is a casual European-Union gateway into the Third World.

The last trench in the ancient Iberian stand-off between Moors and Christians, Melilla has been Spanish since 1497, when the conquistador Don Pedro de Estopinan and 500 men seized the rocky outcrop, built a huge fortress and then extended the city boundaries to the range of a cannon-shot.

As the Moors had been expelled from the peninsula only five years earlier, Spain established a string of fortresses along the Moroccan coast to ensure it would never again be

Spanish specks remain, but Melilla and Ceuta are the only ones anyone has heard of.

It may be a Spanish city flying the starred blue flag of Europe, but when you arrive on the domestic flight from Madrid lands at Melilla airport, it is the assails your nostrils.

early 1900s by the Catalan, Enrique Nieto, a disciple of Gaudi - to the border town of Beni-Enzar ("son of a Christian"). The journey took 10 minutes, during which the torpor of a blistering morning gave way to the hectic bustle of traders on Men, women in gigantic flowing jellabahs and children walked purposefully, laden with enormous burdens. A mule, its eyes protected from the desert baked earth of Africa that sun by folded cardboard popped over its ears, pulled a Antonia and I jumped into trap, creaking under the weight her car and bowled along hand- of a refrigerator. Similar bursome Art Deco boulevards - dens wobbled on bicycles and on laid out with palm trees in the backs that were bent double.

Moroccans lined up outside shops along the frontier road, buying clothes, crates of soft drinks, biscuits, kitchenware and nappies. "All these goods come by boat from mainland Spain, but only about 20 per cent stay in Melilla," Antonia said. "That French company that makes cheap glassware selis more to Melilla than to Madrid and Barcelona put together. Only 65,000 people live here, but the whole of Africa is the market.

"Contraband," she adds." spiked-metal platforms lie parched hills. But Antonia spots ready to be dragged across the nath of any transgressing vehicle. but human traffic passes without hindrance. Moroccans from the surrounding Rif area, the country's poorest, can come and go freely so long as they are home by evening.

There are frowns at the unexpected appearance of a European, but northern the wooden border post to an official who is invisible behind a dusty window. "I know him," she explains. She takes my passport and returns within min bearing two flimsy forms - exit and re-entry visas - fluttering in her fingers. Once across, I am transfixed by the squat, pastel-washed At the border, fearsome houses that dot Morocco's something else. "Look, the Guguru is on fire." Flames rip the mountain top ahead of us. "This happened last year and the Moroccan authorities called on Melillan firefighters and police for help, because they don't have enough water. The smugglers had a wonderful night with no one watching the

A mile on, police check the course, so took a cola and a dish taxis for contraband. But the of mint-and-almond pastries at passengers with their burdens' the five-star hotel. have already disembarked. The The road back north runs empty taxis drive on and wait for siloneside the abandoned "ose their passengers to rejoin them." railway" that used to bring from near passengers to rejoin them. railway" that used to bring from At Nador, we plunged into from the Rif to Melilla's port-

the soul, through alleyways of side, We stopped at the beach, up-ended sheep's heads, wind-where Muslims, Christians, pipe and horns that curled up to meet us, past conical hears of spices, fruit and vegetables arranged geometrically, carrot by carrot, fig by fig, to what Antonia called "El Corte Ingles", after Spain's biggest store.
In the stalls of jeans, trainers, women's suits and men's shirts. the labels said "Made in Spain" and the prices were knockdown. If I inadvertently jostled someone, they apologised profusely in fractured German. We couldn't enter a café, of Jews, Hindus and Gypsies lolled and strolled together. The picture of racial harmony was jarred only by the burnt remnants of a union flag, testi-mony to Spanish disappointment over a Wembley football match the day before. Finally we stepped into the cool Spanish home of Antonia's mother for lunch. She had prepared her speciality: couscous, followed by mint tea.

Elizabeth Nash

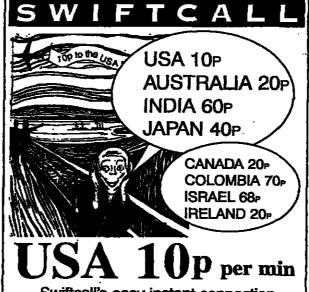

Find out what you can borrow, BEFORE hunting. The call is free, the quote is free, so why not ring TSB PhoneBank for more information quoting reference IH3.

0500758000

Mortgages

Calls to PhoneBank may be recorded and monitored. A TSB cheque account is required. Assignment/ass by the Bank as security. Applicants must be eged 18 or over All loans subject to status. Not available in the Chennel Islands. Writ stable on request by colling 0500 758 000. TSB Bank pic and TSB Bank Scotland pic (regulated by IMRO and SFA) ere repres Marketing Group which is regulated by the Personal Investment Authority only for TSB life insurance, pensions, unit trusts and offer ments of that Group, TSS Bank plc, Victoria House, Victoria Square, Birm Wales. Number: 1089268. TSB Bank Scotland plc, Henry Duncan House, 120 George Street, Edinburgh EH2 4LH. Registered in Scotland. Number: 95237.

> YOUR HOME IS AT RISK IF YOU DO NOT KEEP UP REPAYMENTS ON A MORTGAGE OR OTHER LOAN SECURED ON IT

Swiftcall's easy instant connection

From home, office, hotel, and public pay phone even from your mobile

Call now 0800 279 0800

(outside UK +44 171 488 2001) OUR LIVE OPERATORS ARE STANDING BY

24 HOURS A DAY 7 DAYS A WEEK Absolutely no hidden charges AUSTRALIA

ree access to exchange •All inclusive prices •And the best rates on 100's more countries

CANADA

IRELAND

€£25 buys you over 4 hours of talk time to the USA Please have your Credit Card reads THE TAX PROPERTY

New prices available from 24th July 1996

Renewing your home insurance in June or July?

If you're 50 or over, just see how much you could save with Saga - call us NOW!

You will know how expensive home insurance can be - thankfully, if you're aged 50 or over you can benefit from SAGA Home Insurance - a superior household insurance that's only available to mature, responsible people like

SAGA Home Insurance can offer you genuine savings over other policies, while giving you cover that fully protects your home and posessions.

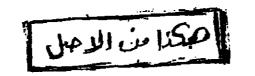

The Saga Price Promise If you find another comparable policy at a lower price within 2 months of taking out SAGA Home Insurance, we'll refund you the difference.

Square, Folkestone CT20 1A2

ext.3464 rices Ltd would like to send you information about

MOTOR INSURANCE

jey and the aral decline

16 ion $3

as C. at

erdiet t vorker tural ca

today. anklin

tull ritn

ck in o se of C , a Yor

oner : "I hav a natura

is one auses." lose fri

uestion

>remail really had been :

er. If it v that was

mer wife

Avenue.

his roa

I'm con

d him, t

with ca

uld have

if people

rologist

from y, who c

ination

old the ir from Cl

'usual fo

iriant, he such a no stati between id that as the orker in d told

meat, e

и епопт

bad gra

a period irst, he is sense

je unable fered in rent by,

ok unco

iied at 1

rect, You

ked at :

hs in 19

ved in the

trying of beef the reted wit

oncerne

rs migh evelopin

ig CJD is it can be

the leader page

A playground punch-up that misses the point argument is hopelessly flawed. Astute aspiring voters will be as aware as any one else that while grammar schools argument is not primarily lack of diversity, lack aspiring voters will be as aware as any one else that while grammar schools argument is not primarily lack of diversity, lack aspiring voters will be as aware as any one else that while grammar schools argument is not primarily lack of diversity, lack of parental choice, though all those things are important. It is our complete inabiliary than the complete the Conservative media heralded the arrival of the Government's White Paper on selection in schools yesterday. "Selection at last," enthused the editorial in the Daily Telegraph. What nonsense - the headline that is, not the Government's new proposals. Because this is barely selection at all.

Mrs Shephard's White Paper isn't nonsense. It's just pointless. The very limited increase in selection it proposes will make no difference to most school children. A tweak at grant-maintained schools here and a tug at local authority schools there do not add up to legions of new grammars, or a whole stratification of bands and streams throughout the land.

Schools will only increase selection if parents want it. If past record is anything to go by, most parents, teachers and governors in the state sector will see fit to keep their schools comprepensive. Most parents are well aware that bringing back selection risks stopping their own precious 10-year-old getting into the school they want.

So why is everyone babbling about grammar schools? Politics, of course. John Major has a vision of a grammar school for every town, yet his proposals fall far short of that. Even Gillian Shephard, that long-time advocate of comprehensives, has been reciting the political. Mr Major and his advisers think there are votes to be won in selection, and in the rhetoric of returning to grammar schools. And they believe they have found the issue to confuse and confound the Labour Party.

At first sight the logic of this approach seems bizarre. If it is true that so few parents in Britain want to revive grammar schools, there can be few votes in screaming about them so loudly. Allowing the debate to become polarised around a return to the 11-plus is a great mistake for the Conservatives. Barely anyone wants it back. Mr Major may have wrongly allowed his romantic attachment to a mythical golden era, when polite grammar school boys played cricket on the village green, to dictate his politics once more.

But he has a better pitch. When the Prime Minister delivered his own passionate endorsement of grammar schools in March, it was heavily tinged with the language of aspirations. He clearly hopes that by characterising grammar schools as the meritocratic route out of the ghetto for striving working class children, he can appeal to the same group of voters that Mrs Thatcher harnessed. What council house sales were to the aspiring working class in the Eighties, perhaps edu-cation will be in the Nineties.

ONE CANADA SQUARE CANARY WHARF LONDON E14 5DL TELEPHONE 0171-293 2000 / 0171-345 2000 FAX 0171-293 2435 / 0171-345 2435

If it works, it's a great stick to beat Labour with too. The Labour Party cannot afford to appear hostile to the aspirations of the ordinary voters they hope to win back from the Conservatives at this election. Even worse, they dare not allow John Major to position the Conservatives as the party offering ordinary people opportunities while Labour politicians reject them and protect their own privileges instead.

Yet, as John Major well knows, decisions made by Tony Blair and Harriet Harman have made Labour vulnerable to exactly this kind of attack. Mr Blair is sending his eldest boy to the London Oratory, which selects on parental interview, while Ms Harman sends her second son to the grammar school St Olaves. By embracing selection so wholeheartedly in their lives, yet opposing selection officially, the two politicians are open to the hypocrisy charge which the Conservatives desperately want to tee up for the election.

If John Major can convince voters that Labour are the party of the hypocritical, patronising elite, while he represents ordinary aspirations, he will have pulled off a remarkable trick. The problem is that while he couches the debate in terms of grammar schools, his may help some of their children, their siblings may get stuck in the secondary modern down the road.

The Conservatives would be better off arguing for what their proposals actually add up to, rather than pretending they are something else. As Gillian Shephard tried to point out, above the grammar-babble yesterday, the new proposals in the White Paper are actually about encouraging diversity and variety among state schools. Giving schools the chance to select a certain number of pupils by aptitude for music or sport, for example, allows them to develop distinct specialisms and strengths. This is not only good for parental choice in the area, it also provides the school with a sense of pride and confidence in its own identity.

which will be good for all its pupils.

Moreover Labour are on much weaker ground if they try to oppose the promotion of diversity with some retreat towards uniformity. The party has in theory embraced variety among schools, despite offering few clues about how it could be achieved.

As always, talk of sheep and goats has inflamed political passions, to no obvious avail, while politicians argue about how to change the system, instead of how to improve its quality. The big failing in our school system are important. It is our complete inability to provide an adequate education for large numbers of children who leave school without qualifications, and often without basic literacy and numeracy skills. Standards - particularly the quality of teachers - is the real issue. Seen in this light, yesterday's selection row seems little more than a minor outbreak of playground fisticuffs.

Time now, children, please

At Sainsbury's in York youth has been served. Too readily, it turns out, and magistrates have withdrawn the store's drinks licence. There's no need to panic. Illicit boozing by young people isn't exactly new, or peculiarly British, Since Plato campaigned to stop the illegal sale of retsina to Athenstop the illegal sale of retsina to Athenian youth, generations of parents have worried about young people and demon drink — when not worrying about young people and sex, drugs and the sundry historical equivalents of rock 'n' roll. In identity-card-free Britain, no one is ever going to tell that a strapping 16-year-old with sprouting facial hair is not actually 18.

• LETTERS TO THE EDITOR •

Carey and the causes of 'moral decline' Sir: We write on behalf of the national humanist organisations and periodicals to challenge several points in George Carey's interview (24 June). Above all, we insist that religion has no monopoly or indeed priority of concern about either personal or public morality.

He complains simultaneously about what he alleges is the "moral lecline of Britain" and about a sciety in which he alleges that inhelief has become the norm"; we protest that there is no evidence or any connection between them. He calls for "shared values" and

'common values"; so do we, but we prefer values which are shared by and ammon to people who hold all kinds f religious and non-religious beliefs. He claims that we have lived off the legacy of the past which had een strongly Judaeo-Christia we claim that many aspects of our egacy – rationality and humanity. iberty and equality, moderation and toleration, democracy and velfare – belong to different raditions altogether, from the Renaissance and Enlightenment to the scientific and political evolutions of our age.

He asks whether unbelievers deological basis for ethical tandards"; yes, a long and rich radition of philosophical, iological, sociological and sychological discourse based on taturalistic and scientific rguments has provided a sound pundation for right thought and ood behaviour in this world. And he asks whether it was scar Wilde who said that the istinction between men and nimals is that man knows how to lush; no, it was Mark Twain (an theist) who said (in 1897) that an is the only animal that blushes or needs to! We need a sense of ame, indeed, but not of sin. ir HERMANN BONDI resident, British Humanist OBERT ASHBY ritish Humanist Association

ETER BREAREY re Freeshûnker M HERRICK TICHOLAS WALTER ationalist Press Association ondon WCI

ir: In Dr George Carey's interview ith Andrew Marr our Archbishop ppears to fix on a sad reality. Britain morally decadent and by our ulure to judge right from wrong, we re by inference an amoral society. eachers having to double up as arents in teaching children moral alues is particularly worrying.

And yet the Anglican Church ver which Dr Carey presides is lso in moral decline, prompting ne to challenge him to put his own ouse in order before tackling the 'oes "of a shallow society". It's ood that homophobia and not omosexuality is the sin that taxes im. And yet "new" Anglicanism is creature that seeks to placate all, y sanctioning the embrace of "two "Megrities" - of priesting women while acceding to a minority who ppose women's ordination; of iscretion whether or not to re-narry divorcees narry divorcees, creating a lottery of winners and losers; and of ubscribing to a finance-driven hurch, whereby there will be fewer raid clergy in the future, Dr Carey

s the architect of a church which is of shallow and nondescript.

Britain's moral decline has, I would suggest, a clear parallel to the moral decline of her church. The Rev ANDREW P de BERRY Thurgarton, Nottinghamshire

Sir: The Archbishop of Canterbury is fulfilling his role as a prophetic eader in calling for a national debate on morality. He may feel that he "may not do any more than blow trumpets from castle walls and warn", but there he is in good company. The old prophets warned from hilltops and palace precincts. Morality is to do with how we behave in relation to others. Whether we allow them the same value that we give to ourselves. If we deny this value to those who are not "like us" we can end up denying their very humanity. There are already too many people who feel that they have no part in the curren society, who feel marginalised. Morality is about personal responsibility and social responsibility. We should not only be concerned about the effects of our own personal actions, but the results of actions taken in our name by our national leaders.

If the Archbishop can make us more aware of the consequences of our actions or inactions he will perform a valuable service to all Christians and non-Christians. JOSE JOHNES Crowle, Worcester

Sir: The Archbishop of Canterbury questions whether atheists have a logic for their morality, stating that "of course" religious people have one. In fact, faith, or a holy book, are as illogical a basis for morality as any that the most muddle-headed atheist could come up with. And why does he insist on logic anyway?

If, as he concedes, atheists can be morally virtuous, surely this is the best possible endorsement of their morality, whatever its basis. Has it occurred to him that when people disagree on fundamental values, a healthy scepticism about the origins of morality is the best possible position from which to come to an agreement, or at least a workable compromise? Perhaps it is too much to expect that sort of openmindedness from someone who sees no contradiction in preaching the virtues of tolerance while hijacking the Millennium for Christianity. JEREMY CHENTY

NHS cash wasted Sir: The funding of the NHS has hit the headlines again, and again the arguments rage about efficiency and about underfunding. The government say spending on health has increased in real terms, and no doubt they are right. But where is the money going?

The introduction of the purchaser-provider split in the service has diverted resources away from clinical care. One of the real frustrations for clinicians is to watch a sizeable slice of the NHS cake being handed out on a plate to the ever-increasing army of accountants and managers employed to shuttle funds between purchasers and providers.

Can we not escape from the totalitarianism of the accountants and get back to spending the NHS money on patients? HUGH J THOMSON Consultant Surgeon, Birmingham

Sent back to a forgotten war

But it's only a game, Sarg!"

Sir: Your article "The end of warand peace" (14 June) states that the war in Sierra Leone between the government and the Revolutionary United Front was one of "two major conflicts [that] began in 1995". This is incorrect. The war began on 23 March 1991. It is true, however, that the war only began to attract much press attention in this country after it had been in progress for nearly four years, and only then because British hostages had been seized by the RUF rebels. Sierra Leone was for over 150 rears a British colonial possession Its subjects fought and died for Britain and the Allies in Burma in the Second World War. In November 1991 I wrote to both John Major and Douglas Hurd about the war and its likely outcome. I received the reply that its causes were too obscure for the British government to take any

This did not stop the Home Office from taking an ever firmer line with asylum-seekers from Sierra Leone, introducing visa curbs for the first time in October 1994, and pressing, in case after case, for the return of refugees to a country in turmoil. Surely, Home Office officials have been aided in this policy by a less-than-vigilant press.

Professor PAUL RICHARDS Department of Anthropology University College London London WCI

Get tough on abusive doctors

Sir: Your leader suggests that the General Medical Council should be "more flexible" when dealing with doctors accused of abusing the doctor-patient relationship ("Doctors: a prescription for retaining our trust", 24 June). You are obviously unaware that the GMC is already very flexible indeed - some of us might think too much so. I was a lay member for 14 years and sat on disciplinary committees for 12. An allegation has to be both serious and provable to get past the screener. Since the GMC has refused to carry out the recommendations of the Morrison committee that it should have an investigation unit, the complainant who cannot provide her own supporting evidence at the beginning will get no further.

The small minority of cases which reach the next stage then have to be accepted by the Preliminary Proceedings Committee. That committee selects those cases which will get through to the Professional Conduct Committee. Then the complainant will have to convince a panel of 11, most of whom will be male doctors, that she is speaking the truth. The majority of doctors are elected by the profession itself. and are well aware of their constituents' views. If the facts are found proved, it is then decided whether they amount to serious professional misconduct. If so, the panel can decide to admonish, suspend, or remove from the register. The penalty will vary according to the evidence.

The GMC does not discipline

doctors for having sex, but for abuse of the professional relationship. Many GPs are now undertaking counselling roles, and this opens greater possibilities of manipulation. The damage done to the patient can be profound, and can leave her and members of her family suicidal. Similar abuse by female doctors can happen, but is шпсоттоп.

Doctors have been given powers to discipline themselves to protect the public. If they fail to do it effectively, Parliament may decide to disband the GMC and give those powers to a lay body. I am sure that is the last thing the British Medical Association would want. JEAN ROBINSON Oxford

Babies on left and right

Sir: Your article "Why left sounds right to a babe in arms" (21 June) reports two scientists' complicated explanation for why mothers cradle their babies on the left arm. I have four children. It is quite simple: cradling the baby on the left leaves the right hand free in right-handed people. They only had to ask mother.

GILLIAN RUSSELL Aberdeen

Sir: Now I understand why I, as a right-handed mother, cradled my daughters on my right side - it was my maternal instinct to protect them from my dreadful singing. MEG IRVINĞ

Change among tribal peoples Sir: Nicholas Schoon's article

"Vanishing tribes ... vanishing whales" (21 June) does not do justice to the Inuit and the tribal peoples of eastern Siberia. Although he acknowledges that, for Arctic peoples, subsistence whaling is a force for social cohesion and often the only means of economic survival, his emotive emphasis on their use of "modern" hunting weapons reflects the most common Western misunderstanding of tribal peoples. Whereas Western societies "develop" or progress", the argument goes, rribal peoples remain "primitive" and "at one with nature", fit only to be conserved like rare species or "dragged kicking and screaming into the 20th century". The idea that tribal societies contain their own dynamic of change and can accept or reject Western-style modernity on their own terms still impeccably liberal disposition.

Rifles may be less picturesque than poisoned arrows, but the quota figures themselves show that if there is a threat to these mammals it does not come from Arctic peoples. STEPHEN CORRY Director General, Survival London WC1

Secret files

Sir: On 18 May you published a letter from me regarding the declassification of secret documents relating to the surveillance of anti-imperialists in the UK in the 1930 and early 1940s. I have been in correspondence with Roger Freeman MP, the Cabinet Minister for Public Service.

In a letter to me dated 3 June, he wrote that in 1993 the Lord Chancellor had decided that "records whose release would not be in the public interest, in that it would do actual harm to national security, were still exempt from release". Further, "the security and intelligence agencies depend for their effectiveness upon maintaining the confidentiality of their operations as well as upon maintaining the confidentiality of people who put themselves at risk in the service of the state."

It seems that the methods and agents used in the 1930s and early 1940s are still being used today. Is our "national security" safe in such ancient and outmoded hands? Mr Freeman did not respond to my request for a definition of "national security" MARIKA SHERWOOD

Honorary Research Fellow Institute of Commonwealth Studies London WC1

Late show

Sir: One simple measure which Charles Saumarez Smith ("How to pull them in off the streets", 25 June) didn't mention in his plans for London's galleries is to revise their archaic opening hours.

While it is possible to buy more or less anything until at least 8pm. the Tate, National and National Portrait Gallery regularly turf everyone out at 6pm. Those of us not shackled to our desks by guilt and insecurity often have an hour or two to kill between finishing work and starting the evening's hedonism; there's not much to do in the capital at this time except shop or drink. VYV HOPE-SCOTT

Vyv:HopeScott@europeonline.com

Post letters to Letters to the Editor, and include a daytime telephone number.

(Rac: 0171-293 2056; e-mail: letters@independent.co.uk) Letters may be edited for length and clarity.

achoice

'I've wanted to be Dr Godber more than anything. It's to do with being thrown on the scrapheap at 11'

Judith Judd meets playwright John Godber, who failed to make it into grammar school

As artistic director of the the 11-plus. John Hull Truck Theatre company, he is even physically outside mainstream theatre. He lives ful playwright. just outside Hull and is at present rehearsing Shakers, a musiscriptwriter and theatre director cal by himself and his wife Jane might not be where he is today. about the grind of being a cock-It made him obsessed with qualtail bar waitress. He has also ifications, he says. It also gave him the sense of being an outbeen commissioned to write a in much of his work. who have a baby late in life. At John Godber, BEd, MA, 40 he has a daughter who is not PhD (unfinished) and Hon-But if his failure to win a orary Doctor of Letters at Hull place at grammar schools has University, has won the Laurence Olivier Comedy award for his play Up 'N' Under, writhelped his career, Godber is

sider which is a vital ingredient ing of being an outsider.

ten scripts for television series such as Grange Hill and Brook-When I failed the side and a string of plays: the award-winning Bouncers, April exam, my father in Paris, The Office Party, Salt of the Earth to name only a few. hit me ... he felt Yet he says acquiring qualifications is compulsive. the stigma'

Another honorary doctorate from Humberside University is on the way. "I've wanted to be Dr Godber more than anyory is of the stigma of being one thing else. It's to do with being thrown on the scrapheap at the of a handful of children in his class in the mining community of Upton, near Pontefract, to age of 11." Ever since the education system rejected him, he fail the 11-plus.

"The pain for someone senhas suffered from what he calls the Camus syndrome, the feel-sitive was intense. And it was-"While my plays are permining village in the Sixties. When I failed the exam, I was formed more than those of most other living writers, I'm physically hit. My father found it a great humiliation. He is not not at the centre of the theviolent. He felt the stigma. atrical fraternity. I'm not writ-

"In a mining community it ing about people with PhDs was an announcement of failure. having nervous breakdowns or I had cousins who had gone to middle-class inter-marital relagrammar school. You couldn't tionships, it's more grass roots help making comparisons."

His mother had passed but been unable to take up her place because grammar schools were still fee-paying. His mother was less upset by his failure. "Bear in mind that everybody thought I could have a job at the pit. My granddad used to joke he had a shovel waiting for me."

His failure, he says, cannot television series about a couple be neatly explained away by his background: many boys in his class did pass. His father was interested in self-improvement and had attended Workers' Education Association lectures given by Harold Wilson. But reluctant to admit it. His memthere were no books in the

> He vividly remembers being flummoxed by one particular question on the English paper.
> "You had to explain the word quenched. It wasn't a word that would ever have been used in our house. That was an example of how alien the whole exam seemed and how middleclass orientated it was.

"I was completely unprepared for the exam. I didn't realise its importance. I had a vague idea that if you passed you went on to a posh school with uniform. If you didn't you ants. My parents expected me to pass but for no other reason than that they sent me to bed

In 1966, he went to Upton secondary modern but the pain continued. He hated the grammar school boys and the feeling was mutual. "Have you done your table tennis homework, they used to shout at us," he recalls. Eight years later, when his school team beat Pontefract grammar school at rugby, the revenge was sweet. The 11-year-old's failure still

The secondary modern, he says, was grim. "I was bullied and we had to do a lot of things I wasn't very good at like welding and woodwork. But there was one very good English teacher and I began to write

After a year, a new comprehensive was built in response to the Labour government's 1965 circular to promote comprehensive education. All the pupils in local secondary moderns, though not those in grammar schools, were transferred

"It was wonderful." savs Godber. "The teachers were younger and you could call them by their first name. There were people who were 18. There was a big sports hall and community studies, a sort of diluted sociology and even drama.

He got nine CSEs (the exam for those not considered bright enough to do O-level) at grade 1 and two A-levels and went on to Bretton Hall College in took pupils from that school to the Edinburgh Festival and the National Student Drama Festival. We won lots of awards."

While he was working part-time for his PhD at Leeds University, he started writing scripts for Granada for Crown Court. He also wrote some of the early episodes of Grange

"Not like any comprehensive I know," he adds. "Nobody smokes and when a window is broken, someone owns up." Would he be able to write as he does if he had been to that traditional grammar school and ence and that his secondary modern and comprehensive schools proved an invaluable broad experience.

He writes mostly, he says, about his family, including his sister, seven years his junior, who works in an unemployment ben-dog and that could be traced back to the 11-plus. But you have to remember I'm unusual boys who failed the 11-plus with me - some of them bright - went down the pit and lost their jobs after the miners' strike.

"Eleven is too early to start creaming people off. They aren't ready. Some workingclass kids got through to grammar school but the potential of lots of them wasn't realised."

When it comes to his daugh ter, Elizabeth, he may feel differently. "Children change the way you look at things. I'd like her to go to a comprehensive but I wouldn't rule out private school. Roedean, perhaps. No, not Roedean, but there are some good private schools near here. I'm not of the opinion that what was good enough for

DID THE 11-PLUS MAKE A DIFFERENCE TO THEIR LIVES?

Failed Peter Stringfellow

Nightclub owner

"I was very embarrassed when I failed my IJ olus, but my first year at Burngreave Secondary School, in Sheffield, was mobable the happiess year of my life. For the lirst time I was given a chance to shine in a situation I was capable. of shining in: I am all in favour of selective streaming, which may surprise you."

Johnson

Frank

prateful to my old actions who helped me Edido't bave to exercis ing brain getting a first at university and being turned off books for the rest of my life. I don't have children but if I did I would, disastrously, send then to the usual Eton and

Tony : Mooney

ioni Major vos a cupil. much to exercisedly's surprise. I felt immigated for years afferwards. You never spirited it. The secondary modern i weat to bewever, was good school in that it encouraged me to think I did have takent Both my children went to local etimps bearies

Wendy

had to have extra

that to three case constituting in making in passed. I just went in the local grammur school, which was an excellent sensor. The mead was will hear of drama and so she encouraged me with that The school. cartainly did bong our the talents that were svallable. Both my

Passed -

Moore onnder chairman of incapple Dance Studios

Debbie

Tipesed, but in those days it was note that my brother passed than me. I went in Streeterd. grammares model for girls and his plat of that now. Some of my friends mit contemporaries who didn't pass and went to spokensy moderns didn't fuger the same didn't have the same to have the best I could mid uniforms made if a good grounding for me.

Passed Maureen Lipman

"I-passed 11-plus and went to an all-girls grammar school. I vished it had been coed. It gave me a very good education if I chose to listen to it. which I didn't much. if there was a school like that I'd send my children there, but they have both been educated privately. They weren't doing very well in state schools.

New digital Nokia. 100 hours of power!

ORDERING HOTLINE WEEKDAYS SAM

PLEASE HAVE YOUR CREDIT CARD AND THIS ADVERTISEMENT HANDY VINER YOU CALL

AND CHOTE REF 4304, CORNE WE WARE MAINLY TO ACCORD SHIRED CARDO.

Offer subject to status and a standard airbone contract for each phase with Callphones Durect LLG. 185 Lower Richmond Road, Rechmond-apon-Full written delaris and terms and conditions of this offer are groundable on request. © Copyright. Registered No. 2995222.

What's brown and white and drunk?

rom time to time I get requests from readers with low linguistic selfesteem to bring back the ever-popular Dr Wordsmith to give them access to unparalleled word-power, or at least to guide them a few more feet into the impenetrable thicket of English

I couldn't agree more. In fact, I would have brought him back far sooner to get him to answer your ques-tions, but this is the first time I have found him sober. Here he is now, though, so all Could you explain the difference between "shall" and

Dr Wordsmith writes: Sure. A will is something you write before you die to specify how much money all of your relations get from your estate, or how much the Battersea Dog's Home gets if you can't stand your relations, or indeed how much the National Trust gets if you can't stand people or animals. A shall, on the other hand, is the name given to a confidence trickster's assistant, one who pretends to be a victim to encourage others. Isn't the word for that a "shill", not a "shall"?

Dr Wordsmith writes: Is it? Yes, I believe you're right!
I am puzzled by the expression "deceptively simple". When we say a thing is deceptively simple, does that mean it is very simple or very com-

Dr Wordsmith writes: Neither. It means it is very, very

As we all know, the word "chauffeur", meaning a driver of a car, comes from the French. However, in French the word "chauffeur" does NOT mean someone who drives; it means someone who heats, because "chauffer" is to get hot. So was there something that the early drivers of cars had to heat before they could get their cars in motion, eh? Dr Wordsmith writes: Yes. They had to get their passengers warm with rugs, blan-

Miles Kington

kets, gloves, hot water bot-tles, flasks of brandy, displays of servility, etc, etc. Then, and only then, could they turn their attention to the driving. And the next!

Does the word for the flower called the "teasel" come from the Yorkshire expression for the easel, namely "t'easel"? DrWordsmith writes: No.

What is the difference between "boules" and "petanque"?

Dr Wordsmith writes: "Boule de neige" means "snowball" but "petanque de Does the word "tramshed" neige" does not. Nor can you come from the old Yorkshire imagine Maupassant writing a book called "Petanque de

Suif". And the next, pleasel Why is the name "cappuccino given to a frothy milky Dr Wordsmith writes: "Cappuccino" actually means

Capuchin, which was one of the orders of friar in Italy. Yes, but why was the name given to a frodiv coffee, wise guy? Dr Wordsmith writes: Because the Capuchins wore brown and white garb, just like a milky coffee, smart

The word "capucine" in French means the flower we call a nasturtium, doesn't it? Dr Wordsmith writes: Ye-e-e-s...

But a nasturtium is not frothy brown and white, is it? Dr Wordsmith writes: No-o-o-o...

So why is it called a capucine"? Dr Wordsmith writes: Look, hasn't anyone got any better questions than this? expression for a barn full of male sheep, "t'ramshed"?

Dr Wordsmith writes: No. Do you think it would ever be possible to use the words "chamfered", "barbiturate" and "intaglio" in the same sentence?

Dr Wordsmith writes: Yes. You have just done it. Congratulations.

Does the word "tin tray" come from the way they pro-nounce "the in-tray" in Yorkshire, namely "t'in-tray"?

Dr Wordsmith writes: No. Is the word "butterfly" a fanciful version of the expres sion "flutter by"?

Dr Wordsmith writes: No. It comes from an old Saxon word meaning "butter thief".
Why would a butterfly want to steal butter?

Dr Wordsmith writes: haven't the faintest bloody idea! Don't ask me! Ask the old Saxons, who invented the flaming word in the first place! Barman! Same again...!

I'm sorry, I was wrong, Dr Wordsmith is NOT sober today. Some other time, per-

حيكنا من الاعل

Good

Polly Toy

the commentators

A choice for Scotland, a risk for Blair A choice for Scotland, a risk for Blair The reconstruct the 'tartan tax' Tories, but it could upset the activists The reconstruct the 'tartan tax' Tories, but it could upset the activists the Conservatives may not be much of a government but they are already proving to be a seriare already proving to be a serious opposition. By campaigning savagely against Scottish Home Rule, they have just changed the policy of Tony Blair's government-in-waiting. He is about to announce a radical shift on Scotland which, according to Blair's aides, will put John Major on the spot.

As Donald Macintyre noted here esterday, Major's potent "save the Union" message in the 1992 election has been a lesson to both main parties. The Tories think it helped them win. Labour is worried that they're right. And over the past year the Scottish Secretary, Michael Forsyth, has rubbed the message home by successfully dubbing the proposed Edinburgh parliament's ability to vary income tax a "tartan tax".

Labour is caught between two nationalisms. There is the real revival of nationalist feeling in Scotland, which Labour activists mostly share and which Blair must respond to, or risk losing seat after seat to the SNP. And there is the reawakening nationalism of Tory England, which has mostly manifested itself in anti-Europeanism, but which could be whipped up by a Scottish settlement.

Save []

NO AS

47745

自分开设备 计数据信置

Blair has been worried by English nationalism for some time, and rightly so. He must assume that, if he makes in flamingly Thatcherite form. So he needs to find a way of dealing with Scottish devolution which doesn't allow that political spectre to return to haunt them.

Yet almost anything Blair suggests to help repulse the English national-ists will infuriate Scotland's nationalists, including those in his own party and vice-versa. He could simply ditch the proposed Edinburgh parliament's ability to raise and cut taxes. But that would mean the abandonment of a policy strongly believed in by the Scottish Labour Party and which Blair has committed himself to retaining.

It would cause a ferocious row More important, perhaps, would be interested on Scottish politics generally. The Edinburgh parliament would be offered the power to divide up a cake entirely produced of block grant. Anything it failed to do could be blamed on southern meanness. It would be a recipe for immature politics and anti-

For Blair to go that way would be a serious mistake. What else? He could suggest that Westminster will have the power to over-ride the Edinburgh MSPs even on those areas of policy considered fit for a Scottish par-liament. That too would influriate the

Blair is caught between two reviving nationalisms

Scottish Labour Party, and the "London veto" would be excellent news for the real Scottish Nationalists.

So instead, I expect Blair to go for a multi-option referendum. This has one huge downside. It would remind people of the last such referendum, in 1979, which failed to clear the 40 per cent hurdle imposed by London and thus destroyed the Scottish Assembly which had been so painfully prepared by the Caliaghan government. That referendum campaign set Labour MP against Labour MP and was conducted against a background of foul weather, the stoppages and strikes of the "winter of discontent". For the be destroyed: such a tax would be Labour Party in Scotland, it is not a cheerful memory.

This time round, some of the same problems would apply. Given a ref-erendum, wouldn't some Scottish Labour MPs of a staunchly Unionist persuasion - Brian Wilson springs to mind - find it very difficult not to campaign against their own party's policy? As in the Seventies, wouldn't Westminster add an extra numerical hurdle? Labour's Scottish general secretary was in London yesterday, presumably for talks on these very

For there are strong tactical reasons for a Scottish referendum commit-ment. First, it would allow Labour to present the Scottish people with at least three clear choices. There would be the unchanged Union, for which the Conservatives would presumably campaign and presumably lose. There would be independence, the cause of the SNP. And there would be something-in-between.

Labour could explain in detail its proposals, including ones on the longer-term future for Scotland's relatively high central funding and on tax powers for Edinburgh, inviting Scots to weigh them up and make a choice. The Tory allegation that a Labour vote in Scotland at the general elec-

imposed only if Scots later voted twice for it - once for a parliament with those powers, and then again for taxraising MPs to sit in that Edinburgh

The allegedly over-generous treat-ment of Scotland from public funds would also be aired before the new parliament was established. The referendum could, of course, go the "wrong" way for Labour. But that seems unlikely; and it would "out" both the Tory Unionists and SNP, obliging them to take their unadorned case directly to the Scottish people.

This is a momentous decision for Blair. If the Tory attack on Scottish devolution is repulsed, then the whole Conservative case against Labour's constitutional reform programme will begin to come apart too. Can Major really make anyone's flesh creep at the thought of a Bill of Rights, or the abo-lition of the voting rights of hereditary

The question troubling Blair has been whether these tactical advantages outweigh the anger that the Scottish Labour Party and many other Scots will feel at any delay and uncertainty over Labour's once-clear Home Rule promise. My guess is that that ques-tion no longer troubles him: and that he will publicly go for the referendum

Triumph of the will, the logic and the plan

Stan Hey traces the rise of the Germans, through hard work and organisation, to football superiority

continue to search for the secret of Germany's postwar economic recovery, there are many English football managers who, irrespective of the result of tonight's Euro 96 semi-final between the two nations, will be asking themselves: How did the Germans get to be so good at football? The answer is not as straightforward as Vorsprung durch Technik, but parallels can be alimpsed between the achieveglimpsed between the achieveits football that may give clues to an astonishing durability in international competition over the past 30 years.

It is perhaps a significant irony that the current German squad is sponsored by Mer-cedes Benz, the makers of the most reliable cars in the world. while England are sponsored by Green Flag, a national car breakdown service. The con-trast between the two countries' footballing fortunes remains equally stark. For Germany's international record embraces three World Cup wins (in 1954, 1974 and 1990), being runners-up in 1982 and 1986, and winning two European Championships (in 1972 and 1980). England, as the soccer chant of the 1970s used to go: "Won two world wars and one World Cup". Not much reward for being the originators of the

England, until comparatively recently - last Monday morning, according to the front page of the Daily Star - still believed itself to be an imperial power in world football. The Germans have always sought to modernise their approach to football, being less encumbered by notions of world superiority, at least on the football pitch, England thrashed Germany 6-3 in Berlin in 1938, causing the kind of radical self-assess ment that we didn't suffer until the Hungarians inflicted the same scoreline on us at Wembley in 1953. After the war, the German national coach Sepp Herberger began a programme of reconstruction, based on fitness and technique, which team's surprise victory over the brilliant Hungarians in the 1954 World Cup final.

The English didn't appoint a national trainer until the mid-1950s, relying on committees of blazered buffers to select and organise the players. While England remained isolated rust as English industrialists from world football competition, thanks to Harrovian arrogance and amateurish disdain for professionalism, the Germans were travelling, competing against the rest of the world.

So by the summer of 1966. when England won the World Cup at Wembley against Germany, it may have seemed that the old order had been reestablished. But for England it was indeed "all over", as far as winning international tournaments was concerned. For the Germans had established a national coaching system for players from the age of 14 upwards. They also had a seamless transition from one longserving manager to another, and they began to base their national squad around whichever team was the most successful in the Bundesliga.

They insisted that each prospective club manager should take a two-year course in tactics, sports medicine and financial administration before taking charge - another con-trust to England, where most new managers have stumbled straight from retirement as players without even acquiring basic coaching or financial skills. Organisation, continuity and logic were the key German themes, just as much on the training pitch as on the factory Meanwhile, for England the wheels were beginning to come off. In the quarter-final of the 1970 World Cup. it lost 3-2 to West Germany, after being 2-0 ahead. Sir Alf Ramsey, the architect of our sole international triumph, was sacked in 1974 and the Football Association then shovelled its way through a dog-eared pack of English club managers - Don Revie, Ron Greenwood, Bobby Robson, Graham Taylor - in the hope that one of them might have the secret.

By contrast, Berti Vogts, the German manager, has been in the national coaching system since he retired as a player in 1979, working his way stealthily upwards. Terry Venables, though a talented coach, on the verge of international achievement, will now leave to hand eventually bore fruit with his over to Glenn Hoddle, the mos gifted but also the most ill-used English international player of the last two decades. It is not just that the Germans get to the beaches first, but that we take too long to wake up.

> Stan Hey was one of the writers of 'Auf Wiedersehen, Pet'.

The subtleties of snobbery

Where exactly do the Majors stand on the social scale, asks Polly Toynbee

66 Tt is impossible, in our condition of society, not to be some-Ltimes a snob," Thackeray wrote in his Book of Snobs. He might have said in any human society, anywhere, for we define ourselves through an intricate filigree of highly personalised snobberies and tastes.

Patricia Dessoy, John Major's sister, peaking to the world for the first time his week, in a long interview in the Daily Telegraph, displayed the rawest of sensibilities on the subject. The newspaper, with its own finely tuned social antennae, picked up every nuance with lip-smacking relish: they had it both ways - poor Pat being patronised by the smart world, they in the social scale? Who were they? What are we to make of the cradle of our Prime Minister's social attitudes? Pat, the widow of a master baker and mother of an operator of colour printing machines, is full of that same prickliness we observe in her younger brother. Her contempt for the older divorcee across the road, with whom the 20-year-old John had an affair, bubbles over into a deeper fear that the woman had the cheek to patronise the family. Like families everywhere, she defends her brother and their background stoutly against any snobbish outside observer, yet wields a mean sisterly stiletto knife of her own.

Why has she never ever been invited to Downing Street or Chequers? "I would like to be invited, but I think John is protecting me from those who might look down on me because so many people have been snobbish to him." It is a recurrent theme in her account of their life; a family warily on the lookout for anyone who might judge them to have come down in the world, because they did indeed take a steep and painful tumble. When the garden-gnome business went bust, the Majors' three-bedroom bungalow was exchanged for a two-room Brixton flat The family comes out brilliantly on values, with Pat taking a job rather than going to college, to pay off parental debts for the sake of family honour. But on social standing she is keenly on the lookout for slights. So, she implies, is her brother. She says: The woodenness started as a form of self-protection," when he became a Conservative counsellor. "You had to sound, look and act in a certain way or no one would believe you had Conrvative values:"

His greyness, she says, helps him pass muster and move between cliques in a snobbish world. It is easy to imagine how fear of contempt has honed implied, while subtly patronising her themselves simply by letting her talk.

Where exactly did the Majors stand

Where exactly did the Majors stand don voice and the aridity of his robotic vocabulary. Who would be robust enough not to blench in a party where the effortless snobbery of the aristocracy gilds the sharp Oxbridge wits; where cruel Critchleys can contemp-tuously damn the Majors of the party by calling their ilk "the garagistes". They even mocked a self-made statelyhome owner like Heseltine as a "Man who had to buy his own furniture".

Snobbery of such brutish savagery is unknown to most of us these days. Hyacinth Bucket is a character out of the Fifties, and we can laugh at her with ease as a bygone absurdity.

However, subtler varieties of snobbery flourish everywhere and always will, as much among teenagers as their elders. What, after all, is the meaning of the contempt in which they hold those "sad" cases who do not conform to whatever it is they all conform to? The right trainers or hair in their eyes, Adolescents demarcate their own snobbish boundaries to bolster up their fragile identities.

But we all do it, though with more finesse and subtlety as we grow older. Snobbery defines us, too, though it is not talked about in polite society. Said a son to his mother the other day within earshot of me: "You used to call things 'common' when we were young.' "Rubbish," said his sister, "she never did. That would have been far too common." So it goes, layer upon layer. Some snobberies are rampant - and oft displayed among Telegraph columnists where new vulgarities are rooted out weekly. The awful crowds at the Cézanne exhibition who don't really look at the pictures; the frightful business men with their boxes at Covent Garden entertaining the Japanese, when none of them know their Parsifal from their L'Incoronazione di Popeia. Others are more subtle: academics despising one of their number with a vulgar taste for appearing on television; any change at all to Radio 3 or 4; brightly patterned carpets or curtains that look like hitched up knickers; Andrew Lloyd Webber, Richard Branson or noticeable cars. Add your own here ... but they all have meaning, creating cultural and generational clans, reassuring, self-identifying and infinitely comforting.

John Major's sister portrays a man shaped and damaged by an oldfashioned pernicious snobbery. Would it still be so for a new entrant to the Conservative Party? Perhaps not in so coarse a form. As a nation, we often castigate ourselves as a more classridden and snobbish society than others, but there is scant evidence for this. The Americans' self-image as the classless society is laughable to anyone who has lived there for any length of time. The Barons and the Vons occupy, if anything, more positions of real power in republican Germany than our hereditary peerage. Since the Sixties and Seventies, socially we have become a nation reasonably at ease with ourselves, as Major said he "wunted". That, of course, says nothing about poverty and misery, but it marks the welcome passing of social anxiety that went with class-obsession, the death of social deference. There may no longer be deference, but difference will always be with us.

Goodbye Watford, goodbye politics

Tristan Garel-Jones pays tribute to the tribes of Middle England and to the Conservative Party

ast Sunday, the Watford Conservative Association selected Robert Gordon as the prospective parliamentary candidate to fight the next general election in the Tory interest. The three shortlisted candidates all belonged to the mainstream of the Conservative Party. As I looked down from the platform at the inner core of my local party (with, I own, a degree of sentimental affection), it was hard to exclude the thought that they are a more reliable and steady body of men and women than the 1922 Committee. Mrs Nancy Forshaw has more sense in her little finger than ... well, (fill in this space!). The sooner Nancy, David Hobbs, Sue Windsor, Arun Ranjit and thousands like them are fully enfranchised by the Conservative Party, the better. "The Conservative Party is not a political party; it is a tribe," says wise old Alistair Goodlad MP in a, for him, rare display of verbosity. Right. It is the tribe that took me into its bosom when I returned from Spain, aged 30, to live in the UK. On the pavements, doorsteps and in the front rooms of aburban Watford I became intoxicated with the air of Middle England an all-embracing term to include Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland

- anywhere outside SW1). In my surg-eries I shared their daily dramas and learnt. Learnt, above all, that politicians should sermonise less, listen more and, in the words of the Psalm, be slow to chide and swift to bless. The final balance sheet shows a healthy credit in favour of Watford, which I can only hope to repay by the weight of my affection. The tribal character of the Conservative Party makes it the ideal vehicle for this age of anti-heroic politics. The barbarians are no longer at the gates. The Cold War has made way for what Professor Sir Michael Howard describes as the chill peace. The agenda set out by Thatcher, Joseph and Howe in the late Seventies to recapture the initiative for liberal economics has been triumphantly won. Conservatives five, Labour nil.

It may be the end of ideology, but politics has just become more difficult. Far better a tribe that has never been encumbered by ideology than new Labour - an ageing transvestite clad in sub-Thatcherite rhetoric. After all, we know that Danny La Rue is a man, just as we know that new Labour is old struggle at home, inside the European Union and in the global markets is now between free trade and protectionism. Protection is an interven-tionist device of the kind loved by Labour, the French and Sir James Goldsmith. The Tory party must retain its faith in free trade and would do well to recall that Napoleon Bonaporte exciled in St Helena concluded that it

The collapse of ideology poses new challenges for left and right. The real

New Labour is an ageing transvestite clad in sub-Thatcherite rhetoric was British trade, based on sea supremacy post-Trafalgar, that was his real Waterloo: "When I think that for a cup of coffee with more or less sugar in it, they checked the hand that could have set free the world." And thus it is today. The liberating hand of James Goldsmith will be checked by pretty little panties from India and

I was a Whip for most of Mrs Thatcher's period of office. I enforced her government's will with gusto and, unquestioning adulation of hope, effectiveness. Never a atives long to indulge in.

the word, I can say without fear of challenge that no journalist ever Lady Thatcher aside (I would classify extracted a whisper of criticism from me either of her person or her policies. Yes, I am an apparatchik. I believe governments should get their business. The fashionable view that Parliament is neutered by executive power and savage whipping is back. I know of no executive in the free world that has to fight harder, line by line, minute by minute to place a piece of legislation on the statute book.

When Keith Joseph retired I gave a small dinner party for him in my home. Keith's intellectual power was only surpassed by his personal modesty. After the dinner, attended by Prime Minister Thatcher, I compared his departure to that of King Dimitrios as described by Cavaly. He took off his golden robes threw away his purple buskins and quickly dressing himself in simple clothes, he slipped out just like an actor who, the play over, changes his costume and goes away. It remains a source of regret we are unable to accord Lady Thatcher the unquestioning adulation we Conserv-

Departure leaves one free to her as a war-time leader manque), I believe that John Major, with Lord Salisbury and Clement Attlee, is one of the three greatest peacetime prime ministers this century. He picked up his party on the floor, finessed away the poll tax and led it to victory in 1992. Inflation has been squeezed out of our system. The liberalising of the British economy has been pushed ahead. For the first time in my adult life. Britain's performance is not an object of scorn. Maastricht reined in the worst excesses of the Single European Act and laid the foundation pillars for a confederal Europe of sovereign states. He is doing his duty this generation's duty - by Northern Ireland with courage and integrity.

His treatment at the hands of some of his parliamentary colleagues has been an abomination. Tiny majorities turn tiny men into giants. But out there in Watford, Nancy Forshaw and others like her awaif. And when Major meets Middle England, Middle Britain, face to face, I suspect there will be some red faces in SW1 and a happy smile on the face of Robert Gordon of Watford.

If you'd like your home to pay for itself.

let it.

CALL US TODAY TO FIND OUT HOW WE CAN HELP YOU LET OUT YOUR EXISTING HOME AND BUY A NEW ONE.

0500 111 130

TSE

YOUR HOME IS AT RISK IF YOU DO NOT KEEP UP REPAYMENTS ON A MORTGAGE OR OTHER LOANS SECURED ON 11.

Assignment of a life policy may be required. Written quotations available on request. Applicants mus be aged 21 or over. All loans are subject to tratus on $300 oul

ast CJ atl

vorker w tural පෘත full fitne se of Cre , a York : "I have a naturai is one o

lose frien

ud after

w enoug

uestion (

) remains

really los ad been ar er. If it w that was i mer wife, Avenue, his roast I'm conv d him, to with catt uld have if people at sure." rologist,

v. who ca unation old the inc from CJI usual for triant, he s such a no statist between id that meat, es in enormo had grad irst, he k

as the o

orker in

is sense ie unable fered fro

ig CJD is

Leo Nichols

Leo Nichols was as notable for lease from house arrest a year his death as for his life. A longtime friend of Burma's oppos tion leader Aung San Suu Kyi. he was arrested in April as part of a Burmese government campaign to tighten the screws on her wherever she was vulnerable. He died in custody on Saturday, among allegations that the regime had denied him proper medical treatment in prison. He was not a political man, but becomes another martyr for the cause of democracy in Burma.

Aung San Suu Kyi's party, the National League for Democracy (NLD), has survived only barely between its landslide election win in 1990, and its leader's re-

ago. Some speculated that Leo Nichols was the NLD's secret banker, but both he and the NLD have always denied this. Indeed, he could not have become involved in NLD finances in any way without making the party vulnerable under election law. But as a successful businessman he was able to heln Aung San Suu Kyi herself, by finding her a gardener and handymen for her house, and lending her his car on occasion. He was an elusive, slightly mysterious figure, of mixed parentage, who unofficially continued to represent the interests in Rangoon of Norway, Denmark, Finland and Switzerland - though he relinquished the offical title of consul-general 15 years ago.

Nichols was born in 1931, the offspring of a Greek shipping family based in Rangoon owners of the Stevedoring Shipping Company. He spent the Japanese occupation of Burma at school in India. After the Second World War, in which his father died, he returned to work in the family business with his uncle and brother. He married his wife, Felicity, in 1951, and they had five children - all of them now living in Australia and the United States.

In the 1950s, he held the position of General Manager of the United Liner Agencies in Rangoon – but the company was nationalised in 1962 after General Ne Win came to power. It was shortly afterwards that he was appointed Honorary Consul-General for the three Scandinavian countries. But he was briefly arrested in 1980 and as a result gave up his of-ficial representation, though he was released after a few days.

In recent years, Nichols devoted himself to making money and to distributing it to worthy causes. Even though his donations never appeared on the government lists, he quietly donated to Buddhist, Muslim and Christian charities. He himself was a Catholic.

After Aung San Sun Kyi's release from house arrest in July 1995 Nichols took breakfast with her every Friday at her house. In April this year he was arrested by the government, and in May he was sentenced to three years in prison. The Burmese official media accused him of "providing general expenses for the democratic stunt actress" but this was not the charge against him. Indeed, the actual charge provided little basis for the prison term, let alone solitary confinement ou Death Row - in that he was accused only of owning two unlicensed fax machines and nine telephones. However telephone-tapping by military intelligence is a major industry in Burma; and this year the Burmese military has been determined to remove all possible lines of communication between the Burmese opposition leader and international media that evade their control.

Nichols's arrest was the first of many, for more than 250 NLD members were detained as they prepared to attend a party conference at Aung San Suu Kyi's house at the end of May. Most have now been released. but a number have disappeared - including two of those who, like Nichols, were close to the NLD leader on a personal basis. These were her consin, U Aye Win and the NLD spokesman U Win Htein.

Nichols was confined in Insein Prison in Rangoon. He died, reportedly of a stroke, after being rushed to Rangoon General Hospital. The Danish foreign minister has demanded an investigation into whether he was being given proper medical treatment in prison, particularly for his known diabetes and heart condition. Yet it was a measure of Lco Nichols's courage that he had always known the risk he ran by continuing to associate with the Burmese opposition leader - the probability of arrest sooner or later, and the high level of mortality in Burmese prisons, of medical causes alone. Back in 1989 he had been picked up once before, at the time of Aung San Suu Kyi's own detention; on that occasion he had been released, but a Muslim businessman who was arrested at the same time had died for lack of medical treatment. "Uncle Leo", as he was known, was no soldier or politician, but was not willing to be a party to the regime's efforts to isolate Anng San Suu Kyi. In death, he becomes a hero of the democracy movement. Derek Brooke-Wavell

James Leander (Leo) Nichols, businessman: born Rangoon 8 June 1931; married 1951 (five children); died Rangoon 22 June

Ilona Ference

-Ilona Ference was a talented and useful member of any theatrical production - although in appearance and temperament she was, in George Bernard Shaw's words, one of "Pharaoh's lean kind". She was one of those scrawny but admirable actresses - Mary Merrall, Joyce Carey and Una O'Connor spring to mind who graced fine plays with fine performances even if they were perhaps precluded by their pert, bird-like qualities from full richness of character. As Athene Sevier used to say of her Prossie in Shaw's Candida.

Spare, my dear, spare." She was born Ilona Hegedus. of Hungarian descent, in Bar Harbor, Maine, in 1917, the eldest of three daughters, all musicians, of the violinist Ferencz Hegedüs and Kate Buckley, both accomplished soloists in their own right. Although their eldest child Ilona remained a music lover throughout her life, the stage was her main interest and, being bilingual, she played in both French and English theatres after a wide education in Austria, Hungary, France and Belgium.

In London she studied for the stage at Rada. There, her scholarly gifts and interest in travel as well as a literary outlook caught the eye of W.H. Auden, Stephen Spender and Rupert Doone. She was cast in such plays and divertissements as The Ascent of F6 and Trial of a Judge; later dubbing under the management of Nancy Price -"Nancy Cut-Price", they used to call her - in Karel Capek's Insect Play at the now defunct Lit-tle Theatre off the Strand. She spoke broad American and decided to make England her main country of residence after winning a coveted Leverhulme scholarship securing her acceptance to Rada. I had worked with Ilona Ference already when I took a chance to cast her, as a slip of a girl, in the demanding role of Mrs Manningham in Patrick Hamilton's gruelling melodrama Gas Light at the Scala Theatre in Tottenham Court Road (also now defunct).

I had been seconded from the Queen's Westminster Regiment, which I had joined at the outbreak of the Second World War. It was considered all in the interests of good Anglo-American relations for an English director to join on loan the American army drama unit based in London, and for them to have not an American-born but a British director, especially one who had already been associated, albeit as an actor, with a number of American plays, such as Theodore Dreiser's The Hand of the Potter and Clifford Odets's Golden Boy (when my co-star was Pamela Brown).

Ference as a student had performed to such good effect that I thought that here was a chance for an American now based in England to play Mrs Manningham. Gas Light had already been seen at the Apollo Theatre in Shaftesbury Avenue with a star cast and on the British screen with Diana Wynyard in the leading part (a hard act to follow). In the event, Ference, surrounded by an all-American cast, several of them more than held her own; her own English was almost perfect. Ilona Ference was versatile and accepted direction well and I was glad to be able to use her subsequently in seasons of plays I produced at my own little theatre founded after the war, the New Lindsey, and later still when one of the plays, the sensational Pick-Up Girl, which received the stamp of approval from no less a custodian of morals than Queen Mary herself (who saw a special private performance by com-mand), was transferred to two of the largest theatres in the West End of London. It had long runs and made a star of Ference knew how to project" (a rare gift). Whether the play was Odets's Rocket to the Moon produced at the St Martin's, in which she was cast as a helpless young wife in downtown New York, or whether it was a West End revival of such a modern classic as Somerset Maugham's For Services Rendered at the New Lindsey or Thomas Robertson's "costume" comedy Cast, Ference succeeded in sparkling. Whether at the Library Theatre, Manchester, in J.B. Priestley's An Inspector Calls, or touring the Welsh coalfields in the title-role of Eugene O'Neill's early masterpiece Anna Christie, the actress invariably made an impression through her more than one artist in its lengthy cast. In the relatively minor role of a court reporter

It was during the run of one of these many productions that she met and married an actor, London 12 June 1996.

diction, body language and

Antony Kearey, later to leave the stage and become much better known for his radio and television work as a producer. The couple had two children, both boys, before they divorced after a comparatively short marriage; and a change of fortune accompanied by bad health caused Ference to retire from acting during her last 10 years of life. She concentrated instead on what she finally could do most easily through her knowledge of foreign languages - writing for radio and television better parts for other actresses than she could finally find for

I recall with particular pleasure Ference's Kristin, the cook in Strindberg's Miss Julie, with Joan Miller in the title-role, in a successful season at the Lyric, Hammersmith, and earlier still at Manchester in the late Forties when she was in the first revival for many years of Ibsen's penultimate masterpiece John Gabriel Borkman. Here she played opposite Miller again; one of two sisters who were dominated by the same man in their lives - both in love with the disgraced Borkman who haunted them to the end of their days. Ella Rentheim as played by Joan Miller and Mrs Borkman by Ilona Ference made mighty drama of what could have been, but for its writing and acting, a trite situation.

Ilona Hegedüs (Ilona Ference). actress and dramatist: born Bar Harbor, Maine 10 October 1917; married Antony Kearey (two sons; marriage dissolved);

ntheim, in Peter Cotes's Forties

Jean Gimpel

Jean Gimpel was a man of great physical and intellectual energy, with a big heart and strong sense of justice. A profound and very practical interest in technology, and especially that of the Middle Ages, was the thread that ran through his working life. It yielded two classic studies, The Cathedral Builders (1958) and The Medieval Machine: the Industrial Revolution of the Middle Ages (1976), underpinned two further books. The Cult of Art: against art and artists (1968) and The End of the Future (1995), and helped make him an effective saboteur in the French Resistance. For his services during the Second World War he was awarded the Croix de Guerre, the Médaille de Résistance and the Légion d'Honneur.

Gimpel liked to say that he lived between four cultures: those of France, England, the United States and the 13th

Gimpel: deeds as well as words century. He was born in Paris in 1918, the third son of the wellknown art dealer René Gimpel, a friend of Monet, Renoir and Proust whose journals he would eventually edit. His mother was the sister of an even more famous English dealer, Lord

Peter and Charles, who was captured and tortured by the Germans and died in 1973, founded their own gallery in London in

Initially Jean shared the fam-

ilv enthusiasm for art, and contemplated a career as an expert on the chemistry of Old Master paintings. Eventually, however, he decided to combine earning a living as a diamond broker, first in Paris and then, from 1963, in London, with writing. His research for The Cathedral Builders confirmed his revulsion against art, later spelt out in his book-length diatribe The Cult of Art. Compared with the nameless craftsmen and unsung engineers and architects of the Middle Ages. artists from the Renaissance onwards were, he argued, egotis-tic and self-indulgent, if not actually fraudulent: for example, many of Leonardo da engineers. To deify such pedlars of dispensable luxuries was. he believed, as logical as worshipping relics.

The Cathedral Builders was written in French as Les Batisseurs de Cathédrales and sold more than 100,000 copies in France alone. In addition to being stuffed with fresh and fascinating information, it demonstrated that France's great cathedrals were built not just to the glory of God but by the finest professional architects and craftsmen of the time.

In The Medieval Machine, a broader study, he sought to demonstrate that the technological revolution of the Middle Ages; focused on mills and especially water-mills, was no less remarkable than the Industrial Revolution. He found many striking parallels between the technological boom of the 10th Duveen. His two brothers, Vinci's "inventions" were bor- and 13th centuries in Western rowed from treatises by earlier Europe and the one that started around 1750.

After detailed comparison of parallel developments in France between 1050 and 1265 and the United States between 1850 and 1953, he concluded that America had subsequently entered a period of terminal decline that would bring Westem civilisation down with it. These Cassandra-like warnings were the focus of an international conference on the decline of the West in Los Angeles in 1977 and were amplified in his last book, The End of the Future.

Gimpel was a man of deeds as well as words. Dismayed by the pre-medieval level of technology in the rural areas of many Third World countries, he sought to introduce patchily known inventions such as the Archimedean screw for lifting water from one level to another. To explain their benefits across language barriers he revived the concept of three-dimensional models, establishing in 1977 a charitable project, Models for Rural Development, to propagate them in partnership with Appropriate Technology Ltd. A miller in the foothills of the Himalayas, for example, rapidly recognised the greater effectiveness of the spoon-shaped blades of a 19thcentury Romanian water-mill when compared with the 2,000year-old Nepalese version. The bursts. former was soon adapted as part of the Nepalese government's five-year plan. Gimpel also devised models to show how not to do things; such as allowing animals too close to a well, or coughing TB-infected sputum over children. These "negative" models were extensively used on the Indian subcontinent and in Africa.

Africa. daughuer); died London 15 June Gimpel loved the stimulus of 1996.

intelligent friends, especially female ones, and he and his wife Catherine, a Breton and former fellow Resistance member whom he married just 50 years ago, held a kind of Sunday afternoon salon several weeks of the year at their Chelsea Embankment flat. Among the assembled writers, scientists, doctors, historians and the like, their volatile host moved, firing off his enthusiasms and prejudices in rapid, French-accented

Few people can have more effectively or agreeably bridged the gap between C.P. Snow's "two cultures" of science and the humanities.

Roger Berthoud

Jean Victor Gimpel, historian of technology: born Paris 10 October 1918; married 1946 Catherine Cara (two sons, one

Sir Fitzroy Maclean

In 1967, as a Russian-speaking member of BBC television's Documentary Department, I was asked if I would work with Sir Fitzroy Maclean in making a film about the Soviet Union, writes Malcolm Brown [further to the obituary by Frank McLynn on 19 June]. It was basically Eastern Approaches revisited - to be shown on the 50th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution. This would require two extensive journeys, one for reconnaissance, the second with a film team. It was to be one of the happiest and most enriching collaborations of my 26 years as a BBC staff producer. Our friendship was barely 10 minutes old when he told me to drop the "Sir" and call him Fitzroy, Fitzy, or even Fitz; I settled for Fitzroy. He was a youthful enthusiast and the possessor of an almost schoolboyish sense of humour, and we were able to pun frequently and execrably in two languages. "Lux", or to transliterate more correctly. "Lyooks", was the top grade of travel offered in the Soviet Union by Intourist; the modest quip "If Lyooks could kill" had us both in laughter for hours.

He knew his Soviet Union well. One evening at the famous National Hotel opposite Red Square, he took me down a corridor to point out the corner room where Commander Courtney MP had been filmed in flagrante by the KGB. Later, when about to fly from Tashkent to Baku over the Caspian Sea, I expressed pleasure that our Russian minders had put us first on board our Byushin-18. "You know what this means," he said, "we are going to fly over some important military installation, and so will be put in a place of honour opposite the wing where we can't see anything." He was right He also knew his Central Asia. Flying at 30,000 feet one magical evening and gazing through the aircraft window at a distant frieze of mountains, I felt a tap on the knee. "Those," said Fitzroy, "are the high Pamirs." It was rather like being shown the Empty Quarter by Wilfred Thesiger. He spoke Russian with an effortless ease and a strong Eton-ian accent. Right-wing MP that he was, the Russians loved him and he returned their affection. He was splendid at getting to his feet at the kind of occasions when toasts in vodka were drunk to everything that anybody could think of and at contriving speeches which put everyone in high good-humour. Our programme, transmitted under the title The Other Russians, collected a huge audience on BBC1: and was later shows to much acclaim in the series The World About Us on BBC2.

Births. Marriages & Deaths

BIRTHS

STUDBOLME: On 22 June, to James and Char (née Pilcher), a son, Arthur John Gilfred.

DEATHS

BODEN: Neville, sculptor, husband, fa-ther, lover and friend, died 24 June. His caring advice is irreplaceable. Fu-neral. Monday I July. midday, Is-lington Cemetery. High Road. London N2. Flowers to Recknell & Foster, S1 Green Lanes, London N16 9BN by 9.70m N16 9BX, by 9.30am.

COX: Sir Gordon, KBE FRS, on 23 June, aged 90. Formerly Secretary of the Agricultural Research Council, Beloved and loving busband of Mary
"Rosaleen and of the late Lucie Groce, father of Patricia and Keith, grand-father and great-grandfather. Fu-neral at 2.30pm on Friday 28 June at Golders Green Crematorium, Hoor Lane, London NW11. No flowers please but donations if desired to Friends of RFH/Projects, The Royal Free Hospital, Pond Street, London NW3 2QG, or to the Edenhall Marie Curie Centre, 11 Lyndhurst Gar-dens, London NW3 5NS.

Announcements for Gazette BIRTHS, MARRIAGES & DEATHS (Births, Adoptions, Marriages, Deaths, Memorial services, Wedding anniversaries, In Memoriam) should be sent in writing to the Gazette Editor, The Independent, I Canada Square, Canary Wharf, Loudon E14 5DL, telephoned to 0171-293 2011 (answering mechine 0171-293 2012) or faxed to 0171-293 2010, and are charged at £6.50 a line (VAT extra).

Birthdays Mr Claudio Abbado, conductor, 63;

Sir Campbell Adamson, former chairman, Abbey National pic, 74; Sir Alan Bailey, former Permanent Sec-retary, Department of Transport, 65; Professor Kenneth Barker, Vice-Chancellor and Chief Executive, De Montfort University, 62; Mr Leslie Monitori University, 6.2; Mr Lesne Carpenter, former chairman, Reed International, 69; Mr Georgie Fame, singer and songwriter, 53; Dr Alexan-der Fenton, director, European Ethnological Research Centre, Edinburgh, 67; Mr William Hamilton, tormer MP, 79; Rear-Admiral Sir David Haslam, hydrographer, 73; Professor Ruth Kempson, linguist, 52; Mr Syd Lawrence, bandleader, 72; Mr Lawrence, bandleader, bandleader, bandleader, bandleader, bandleader, ban Mr Laurie Lee, poet and author, 82; Mr Robert Maclennan MP, 60; Six Peter Miles, former Keeper of the Privy Purse, 72; Miss Eleanor Parker, actress, 74: Professor Sir Alan Pea-cock, economist, 74: Mr Peter Pike MP, 59; Mr Nicholas Polumin, environmentalist, 87; Lord Rawlinson of Ewell QC, former Attorney-General, 77: Professor Maurice Wilkes, computer scientist, 83; Mr Colin Wilson, author, 65; Mr David

Anniversaries

Births: William Thomson, first Baron Kelvin, physicist and inventor, 1824; Pearl Sydenstricker Buck, novelist, 1892; Willy Messerschmitt, aircraft designer, 1898, Peter Larre (Laszlo Locwenstein), actor, 1904. Deaths: The Rev Gilbert White, naturalist and cleric, 1793; Joseph-Michel Montgolfier, balloonist, 1810; Samuel Crompton, inventor of the spinning mule, 1827; Ford Madox Ford, nov-elist and poet, 1939; Carl Foreman, film producer, 1984; George Horace Gallup, poll organiser, 1984. On this day: Christ's Hospital (the Bluecoat School) was granted its charter, 1553; Victoria Crosses were awarded to 62 men of the army and navy by Queen Victoria in Hyde Park, 1857; the Order of Merit was instituted by King Edward VII. 1902: the new Victoria and Albert Mus opened, 1909; the United Nations Charter was signed by 50 nations in San Francisco, 1945; the first London production of the musical show Grease was presented, 1973, Today is the Feast Day of St Antheli bishop, St John of the Goths, St Maxentius, St Pelagius of Cordova, Saints Salvius or Sauve and Superius and St Vigilius of Trent.

Lectures National Gallery: Kathleen Adler, "Degas (iv): 'The same thing over again', Degas and Repetition'', 1pm. Victoria and Albert Museum: Angela Cox, "Portrait Miniatures", 2.30pm. Tate Gallery: Geoffrey Stewart, "A Painter's View of Sickert"; 1pin; Andrew Saint, "London: viewing beyond the gallery (iii). People's Architecture: 'Art beyond the Gallery' and the public good", 6.30pm. Exeter University: Professor Roger Fieldhouse, "Adult Education: post, Commonwealth Parliamentary

present and future", 5.15pm.

Association The Annual General Meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association UK Branch was held yesterday in the House of Commons, London SW1. Miss Betty Boothroyd MP, Speaker of the House of Com-mons, presided.

Appointments

Judge David Wilcox, to sit in the Official Referees Court in London. Mr James Ralph Barton, to be a full-time Chairman of Industrial Tribunals, assigned to the Newcastle

Mr David John Latham, to be a fulltime Chairman of Industrial Tribunals, assigned to the Leeds Region. Mr John Christopher Phipps, to be a circuit judge, assigned to the North-

Mr Henry Oliver Blacksell QC, to be a circuit judge, assigned to the South Eastern Circuit. Mr Roger Clements, Mr Stephen Magama-Hamaford and Mr Thomas Wadsworth, to be Practising Fellows of the Academy of Experts.

ROYAL ENGAGEMENTS The Deliver Millisherigh wirts the Chy Berlandogy Col-lege, Sing-knest, Birmshipstr; and as Fatron, Curiwan Byund Pint, attends a Gala Dimer and Bull at the Notocycle Minseum, Solibult West Middands, The Princers Royal, Pannan, Evanowagan (Goldes, attends a Nasional Council Meeting at Carviff International Areas, Occellie, and Opens a new wing of Fill Prison and Reymond Contro. Carviff. The Dade of Guescette States BUS Commune Let (Generochters ent Silvan-tion BUS Commune Let (Generochters ent Silvanand Regulard Centre. Cardid: The Date of Cissocsies wight BLS Company Lie (Bernaphies and Steeringthes), Perivaic, Groupford, Middlesse. The Datebase of Girmentee, Fativa, Royal Stogged Add Scienty, presents the Americk for Custanding Achievement in Architecture and Octation of Buildings for Elektry Femilie. with Demontic, at Droppes' Half, London E.C. The Date of Kent President, Study, de convergence convenience of the Company of the Co

Changing of the Guard The Household Cavalry Monaged Regiment mousts the Queen's Life Caterd at Begge Guirds, Lister, Let Battsallow Welds Guards success the Queen's Chard. at Sactinetum Patros, 11.30ml, bund provided by the

New rules on refugees' benefits invalid

Regina v Secretary of State for Social Security, ex parte B and another; Court of Appeal (Lord Justice Neill, Lord Justice Simon Brown, Lord Justice Waite) 21 Jane 1996

Subsidiary legislation must not only be within the vires of the enabling statute, but must also be drawn so as not to conflict with statutory rights already enacted by other primary legisla-

The Court of Appeal by a majority (Lord Justice Neill dissenting) allowed an appeal by the applicants, an asylum seeker referred to as B and the Joint' Council for the Welfare of Immigrants, against the decision of the Queen's Bench Divisional Court on 26 March 1996, and upheld their challenge, by judicial review, to the validity of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendment

Regulations 1996 (SI 30). Nicholas Blake QC and Francis Webber (Christian Fisher) for the applicants; Stephen Richards and Stephen Kovats (P.R.J. Thomson, solicitor, DHSS) for the respondent.

Lord Justice Simon Brown said that in essence the regulations removed all entitle-

LAW REPORT

ment to income-related henefit from two classes of asylum seeker: those who submitted their claims for asylum otheramended by 1993 SI 1679. wise than immediately upon arrival in the UK, and those whose claims had been rejected by the Home Secretary but who then appealed to the independent appellate authorities. The Secretary of State's intention was to discourage economic migrants from making and pursuing asylum claims and to speed up the system to the advantage of the genuine refugee. It would also save the taxpayer some £200m a year.

The applicants claimed the regulations were ultra vires. The enabling power could not have been intended to permit this degree of interference with statutory rights under the Asyium and immigration Appeals Act 1993 and/or fundamental human rights.

Prior to the new regulations. all asylum seekers were entitled to "urgent cases" payments amounting to 90 per cent of normal income support benefit, and to housing and other benefits "passported" through income support: see reg 70 of the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987 (SI 1967) as

The new regulations were made in exercise of powers conferred in particular by sections 135, 137 and 175 of the Social Security (Contributions and Benefits) Act 1992. They amended regulations 21 and 70 of the 1987 Regulations so as to remove entitlement to urgent cases payments from all asylum seekers save those who submitted a claim for asylum on arrival in the UK, and even then entitlement ceased on the date

the Home Secretary recorded the claim to have been determined or abandoned. They also removed any entitlement to housing benefit in corresponding circumstances. The new regulations did not conflict with the 1993 Act merely because they were designed to reduce the numbers of those invoking rights of application and appeal under that Act. But it could hardly be doubted that some genuine asylum seekers as well as bogus ones were likely to be deterred by penury from pursuing their claims and thus forced to return to the very persecu-tion from which they had sought to escape. Specific statutory rights were not to be cut down by subordinate legislation passed under the vires of a different Act. The asylum seekers' rights under the 1993 Act were, it was said, being gravely interfered with by the new regulations. The regulations should therefore be struck down in accordance with the principle adopted in Rv Home Secretary, ex p Leech [1994] QB 198.

Parliament had clearly demonstrated by the 1993 Act a full commitment to the UK's obligations under the 1951 UN Convention on the status of refugees, as amended by the 1967 Protocol. Yet these regulations, for some genuine asylum seekers at least, must be regarded as rendering their rights under that Act nugator ry. Either that, or the regulations necessarily contemplated for some a life so destitute that no civilised nation could tolerate it. The regulations were so draconian in effect that they must be held to be ultra vires.

Paul Magrath, Barrister

Sir Film

عبكذا من الاجل

unit trusts

Foreign Exchange Rates D-MARK Spot DOLLAR Spot 1 ms 1000 13534 15322 5596 1698 12936 1293 06527 08672 10005 7.1850 05277 20576 38502 1207 0427 0426 4.3267 08260 50506 16310 08266 08266 8-5 T 100-500 T 2-0 84-81 217-201 23-25 126-25 12-25 12-17 10-80 64-72 113-17 54-58 53-50 88-90 9-91 113-88 15409 20947 23609 75997 16809 12460 46580 90964 10574 10574 10576 10574 10574 10576 10574 10576 10574 10576 105776 10576 -126-24 26-24 73-86 46-44 7-8 55-85-22 42-77-77 24-14 24-14 24-73 24-73 24-73 24-73 24-73 24-73 24-73 OTHER SPOT RATES Dollar 0.9967 10.7832 10029 8.3206 3.4090 4.6329 1635.00 34,9000 0.3000 Sterling 131078 0.5834 538796 40.455 242.487 58086 78.4727 6.728 42.6880 5.6816 Country
Nigeria Omen
Publisher
Publisher
Portugel
Caser
Fluste
South Afric
Telwan
UAE Coller 85,0000 03850 34,9550 26,2200 157,350 36,410 60,9100 43,950 27,9330 3,6730 Sterring 15394 15469 15469 15469 15469 15776 25855 371685 537775 04621 4 quoted in the paid in Argentina Augaria, Baszif
China
Egypt
Friland
Ghena
Greece
India
Kureak
Notes Forward
high are et a p Jorejon auchen 7 125.77 7 125.77 9 125 7 9 125 7 10 12 Tourist Rates · 医医院外外的数数数数 77488 22900 #50000 THESOS 09425 2220000 THESOS 05460 France(Fri Germany) Greece(I)-Hong Kon Indiand(Pus Indiand(Pus Indiand(I)-18875 181900 473200 20450 07030 88700 25700 70850 779 9234 9234 9235 9237 9237 9237 Interest Rates US Prime Dispoint Fed Funds Spale 10-Day Rept Sweden 875% 500% 525% T25% Discount
Lombard
Canada
Prime Discount
Decount
Discount 250% 450% 250% 330% 150% 4125% Bond Yields 7844 689 238 851 555 584 Yield 5:39 8:21 8:78 5:60 7:43 6:01 5 yr 71% 625% 551% 834% 5381% 10 yr 61% 10:5% 10:5% 7% 6% 7% yinti 649 890 943 679 821 696 10 yr 7 %-3 88% 31% 862% 825/1 736% 796 736 830 827 837 836 836 Napata Spain taly Belgium Sweden ECLI OAT Money Market Rates 5'1 6 6 54 55 52 67 527 5²4 Liffe Financial Futures SatContas tracked 1154 91730 1675 31092 6996 9456 650 200 21667 21657 427 427 5895 19427 Open interest 7948 195817 0 59426 85975 79744 N/A 205083 7258 4427 40520 83906 83944 price 108-28 95.30 118.55 118.69 94.23 94.72 96.80 96.80 95.84 97.23 367.50 4400.0 Long Git German Bor J.G.Bond Italian Bond 3M Sterling 95.13 95.13 118.46 118.55 94.22 94.20 98.27 96.40 96.58 95.58 95.58 95.52 97.27 36650 106-28 95.34 11855 11894 94.24 94.09 98.72 98.40 96.60 95.44 97.34 97.34 Liffe FT-SE Index Option 9710e 3700 31/55 52/81 75/101 92/112 194 155 150 150 69.74 109.56 35.21 202.40 Call/Put 3650 3650 58/31 78/57 100/77 120/90 Series July Aug Sep Oct 3600 93/17 106/38 131/57 152/72 3750 13/88 32/111 52/128 69/138 Co 5 - Londo Cash 1511-12 1260-70 1965-10 769-90 7640-58 6235-45 10225-1015 Ct 15403 295-1900 1938-40 1938-40 1938-40 795-95 7955-60 1931-315 200-45 1931-44 Volume 90275 110 190081 539 9220 3621 1035 . 85205 270425 82425 32304 15566 575375 Inck volumentes 84 8 E Coine 254/0 Bitamia 8490 Bitamia 5 cz 336 Bitamia 5 cz 2992 Bitamia 10 cz $ 402 203 103 52 376/88 244/52 88/94 57/61 385/400 250/60 365/402 251/61 Bartey LCE Sep Nov Jan Vot Wheat LCE Jul Sep Nov Yat 1/2000e 105.00 106.75 106.70 47 APA Jun Apr Vol: LCE Nov Mar Apr Yot: Cora CBOTIF Jul Sep Dec Setti 46650 39175 35625 xuma Cad PL/100kg Sitome Sitome PL/100kg Sitome Soya Offi Coconut Of (†) Sunflower Offi Repessed Offi Grandhut Off 9450 8700 5700 980 850 unq 1580 7230 8880 3600 Aug Maylisma July Aug/Oct June/July 2010 Color C 6pm Spot CF Nor 1885 Unleaded Ga 1830 Naphrina 1885 EC Gesci 1880 Henry Fuel Ci 1 ICS-Lendon Oll Repo Spot CF North West Unlended Gasoline Naphtra. EC Gesoll Heavy Fuel Cli Europe 1967 EA 1797 E3 1621 E4 867 E6 ciose 19825 19876 19825 COMMODITY INDICES
COST Indices Day Chg -017 +073 -047 -140 -016 +003 Dec 31st 20350 29175 7131 8332 18271 48936 +Spet 20083 28440 7066 15248 18523 48780 -141 +094 -491 -595 +138 -046 175-47 248-90 565-9 207-87 1740-6 501-86 +1434 +1392 +2457 -2184 +841 -284 100 Largest Insurance Funds 08am | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | 190 | Abbey returnational for a Abbey returning the Y-A Abbey Historial Hamaged Ser 4 Abbey Historial Hamaged Ser 5 Abbey Historial Hamaged Ser 5 Abbey Egypt For Ser 3 Allad Durbar Egypt For Ser 5 Abbey Historial Hamaged For Allad Durbar Historial For Ser 6 Abbey Hamaged For Allad Durbar Hamaged For 8 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 6 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 6 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 7 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 7 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 8 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 8 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 8 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 6 Ser 6 And Styley & Law Die Ser 7 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 8 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 8 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 8 ANA Styley & Law Die Ser 9 ANA Styley & Styley & Styley Art Styley Art Styley & Styley & Art Styley & Sty 6807 1728 6768

517 6049 605 5492 10549 623 623 623 623 Standt Cas. The ing Stant Cas. The ing Stant Cas. The Acc of K German (red) List Space Stan List General (red) List General (r Pay 5245 6470 2011 3715 11380 2014 1718 | The color of the 2018 2018 2019 2013 2013 2013 2013 2013 2013 2013 The Control of the Acres of the circipants speed process in the process of the proc 6844 5815 4635 3044 5221 4239 4048 5319 4439 6836 6836 6836 6836 255527500 5560 0560 07250 256 25750 0566 07750 256 25750 0566 07750 256 25750 0566 07750 256 9437 25.5 8372 3800 $4.4 185.34 28.56 3083 48.8 52.87 54.4 84.8 184.5 184.8 141.7 184.91 1175 6442 081 090 100 100 238 327 45 45 908 908 908 908 2015 248 254 147 255 2016 167 1728 267 273 274 267 274 274 267 274 274 267 274 274 267 274 274 267 267 274 267 Dominist Unit Tist the Constinues of Tiff ConConstinues UT Acc
Constinues UT Acc
Constitues UT Acc
Could (Heavy) Insustry
Addressign Concerns
Addressign Exposers
Addressign Exposers
Addressign Exposers
Addressign Exposers
AC SQ Securities
Could Title
Following
Following Title
Following
Following Illnesis Hallesal
Goortis
Goortis
Incolnes
Goortis
Incolnes
Japan
Japan December of the American Process of the Control of 2900 5207 5373 7670 6529 6623 2854 2854 2829 3543 243 243 056 056 429 426 224 224 22(9 59(0), 2025 2084 4686 60(1) 61(9) 943 246 226 226 2729 423 244 806 2048 2048 85.6 780 IFF Interestant Stimung IIFF Interestant Stimung IIFF American Diel IFF American Diel IFF European Act IFF European Act IFF European Act IFF Interestant Can Act IFF INTERESTANT INTERESTA 952 28337 8005 704 8179 559 405 5149 5742 4523 3945 9948 1928 1929 7840 1952 3962 7655 2126 3963 1922 2349 1448 1252 2969 66466 22322 154666 15466 1083 1184 6857 8862 4228 180 8624 8459 1019 5763 5763 2560 2560 | Figure Cap Public | Sil | Si File Court United Facult Unite 1969 1914 5721 6582 482 1980 3088 1947 2050 1772 1762 2253 Berton
Be | Section | Sect | Text | | THE COLUMN | THE ## Service | 64.12 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 101 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124 | 124

Formation of the control of the cont 9064 1539 4960 1239 1349 1338 6483 1824 1827 98.45 163.7 $2.0 1916 1836 1836 172.8 172.8 Several Constitution of the constitution of th  572 C29
 572 C29
 572 C29
 572 C39
 572 C39
 572 C39
 572 C31
 572 C31
 572

1405年 1405年

| 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 | 1986 |

Semestro Medical Acc
Semestro Medical Acc
For State Gardy Acc
August Queste Acc
August Spirit State
Acc
August Spirit State
Acc
August Spirit State
Acc
August Spirit Spirit Acc
August Spirit
August
Aug

The state of the s

ext dividend ext; charge applies when units are sold formerly 'bid' formerly 'bid' & recognised funds

out ast CJ atl

on $300

erdict the worker we tural can today, anklin, 5 full fitnes sek in onl se of Cre , a York : "I have a natural of is one of auses. I lose frien tid after we enough puestion of auses of auses. ve it was really low ad been ar er. If it we that was i mer wife, Avenue, his roast I'm convi uld have if people nt sure." 10logist, from Li from Li y, who can unation ild the ind from CJI usual for triant, he such a in no statist between i an abati id that had grad a period irst, he lo is sense to unable Tered fro

ked at a hs in 198 ved in th

ng CJD is equires a it can be

949.7 470.3 459.4 279.4 345.4

Psion's £230m Amstrad takeover Reluctant boffing well-organised

BUSINESS NEWS DESK: tel 0171-293 2636 fax 0171-293 2098

move catches City by surprise

TOM STEVENSON and PATRICK TOOHER

Psion is close to making an agreed takeover of Amstrad. In a move that caught the City by surprise yesterday, the successful personal organiser maker hopes to acquire Alan Sugar's once high-flying computers to mobile phones group for at

The deal was instigated by Mr Sugar, who stands to pocket £80m from the takeover and wants to concentrate on his newfound passion for the moneyspinning world of Premier League football where he already controls and chairs Tottenham Hotspur.

Assuming all goes well with Psion's due diligence over the next three weeks, the maker of the best-selling Series 3 organiser will bring to an end the uncomfortable stand-off between Amstrad and the City. Relations have never recovered from Mr Sugar's failed attempt in 1992 to take Amstrad private at the equivalent of 150p a share.

Psion said yesterday it was in negotiations with Amstrad that would lead to a deal worth at

Alan Sugar: Stands to make least 200p a share. Following any deal, a joint statement from the companies said yesterday. Mr Sugar will own about 15 per cent of the enlarged group. He will not join Psion's board al-though a possible "deal-makin Amstrad lay in Dancall, the company's mobile phone manufacturing operation that was one of the first cellular phone hile telephony.

proached Psion about two months ago with a view to selling Amstrad. Psion was initially sceptical about the prospects of putting the two businesses together but became increasingy enthusiastic as the deal was role is being considered.

David Potter, an academic South African with a doctorate in mathematical physics, will remain as chairman and chief executive of the enlarged group he founded in 1980. Yesterday he said: "We are not buying Amstrad as perceived by its brand and name. Amstrad is in ashes. We are buying the phoenix in those ashes He said Psion's main interest businesses to develop the GSM digital standard. He believes Dancall will help in the fusion of portable computers and mo-Mr Potter said Mr Sugar ap-

Analysis broadly welcomed the move, which will almost double the size of Psion. After a meteoric rise in its share price, the proposed all share deal is seen as an efficient way of getting hold of Amstrad's £85m cash pile as well as its trading businesses. They reckon Amstrad should fetch up to 250p a share on a sum-of-the-parts basis. But Andrew Bryant at NatWest warned: "David Potter has got quite a job selling this to Psion's shareholders. It is not

Phoenix from the ashes: Psion chairman David Potter said, 'we are not buying Amstrad as perceived by its brand name'

Psion, which plunged into last December and the conthe red in 1991 after problems with its range of hand-held computers, has recovered sharply since on the back of soaring demand for its products which shoehorn the computing power of a desktop machine into a case little more than the size of a pocket diary. Profits of £1.42m in 1992 in-sensus of brokers' forecasts now points to £15.8m before tax this year and more than £20m Since late 1992, when Psion's shares fell as low as 23p, they have outperformed the market by a massive margin, growing 19-fold by the time they peaked last month at 468p. Yesterday creased to £11.7m in the year to worries about the impact of the Amstrad deal sent the shares 25p lower to 350p.

Psion is also attracted by Viglen, Amstrad's successful direct-sales computer manufacturer, which is already profitable and would allow Psion to develop new products and widen the spread of its business. But Psion is unlikely to want Amstrad's core consumer electronics busieral years in the highly competitive markets for commodity products such as satellite dishes.

Shares in Amstrad, a huge success in the 1980s when Alan Sugar brought computers to the masses with a range of basic word-processing machines, rose 37p to 185p on news of the talks. In the last nine months they have tumbled from nearly 260p as the

for commerce

TOM STEVENSON City Editor

It would be hard to think of a more unlikely pair of corporate bedfellows than David Potter and Alan Sugar. In manner, personality and background, the founders of Psion and Amstrad could not be more different.

While brash, acerbic Sugar became a household name in the 1980s by bringing computers to the masses, and more recently through his often stormy relationship with Tottenham Hotspur, the more urbane, intellectual Potter is a great deal less familiar than his best-known product, Psion's best-selling personal electronic organiser.

He hates the tag but it is hard to avoid calling Potter a boffin. Having won a scholarship to read natural sciences at Trinity College, Cambridge, Potter took a first and went on to complete a doctorate in mathematical physics at Imperial College in London.

Potter, however, is no anorak. A tall, charming and fearsomely intelligent South African, he couples enormous technical expertise with a determined commercial awareness.

Sit down with Potter and he will take you through the possibilities represented by the fusion of computing and telecommunications. But there is also a firm understanding that the deverest gizmo is worthless if it fails to make money. He is the technology shareholder's dream chief executive.

Born 53 years ago to relative poverty in East London, a charming port on the South African coast, Potter has always been driven by a desire to make money. An early business venture was a photographic studio run during his school holidays.

expertise but no anorak

But in 1974, when the Lankan market crashed to a post-war low, he called his London bank manager from California and told him to spend the £3,000 het had on deposit on a handful of technology shares including Xerox and the then fledgling Racal. By 1979, Potter was worth £100,000, a successful analyser of small companies but hand business experience investment provided. Getting together with friends to write programs for Sir Clive Sinclair's, he started Psion - the name stands for Potter Scientific Instruments with an Exconstyle flourish to add gravitas. Potter carries his £60m net ultimately bored by the second-worth with ease, but he is a harsh critic of the City. When shortterm difficulties sent the company into the red in 1991. investors all but abandoned him.

He also has little time for the UK's academic system which he believes fails to provide scientists and engineers with enough basic business training. As a result, he argues, UK companies novation but few have translated

Pru float-off set to raise £500m

NIC CICUTTI

Prudential, the UK's largest insurer, yesterday sparked widespread City expectations of a changes of being able to acquire takeover bid for a building so- a life company or a building society or a life company by anof its reinsurance subsidiary Mercantile & General. The sale is likely to raise at least £500m.

Analysts reacted by predict-ing an imminent bid by Prudential for Woolwich Building Society, which itself is preparing for a £3bn stock market flotation next year. Prudential's shares rose 40 to 409p vesterday. However, Peter Davis, group chief executive at Prudential, appeared to dampen down the City's bid fever by suggesting that any likely acquisition was up to 18 months away. Woolwich intends to put its own conversion plans to members early next year.

Mr Davis said of the market speculation: "It is a bit disappointing when we are trying to carry out a review and trying to decide what is best strategically for Mercantile and ourselves. We have made no secret of our intentions in that area. Because we have been very open, the markets have been expecting us to do it overnight."

Mr Davis added: "The

ciety at a sensible price and to do Expectations have been unrealistic. It might take a bit longer than the market appears to be expecting." He said that floating off about half of Mercantile, valued yesterday by analysts at up to £1.2bn, would occupy much of Prudential's time before late autumn, when the partial listing was expected to take place, subject to market conditions. The sale of Mercantile fol-tire Prudential group, which has led the company to decide to concentrate on retail financial services and associated fund management activity.

Mercantile is one of the the management [there] would world's big reinsurers, operating in more than 100 countries. In 1995, the company had wrote gross premiums of £1.3bn and contributed £196m, almost 25 per cent, to the group's pre-tax listing for about half the sub-

Mr Davis said: "After careful consideration, we have decided that the synergy between Prudential and Mercantile is not all that great and [we know] that

Watchdog angers de-mutualisers

The Building Societies Ombudsman council, the industry's watchdog, yesterday sparked a row with de-mutualising societies, including the Halifax, Woolwich and Alliance & Leicester, by suggesting that their members stood to lose out of the flotation process, writes Nic Cicutti.

The council, which oversees the work of Brian Murphy, the Ombudsman, claimed: "Clearly, the decision to convert is a commercial matter for individual building societies.

"But [we] believe that the continual contraction in the number of societies is a matter of regret and a development that is unlikely to benefit consumers." Its view, argued in the Ombudsman's annual report yesterday, was described as "disgraceful" by Halifax Building Society, which is preparing its £10bn flotation next year. "It is outrageous that the council has seen fit to comment in this way on something which has nothing whatsoever to do the Ombudsman's scheme," said Gary Marsh, a senior manager at the Halifax. "Their assertion is made without any evidence

The Halifax's bitter defence of its flotation plans overshadowed Mr Murphy's annual report, which showed that the caseload of complaints dealt by his office rose by 93 per cent last year, to 2,081, out of more than 7,000 who contacted the Omdsman. Almost 1,000 initial complaints were linked to the takeover of Cheltenham & Gloucester by Lloyds Bank.

like to grow the business." The proceeds might be used to fund its future acquisition strategy, he added. Although the Prudential's primary aim is to seek a entire business were to me made, the company would consider it carefully, he added. utive at Mercantile, said: "We

John Engestrom, chief execwelcome this decision and believe that our resulting high-er profile and independence will assist us in further reinforcing our already strong market position, especially in life and health reinsurance."

Despite the Prudential's comments, analysts claimed a potential bid for the Woolwich was the likely result of the £500mplus, which the company hopes to raise from its partial disposal. While Mr Davis said a life company acquisition could be funded through shareholder interest in the Prudential's own life fund, thought to be up to £2.5bm, a society takeover on the scale of the Woolwich might still require a significant rights issue. I holder was so frustrated that he

Shareholders call for seasons Sears boss to resign

The directors of Sears were subjected to two hours of intense in their criticisms of Sear's perterday as investors complained about the company's poor performance, its strategy and the level of directors' bonuses.

During heated exchanges at the company's annual meeting in London, chairman Sir Bob Reid and chief executive Liam Strong both faced calls to resign and had to battle against constant heckling from the floor. The chairman of the executive теннинегаtion committee David Macdonald failed to regain election to the board as a non-executive director by a show of hands. The company had to employ its proxy votes from institutions to push the vote through. Mr Macdonald had earlier tried to pre-empt shareholder unrest about boardroom pay by delivering a 15 minute description of the bonus scheme in a flat monotone. One share-walked out. "How long will the meeting. All statements on " have trading were made by the statement of the meeting. All statements on " have trading were made by the statement of the meeting. All statements on the statement of the meeting. All statements on the statement of the Shareholders were trenchant the chairman. performed absolutely pathetically for the 30 years I have owned shares. We're not satisfied and we'd like to see someone else running the outfit." Another commented that the 85th annual meeting of the company was a "sad meeting for shareholders". She added that the board "did not have the ability to run this company successfully." She pointed to Sears' recent loss of £120m compared with good trading figures from rivals such as John Lewis and Next. "If this is your best then I feel sorry for you. And Liam Strong

Mr Strong has been the subject of much recent criticism over his handling of the sale of the Freeman Hardy Willis, Sax-one and Curtess shoe chains to the Facia group which later collapsed. He sat silent yesterday, making no contribution to terday at 100p.

he chairman.

Current trading figures.

showed an improvement since the company's results announcement. Group like-for-like sales were flat in the 19 weeks to 16 June. Like-forlike sales were down by 5 per cent in the Freemans mail or der business and the shoe chains. Selfridges comparative sales were up 11.5 per cent. Sir Bob also revealed that the new Selfridges branch in Heathrow Airport's Terminal One is "taking time to perform". "People are making money in that airport. Why aren't we?" he asked.

He said that Sears had conducted due diligence on Facia, which had satisfied the company of its viability.

While admitting that 1995/96 had been "a difficult year", Sir Bob said the streamlining businesses was commendable and that management was sound. Shares closed 1p higher yes-

to his two-year notice period, Mr

Robinson, aged 54, will receive a pension linked to his 33 years service, with no penalty for early retirement. Based on his final

£300,000 salary, he can choose between a maximum annual pension of about £165,000 or a

£370,000 lump sum, plus a re-

The agreement with Mr Robinson, who was forced to clear his desk after being accused of financial irregularities, duced pension of £135,000.

Nat Power chief gets performance-unrelated bonus

MICHAEL HARRISON

The chief executive of National Power, Keith Henry, received a "personal bonus" of £65,000 last year which was negotiated at the time he joined the company and completely unconnected to its performance, it emerged yesterday.

The one-off bonus was in addition to a £100,000 golden hello paid to Mr Henry on joining and took his total package, including pension costs, last year to £782.555. National Power's report and accounts also show that £338,000 was paid to another director, Graham Hadley, who left the company last December while a further £461,000 in free shares was paid to the chairman John Baker and two other executives under a long-term incentive scheme. In addition to a basic salary a bonus of £110,500 and £12,855 in taxable benefits, taking his remuneration to £448.355. His total emoluments were further increased by pension costs of £334,200.

However, less than half the £110,500 bonus was related to National Power's performance. The remainder-worth 20 per cent of basic salary - was negotiated at the time of Mr Henry's recruitment from the international conof £325,000, Mr Henry received tracting group Brown & Root.

Sir John Banham, chairman of the remuneration committee, said that the short- and longterm bonus schemes had been constructed so that they would typically pay out 50 per cent on

The maximum annual bonus has been set at 40 per cent of salary, while executive directors are eligible for shares worth up to one-third of salary under a performance share plan intro-duced in 1993. The first awards were made last month under the long-term scheme and resulted in Mr Baker receiving 40,347 shares worth £217,470.

Two other executives - Brian Birkenhead, the finance director, and the technology director Rod Jackson were granted shares worth £141,272 and £102,760 respectively. Mr Henry was also granted 82,589 share options during the year at £4.48 while Mr Baker exrealising a paper profit of £368,369. PowerGen yesterday confirmed it is proceeding with the £450m sale of two power stations to the Hanson-owned Eastern Group. The generator had threatened to withdraw after its takeover of Midlands Electricity was blocked by the Government. Eastern's purchase of the High Marnham and Drakelow stations will increase its generercised 139,534 existing options, ating market share to 9 per cent.

eter Robinson, the Woolwich with his former employers. Mr Robinson said yesterday that he had received several offers from financial institutions and would be making a decision on which one to accept in the

came as details emerged of his

Day's change Change (70) 1996 Feb 1996 Lear Yeald(74) 3639.50 4.12 3857.10 FTSE 100 4568.60 4015.30 3.40 FTSE 250 1945.40 1816.60 3.96 2244.36 1954.06 2.93 1924.17 1791.95 3.88 5778.00 5032.94 2.17 22603.20 19734.70 0.70† -6.03_ 11594.99 10204.87 3.35† 10982.77 +23.05 +0.2 2572.96 +6.53 +0.3 2572.96 2253.36 1.82† Source: FT Information Bradford Prop Tr 215

Money Market Rates Board Yields 1 Morth 1 Year Long Rend (54) Year Ago 6.10 6,13 1.41___ Germany 3,48 Mich (d) Clarge (d) % Clarge

CURRENCIES £ (London) 0.6490 -0.04 0.6314 $ (London) 1.5409 +0.10c 1,5839 £ (N York) ± 0.6491 -0.11 0.6311 OM (London) 2.3609 +0.27pf 2.1930 DM (London) 1.5322 +0.07pf 1.3846 ¥ (London) 109.085 -Y0.02 84.1550 # (London) 168.089 +Y0.084 133.289

86.0 +0.1 82.9 hadez Lathact Yr Ago Meet Figs Testering Bay's chy Year Age Oil Brent $ 18.08 -0.09 16.63 152.9+2.2pc 149.6 11 July 384.90 +0.6 389.25 GDP 130.3+1.1pc 124.8 28 June 249.78 +0.22 245.75 Base Rates — 5.75pc 5.75

صكنا من الاجل

40 36.7

Robinson eyes finance job after Woolwich exit a claim for £600,000 in relation chief executive ousted by the society three months ago, is set to return soon to a career in the financial services industry after finally agreeing a £165,000 a year pension compensation package next few weeks.

"I am getting withdrawal symptoms at the moment and I have to make up my mind as to whether to get back to full-time activity," he said.

"My friends and business connections have been immensely supportive in the past few months and I now plan to concentrate on the offers that I have received." Mr Robinson's comments

Woolwich compensation package, negotiated on his behalf by top City lawyers D J Freeman. Both the society and Henry Clinton-Davis, who represented Mr Robinson, yesterday refused to comment on the settlement.

in return for agreeing to forgo comes as the Wootwich tries to regain the initiative and proceed towards its planned £3bn stock market flotation next summer.

acquires Amstrad becomes a bet on David Potter's vision of the future where computing and telecommunications fuse in a technological revolution that will have the Luddites shuddering'

Sugar makes an exit, but what's Psion's game?

uinely claim to have transformed an industry. His IBM clone revolutionised the personal computer business. For a number of years at least, it also made investors in Amstrad a great deal of money. But since then, Mr Sugar has done little of note in consumer electronics. He never found anything of significance to replace the Amstrad PC and though he attempted, unsuccessfully, to take the company private once more, it is plain that essentially he long ago lost interest in his creation. These days he concentrates his energies on the brave new world of digitally packaged football. Flogging Tottenham Hotspur is likely to prove a great deal more profitable than flogging electronic boxes, he Mr Sugar is probably right to want to get out. He lacks the necessary skills to compete in today's ever more high-tech and complex markets. Amstrad makes no money from the consumer electronics Mr Sugar understands, and Psion's erudite but commercial David Potter is much more likely to make a good fist of the mobile phone and computer operations that would be Amstrad's only future.

So this is a good deal for Alan Sugar.

Amstrad's other shareholders who coldshouldered the 150p a share Mr Sugar offer four years ago have been vindicated to an extent but it is a close-run thing. Factor in a bit of inflation and most shareholders

A lan Sugar is one of only a handful of en- would have been better off taking the transmissions. Well, maybe. With a £230m that exclusive club of executives earning more share issue to get past shareholders, this is than £1m a year, can avoid falling on his sword. Even less clear-cut is what sort of a deal Psion is striking. One of the market's bigges success stories over the past four years, the shares rose 20-fold between their 23p low in 1992 and their peak last month of 468p. Their 25p fall yesterday to 350p underlined investors' worries that this is a massive deal for a relatively small company, even if part of it is simply a disguised rights issue to use Psion's highly rated paper to get hold of Amstrad's £85m of cash.

Psion has been successful because it has focused on technology it understands and because it grew organically, expanding fast but nurturing its staff within its own research-based culture. It is by no means given that the phone and PC shifters from Brentwood will fit in to this rather highbrow

David Potter is not a man to shy away from taking risks when he has to, however, and you can bet your life he has weighed up the pros and cons with scientific precision It was no nerdy boffin who made a killing on shares in the 1970s to provide the seedcorn for Psion. Backing Psion if it acquires Amstrad becomes a bet on Mr Potter's vision of the future where computing and telecom-munications fuse in a technological revolu-tion that will have the Luddites shuddering. All of us wired up, on the move and franti-cally communicating in a welter of e-mail, downloading databases and wireless fax by no means a done deal.

Some DIY questions are answered

Until their profits warning earlier this year, Wickes and its hansomely paid chairman, Henry Sweetbaum, were the DIY partnership that could do no wrong, darlings of the City in a largely unloved and difficult business. Every now and again, of course, the question would re-emerge; if nobody else can make money out of DIY, how on earth does Mr Sweetbaum manage it? Each time the question was asked, it was explained away. Wickes is not really DIY at all, you understand. It is more of a builder's merchant, where the margins are thicker. And anyway the business uses state of the art stock control and IT systems, Mr Sweetbaum insist-ed. That's how we make money where others fail, he would claim, Shame to say, most of us bought it. Now it transpires that there was a bit more to it than that. When a company refers to "serious accounting problems" it generally means something a touch more worrying that a spot of the creative stuff. Profits for 1995 and in prior years were overstated, that much is certain. By how much we do not yet know. The accountants are still trying to work that out. It is hard to see how Mr Sweetbaum, one of than £1m a year, can avoid falling on his sword. More than half his salary last year was bonus. He believes in incentivising his employees with performance-related pay too, and thought this part of the Wickes success story. The problem is that bonusrelated pay also provides a powerful motive for cooking the books. How the board and the auditors, Arthur Andersen, could have allowed this go unnoticed is anyone's guess. What appears to have been going on is a relatively common little scam. There's even been an instance of it in DIY before. It happened at Texas too. So much for all the Cadbury rules and structures put in place to halt the creative accounting practices of the past. They don't seem to have done much good in this case.

Nor did they stop an undignified scramble for the exit among City professionals as they caught wind of the problems. A very substantial quantity of stock was sold before Wickes made its announcement and the shares were suspended. As usual the big boys got out, leaving the little fellow to face the worse, trapped in the stock and unable to sell. A shabby little episode all round.

Tunnel sweetener must be worth considering

Channel Tunnel runs out, British and French taxpayers will inherit a licence to print money, not just by the bucketful but by the trainload. By 2052, Eurotunnel's £8bn debt nightmare will be a very dim memory, the loans will have long been repaid and the tunnel will be the closest thing you will see to a pure profit machine.

In those circumstances, what government in its right mind would short-change the taxpayers of tomorrow by granting Eurotunnel shareholders of today a 30-40 year extension to their concession? France's would because right now it is more alarmed at the prospect of 500,000 enraged investors rampaging through the streets of Paris in protest than the wrath of future taxpayers. Britain, on the other hand, seems determined to defend the next generation's cash cow to the last.
The Government's motives are obviously reasonable enough. But if an extension to the concession is the sweetener that secures the debt refinancing Eurotunnel needs to survive, it seems a price worth considering. For it is government which is in part to blame for Eurotunnel's present pickle by inflating the cost of the tunnel, failing to build supporting rail infrastructure on time and giv-ing the ferries a duty-free extension. If an appeal to its sense of moral duty fails, the British Government might care to reflect on The idea might seem rather hard to take on board right now but in 57 years time what sort of advertisement it would be for its much-vaunted Private Finance Initiative if Eurotunnel is ultimately buried at sea.

SFO men fly to

Wickes in disarray over accounts flaw

Wickes, the UK's third-largest DIY company, was plunged into disarray yesterday when the company said the discovery of "serious accounting problems" may have led to the overstating of group profits and share-holders funds last year. Earlier years' profits may also have been overstated.

Wickes shares were suspended at 69p compared with Monday's 109p close. However, after-hours trades on Monday of 159,000 shares at 80p are expected to prompt a Stock Exchange enquiry.

The accounting errors will place considerable pressure on Henry Sweetbaum, Wickes chairman and chief executive who earned £1.2m last year in-from the chief executive position next year. That move was now likely to be accelerated, some analysis said.

Mr Sweetbaum, who only returned from Russia earlier this week, was said to be "devastated" by the crisis. After the collapse of its share price Wickes will now be a takeover target. Analysts see it as a fundamentally sound business that might attract the attention of Kingfisher, which controls the B&Q chain or a builders merchant such as Graham. At yesterday's price, Wickes is valued Though full details of the accounting problems have yet to emerge, they relate to the way the company has been accounting for supplier discounts cluding a £750,000 long-term and contributions towards in-bonus. Mr Sweetbaum had store promotions. It is thought and contributions towards in-

Sweetbaum: Devasted on that long-term suppliers to Wickes give the company discounts on goods supplied, assuming Wickes will generate a certain volume of sales.

alise and the discounts are later rescinded, the group's profits margins could be affected. The practice of booking supplier discounts as profits is not uncommon but questions remain unanswered on Wickes' timing of the bookings.

A similar problem emerged earlier at a Wickes subsidiary in Europe and some analysts have been critical about the compa-

Arthur Andersen [the compa-ny's auditors] to have looked carefully at the UK accounts after the situation in Europe," one analyst said.

The company will conduct an immediate investigation to discover the scale of the problem. There are no current plans to bring in outsiders to probe the accounting errors. A spokesman said: "There's no fraud. No cash has gone missing and there has been no personal gain. The stock and the cash position remain unchanged. It's is really about the timing of the way these discounts were booked." Wickes said it was unlikely that Mr Sweetbaum might have to repay all or part of his recent long-term bonus payments even though were linked to profits as well as share price performance. Last year, Mr Sweetbaum's ny's accounting practices. Last year, Mr Sweetbaum's "One might have expected £750,000 bonus took his total pay to £1.2m making him one of the highest earners on the high street. The previous year he earned £1.1m including a long-term bonus of £670,000 Last year Wickes recorded a £258m loss caused by £269m of exceptionals relating to the sale of Hunter Timber and Builders Mate. The figure compared with profits of £30m in the pre-

Wickes recruited a new finance director, Stuart Stradlin, a year ago from SG Warburg. He replaced Trefor Llewellyn, who is now at Caradon, the building materials group.

when it said profits would fall significantly below those of the previous year due to a difficult first quarter an poor winter weather. Prior to this, Wickes had been one of the most highly re-

Wickes shares had been hit by pany's annual meeting in April

a profits warning at the com-garded companies in the difficult DIY sector. It appeared to have avoided the worst ravages of the recession by targeting the professional builder rather than the DIY enthusiast.

The company's supporters had been touting the shares as a good recovery play that would benefit from any upturn in the London Police, who is working with the SFO.

is expected to last a long time, quiries into the fraud.

There are rumours Mr

Tokyo for talks

lon S

as

at tural (today anklin se of (

. a Yo

: "I har

a natu

: is one

Juses,' lose fri

м спо

uestio

we it w really id been

r. If it

/hat wa

merwi

Avenue

his roa

I'm co

d him,

with c uld hav

if peopl

ni sure

tologis

from y, who c

ild the i

from C

'usual

uriant, b

no stat

betwee

id tha

as the orker i d told meat, c

in enort

had gra

a perio

ust, he is sense te unabl

Jered fi cat by,

ok uno

lied at rcet, Yo

hs in 19

ved in t

trying CID ci beef th

cted wit

Oncerne

rs mig!

zvelopin

ig CJD i equires.

PETER RODGERS Financial Editor

Three Serious Fraud Office investigators fly out to Tokyo today to talk to Japanese officials about the Sumitomo copper scandal.

But an SFO spokesman said they were not expected to see Yasuo Hamanaka, the copper trader who lost £1.2bn for his firm and possibly far more.

"They are to meet our counterparts in the Ministry of Justice to build close relations with the authorities over there,"

said the SFO. The SFO team comprises Andrew Jackson, the lawyer conducting the inquiry, Michael O'Brien Kenney, a forensic accountant whose job is to trace the financial links in the fraud. and detective chief inspector Michael Fox of the City of

The SFO indicated that the visit, which is likely to last only until the weekend, is aimed chiefly at doing the groundwork for a liaison between Japanese and British investigators. This Hamanaka is being kept by the Japanese authorities in a "safe house" pending an interrogation. But Japanese sources said it it," a trader said.

it was absurd to suggest he had been locked away by the authorities without charge.

One suggestion is that he has been hiding from the Japanese press since he was dismissed by Sumitomo two weeks ago. A Sumitomo spokesman said: "We are not in touch with Mr Hamanaka."

According to a report by the Japanese news agency Jiji Press, the US Commodity Futures Trading Commission questioned Mr Hamanaka for two days in April, well before news of the loss came out.

London Metal Exchange copper yesterday dived to a new 21/2-year low in late afternoon trading on widespread and heavy selling which is bound to increase the losses of Sumitomo Corporation. So far it has rejected claims that these could mount as high as $4bn (£2.6bn).

Some of the selling began just after a statement by Global Minerals and Metals of New York that two of its Chile-based traders had resigned for personal reasons in a development it said was not related to inquiries into losses at Sumitomo. Three months delivery copper plunged to end at $1,745 a tonne, well down on Monday's $1,818 close. It earlier hit a high of $1,865.

"Copper is heading towards $1,600 ... There is little to stop

In Brief

• Telecommunications watchdog Oftel announced key amendments in Mercury's licence which will give the telephone operator much greater flexibility in pricing of services. From now on it will not have to publish changes to its tariff structure 28 days in advance, allowing it to file and introduce new prices on the same day. Mercury welcomed the licence change and said it would introduce a new pricing package for business customers on 1 July.

 United Airlines is looking for a Japanese partner, although talks are still at an early stage. Chairman and chief executive Gerold Greenwald said the US airline had held discussions with potential Japanese partners from time to time, though it was "not far along with partnership discussions in Japan". Asked about US-Air, he said no talks were being held with this or any other airline involving a substantial acquisition.

 Volvo, the Swedish industrial group, has unveiled plans to sell 46 million shares in Pharmacia & Upjohn, the newly merged transatlantic pharmaceuticals group. The global offering will involve two-thirds of Volvo's existing 13.8 per cent stake and will be aimed at buyers in the US, the Nordic countries and other international makets.

 The Central Customer Service Committee, part of the water industry's Ofwat regulatory body, has told the Monopolies and Mergers Commission it opposes Severn Trent's proposed bid for South West Water. The committee said the bid "seems to have little or no benefit for Severn Trent's own customers".

• Trade and Industry Secretary Ian Lang has decided not to re-fer to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission the proposed acquisition of the banana business Geest by Pyffes and the Windward Islands Banana Development and Exporting Company.

This notice is issued in compliance with the requirements of the London Stock Exchange Limited. Othe London Stock Exchange 1. Application has been made to the London Stock Exchange the fix while of the issued orthograph shore capital of Filefax Group pic to be admitted to the Official List of the London Stock Exchange ("the Listing"). It is expected that the Listing will become effective, and that dealings in the outliney shares of 3p each ("Ordinary Shares") will extraored in Listing 1. It is expected that the Listing will become on Listing 1. It is expected that the Listing will become of 1 July 1996. It is expected that this adventment does not constitute an offer or projection to

FILOFAX GROUP plc ander the Companies At (1905) with number 1750s.j

Introduction to the Official List by Hoare Govett Corporate Finance Limited of the whole of the issued ordinary share capital of

Filofax Group plc Ordinary share capital

£2.500,000 50/m0.000 ordinary shares of 5p each £1.506,173.70 30,123.474 Copies of the exempt leating document relating to Filofax Group ptc, published on 26 June 1996, may be obtained during normal business bours on any weekday (Saturdays excepted) up to and including 10 July 1996 from:

Filofax Group pic Waverley House, 7/12 Noel Street London WIV 4NE House Govern Corporate Finance Limited
4 Brondeste London EC2M 7LE and during normal husiness hours on any weekday (Saturdays excepted) up to and including 28 June 1996 for collection only, from the Company Announcements Office. Stock Exchange Tower, Capel Court entrance, off Barthol holders call . hoss to resu

the state of the s

was a continue poll

Miller III

is is the state of the state of

Rail privatisation: The team that won the Chiltern franchise yesterday sets out spending plans

M40 to put new stock on Chiltern

CHRISTIAN WOLMAR Transport Correspondent

The two-and-a-half year moratorium on new rolling stock caused by the uncertainty over rail privatisation is to be ended by M40 Trains, which yesterday won the Chiltern Railway franchise.

M40, which is a manage ment buyout team backed by 3i and John Laing, said it would spend £10m on four three-car diesel units within a month of the start of the franchise, which was likely to be on 21 July. The company added that an announcement would be made in a month on who would build the trains, which will be used to increase the frequency on the Marylebone to Birmingham Snow Hill service and on extra services between Aylesbury and Marylebone. The trains will be leased, possibly from the manufacturer.

They are likely to be supplied by Adiranz Derby works and be a new, all-purpose 100 mph design, which the manufacturer hopes will be suitable for othvice by late 1998.

er new franchisees and be in ser-Rolling stock manufacturers, who have faced an empty order rook, will be pleased that M40 eems to have found a way ound the "residual value"

will challenge the West Coast Main Line from Euston Steaming ahead: MBO team hopes that the Chiltern rail service arose from the fact that the franchises, of which Chiltern is the eighth to be allocated, have been only for between seven and 15 years, while rolling stock has a 30- or 40-year life. Some of the other new problem which has stymied orders for new trains. This franchisees have promised to orarose from the fact that the francommitted themselves to doing it so quickly, or on such a shortterm franchise.

The company hopes to reduce the journey time between London and Birmingham to under two hours, posing serious in its first year, exactly the competition to the West Coast same as BR would have re-Main Line from Euston, which is becoming increasingly unreliable while awaiting refurbishment of the line. M40 trains will receive £16.5m in government subsidy mitted to spending £1m on sta-

1994 1995

37,839

-9.582

34,890

22,262

Source: OECD

49,370 96,897

187,550 242890*

the agreement the amount of subsidy will be reduced to £2.9m (at today's prices) by 2003/4. The company is also com-

creating 300 extra car park spaces, installing automatic tick-et barriers at Marylebone staceived, but under the terms of tion and creating 250 secure cycle racks, including 50 at Marylebone enabling com-

Market Trends. The pharmamost that has ever been invested ceuticals and telecommunicaby one country in another in a single year," according to the OECD. Inward investment into tions industries dominated this activity, along with banking and Britain was a record $30bn electricity, gas and water utilicompared with outflows of Between 1985 and 1994, the US and UK were host to the biggest camulative inflows of direct investment, at $402bn and total less than a decade ago. Eu-$172bn respectively. They were followed, at some distance, by China and France.

Although most foreign direct investment continues to be made by and in the industrial countries, a growing number of developing countries are

Overseas investment levels soar to new record

Direct investment flows in OECD ($m)

74,701

29.910

12.156

9,012

49:448

11,066

10.955

OECD total 138,517 189,788*

based on incomplete data

3,003

DIANE COYLE conomics Editor

Direct investment in businesses verseas by companies in the inustrial countries hit a record f more than $250bn (£162bn) ast year, climbing sharply for he third year running.

There was unprecedented westment abroad by Amerian, British and German comanies, while the same three of foreign investment, which ountries, along with Canada nd Sweden, also reported cord inward investment. Investment in developing ountries is also likely to have creased sharply again from 994's $40bn.

A report published yesterday by the Organisation for Economic o-operation and Development (OECD) argues that cheap labour is a secondary consideration for investment after access to markets and raw materials. However, the OECD cautions that there could still be a backlash from workers who fear that their jobs might be put at risk by the increasing levels most governments have retained the power to control.

For instance, more than 2,000

small and medium sized Ger-There are already some clear few years to take advantage of examples of the transfer of jobs across international borders as companies relocate factories.

hundred years, never before man companies have invested have so many firms from so in the Czech Republic in the last many industries invested in so many countries," the report says. Mergers and acquisitions ex-

29,721

10.895 ...

14,587

. 17,938

"Although firms have been in- plained much of the surge, acvesting abroad for well over a cording to its latest Financial ties. The figures also include the reinvestment of earnings by existing overseas subsidiaries. US investment abroad doubled last year to $97bn - higher than the world direct investment rope was the prime destination. Investment in the US also reached an all-time high of $75bn. Of this $65bn came from Europe and $47bn from Britain, Germany and Switzerland. British firms invested $27bn in the US, which is "possibly the Halma still has to earn its price

Halma is the growth stock par excel-lence and perhaps the biggest conglomerate that no one has ever heard of. After 25 years of earnings growth in excess of 20 per cent a year, it is now valued at almost £500m and anyone fortunate enough to have invested in the company's early stock market days in the 1970s would be sitting on a truly gargantuan profit.

If you had put £10,000 into Halma in 1974 it would now be worth more than £4m, even disregarding the benefit of a steadily rising flow of dividends. It is a story of relentless growth, partly fuelled by acquisitions, but mainly by a strict attention to improving margins and return on capital at the group's dozens of environmental control, fire and gas detection and safety and security businesses.

The good news continued vesterday with profits of £33.6m, a 15 per cent rise, representing another record performance. Earnings per share also rose 15 per cent to 8.58p after a 13 per cent rise in sales. After very strong cash flow. net cash at the end of the year to March increased to a new record of £19m, net assets were 21 per cent better at 28.9p and the dividend jumped a healthy 20 per cent to 2.56p a share.

Other performance measures all moved in the right direction. The return on sales at 19.4 per cent has in 1991 and return on capital of 43 per cent is both impressive and rising as the chart shows.

All good news for the share price, you would have thought. Not a bit of it: the shares slipped 7p, or 4 per cent to 174p yesterday as the market, which has learnt to expect better-than-expected results, realised it had slightly overcooked its forecasts. The shares, despite their long-term success, have actually underperformed the market for a couple of years.

Which only goes to show that there is a price for everything and Halma's rose to a pretty demanding level two years back when its price/earnings ratio rose to the high 20s. The shares have since sat back and waited for earnings to catch up, which they have duly done.

The questions facing investors now are the extent to which earnings growth may be losing its head of steam and what price it is appropriate to put on that growth.

On the basis of forecast profits of about £39m in the year to next March, giving earnings per share of 9.8p. earnings growth appears to have settled in the mid-teens. At 174p, the shares stand on a prospective p/e of 18, which looks quite full given the more subdued growth prospects.

THE INVESTMENT COLUMN to spend by the end of this year. Even so, questions remain. Advanced

EDITED BY TOM STEVENSON

HALMA : AT A GLANCE

20,9

Share price

Earnings per share (percent) increasing the dividend but with a low vield that is unlikely to provide much support. A great company, but the shares are high enough.

Chloride back in the black

Chloride was one of the worst performing shares of the 1980s and results in the current decade have been even less inspiring. Since 1991, when Keith Hodgkinson moved over from GEC as chief executive, the accounts have been littered with exceptional charges as the management has gradually dumped the once-famous batteries business and moved into electronic and electrical products.

It has now returned to the black for only the second time in the five years Mr Hodgkinson has been at the helm. Pre-tax profits of £6.97m in the 12

Return on capital employed

There is plenty of room to continue increasing the dividend but with a low gain of £1.38m in the latest period. Even so, operating profits from continuing businesses soared 48 per cent to £6.45m.

The group remains heavily dependent on its uninterruptible power supplies operation, which represents over four-fifths of group operating profits. But with computer networking grow-ing in popularity and the use of ever-more sophisticated electronic apparatus in everything from shops to turnstile systems, prospects are good. With overall order levels up 30 per cent as well, last year's 22 per cent rise in profits to £4.36m should be repeatable.

Much of the rest of the group's growth from core businesses came from reduction or elimination of losses. Emergency lighting in the UK cut its deficit by around £500,000 and is now "just" back in profit, while the specialist battery chargers to power switching dis-tribution division staged a £681,000 turnround to profits of £364,000.

The company is now proposing to re-Pre-tax profits of £6.97m in the 12 lease £14m from its pension fund by months to March replaced a loss of effectively transferring most of the li-£318,000 last time. The figures overstate abilities to Legal & General, and the shown a steady rise from 16.1 per cent the improvement, given that a previous company could have as much as £20m

Design Electronics, the burglar alarm business for which Chloride paid £6.5m, has plunged to a £797,000 loss in its first full year with the group. Meanwhile it has yet to build a commanding position in any of its business areas.

Profits of £7m this year would put the shares, up 0.25p at 29.25p, on a prospective p/e of 15. High enough for now.

Morrison bucks the market trend

Anyone who suggested floating a construction company on the stock market last year might have expected the hosepipe to be turned on them. Con-struction output has fallen by a tenth in real terms in the last five years, and margins slashed as too many contractors chased too little work in the worst market conditions in living memory.

Yet Edinburgh-based Morrison Construction was yesterday basking in the glory of an impressive first set of preliminary results since the shares were placed at 115p in October, valuing the company at £77m. Morrison's warm reception continued, with the shares rising 2p to 163p on the figures.

The reason Morrison has been able to buck the market trend is that only a third of its business comes from tra-ditional competitive tenders. The rest is gleaned from public finance initiative (PFI) work, property development projects and working with clients on creative design solutions.

Proof that Morrison is not chasing market share for low- or no-margin work came from the turnover figure, which fell in the year to March from £218m to £210m .But operating margins continued on their upward path. rising from 3.5 per cent to 5.5 per cent, resulting in pre-tax profits 50 per cent higher at £11.4m. All four divisions – even housing – chipped in, though the biggest contribution came from building and property development, where operating profits of £6.1m were made on sales of £98.4m.

The £19m capital injection from the placing has left the balance sheet in good hape with net cash standing at £18.2m. Brokers tweaked their forecasts higher and now look for pre-tax profits of about £14m. Further growth could come if overseas contracts - only 5 per cent of turnover - bear fruit or new life is breathed into the Government's struggling PFI initiative. In the meantime, a forward p/e ratio of 12 looks

Yes minister, there seems to be a football match on

CITY DIARY

JOHN WILLCOCK

The progress of England into the semi-finals of Euro 96 today has caught a lot of people on the hop. Jeremy Hanley, Minister of State at the Foreign and Common-wealth Office, has been forced to postpone his drinks party this evening.

The FO says: "We are sure that you will understand this decision, which by necessity had to be taken at short notice and hope that it has caused you any inconve-nience. How very diplomatic. Perhaps it was wishful thinking on behalf of the FO that there would be no confrontation with Germany.

Or perhaps they were being just plain unpatriotic in dis-counting the possibility of England's success? Certainly the organisers of a 1,000strong fund managers' confer ence in the Albert Hall today must feel a mite silly. The day culminates with the Fund Manager of the Year awards, and the delegates sit down for dinner at 8 o'clock - half an hour after kick-off. The publishers of Investment Week, which have organised the awards, have accepted their fate and installed a series of giant screens around the hall each measuring 21 feet by 21 feet, on which the match will be screened. It brings a whole new meaning to "TV

There's a wicked joke run-ning around Woolwich Building Society at the moment; whenever the Woolwich's head of corporate affairs, David Blake, sends out an e-mail to the 400 branches and head office staff, precisely the opposite of the message is about to happen. Apparently Mr Blake es-tablished this unenviable reputation when he messaged employees that Wool-wich would definitely not be converting to plc status -two weeks before it an-

How delightful to discover that SmithKline Beecham sponsors a box at the Royal Opera House in Covent Garden to entertain employees. The son of the inventor of the original Beecham's pills was, of course, Sir Thomas Beecham (pictured above), one of this country's most distinguished conductors. No doubt shareholders would approve of this glorious tradition.

nounced the float. Now if we | cept the telecoms regulator's can just get him to forecast a Germany win ...

While the nation sits stupefied in front of the telly, swigging from cans and dreading another penalty shoot-out or more plucky Brits at Wimble-don, eight teams from the City are off to get some fresh air. The Wooden Spoon Soci-ety's Four Peaks Challenge is upon us.

The teams of a driver and three runners have to scale four peaks in 48 hours - Ben Nevis in Scotland, Scafell Pike in England, Snowdon in Wales and Carantouhill in Ireland - totalling 14,000 feet. Reuters has two teams, one of which got off to a flying start on a recent practice run. Driver Helen Lofthouse managed to get done for speeding and get a parking ticket. Stick to the telly, Helen.

Has Oftel been caught offside? The Government is soon to decide whether to aclinked proposals - an inflation-based price control for BT coupled with new regula-tory powers for Oftel to act against anti-competitive behaviour.

BT accepts the price idea but wants competitive issues to stay with the OFT.

Lord Marsh, in a quick one-two in the Lords, has followed up a question on the status of Oftel's plans with a supplementary on whether the Government could come up with some

Lords Peston, Ezra, Tebbit and Hooson, in defensive back-line, have supported Lord Marsh and wrongfooted Oftel by arguing that its proposed anti-competitive powers allow no right of

The Government has now gone back to the drawing board. One insider muses: "The problem with Oftel is that it is not always certain if it is player or referee."

	COMPA	NY RESULT	S
	Ternover £	Pre-tax £	EPS	Dividend
Business Post (F)	65.5m (51.3m)	13 Dm (9.13m)	17 4p (12.2p)	8.7p (6p)
DBS Management (F)	77 Sm (55 Sm)	3.38m (2.28m)	31p (24 3p)	12p (6p)
Chlorida Group (F)	128m (111m)	697m (0.32m)	1 62p (0.31p)	0.45ρ (•)
Claybithe (F)	33.1m (33.6m)	2.1m (1.7m)	9.1p (6.7p)	3.45p (3.05p)
Debenkson Towson (F)	59 6m (5 8 2m)	2.28m (3 65m)	2 78p (5.43p)	1.5p (3.5p)
Owner Estates (1)	3.34m (3.20m)	1.21m (0.88m)	2.2p (1.6p)	D.4p (0.375p)
Évans of Leeds (F)	- -1	11.5m (10.7m)	6 43p (6.32p)	3 08p (2 79p)
Halma (F)	174m (154m)	33 6m (29.2m)	8 58p (7.45p)	2.564p (2.13p)
Howden Group (F)	473m (438m)	42 9m (30.6m)	7.Sp (8p)	2.9p(-)
Morrison Construction (F)	210m (218m)	11 4m (7 6m)	13 12p (10.22p)	3 05p (-)
MS left (F)	35 1m (29 6m)	051m (-089m)	7 1p (-3.2p)	O 6p (O.5p)
Nortiala (F)	72 Sm (56 7m)	5.34m (4 16m)	34 1p (29 1p)	7.5 p (5 p)
Marthamber (F)	233m (778m)	5.6m (3.1m)	27.2p (12.4p)	2.2p (1.7p)
Along Group (F)	17 7m (17,4m)	2.93m (2.33m)	3.81p (3.14p)	1.4p (0.9p)
Scotswood leds (I)	1 51bn (358 4m)	24 400 (57,900)	0.27p (0.95p)	0.5p (0.5p)
Soundtracs (I)	2 96m (3 24m)	-0 ú3m (0 15m)	-0.3p (1 D2p)	매 (-)
SI James Beach Hotels (F)	162m (10.4m)	1 41m (1 92m)	4.55p (8.66p)	4.8p (4p)
Tiesley Rober (F)	47 1m (35 1m)	3.5m (2.2m)	8.5p (5.3p)	2.25p (1.5p)
(F) - Fings (I) - Ingenen	_

finance 1 accountancy

A 7 page section covering vital issues in accountancy, public sector finance and the legal profession with pages of appointment opportunities

16 - 22 See pages section two

To book your advertisement call The Finance & Legal Team on 0171 293 2310

Every Wednesday in the THE INDEPENDENT section two crashes as rescue is called off

MAGNUS GRIMOND

Campari International, the sports and leisure clothing group, is to go into liquidation after failing to complete a £4m£5m refinancing. The decision was made at a board meeting on Monday after three potential backers pulled out at the

With little or nothing likely to be salvaged for shareholders, Wing Tai, the Hong Kong family company which owns just un-der 30 per cent of the company, is likely to face a loss of around £8m. Paul Sanderson, chairman of Sanderson Electronics, also faces substantial losses, having bought into the company in November 1994. He controls a 23.4 per cent stake. The shares were suspended yesterday at 28p. Campari chalked up losses of £8.61m in 1993 and £7.69m in 1994. Pelham Allen, the com-pany doctor brought in as chair-man last year, said they had been unable to obtain sufficient working capital to finance autumn and winter orders.

Shareholders' funds have fallen to £4m from £22m in December 1992. "Basically, £8m was knocked off in each of the next two years from losses. The business needs £8m-£10m of shareholders' funds to support the business and we could not achieve that," Mr Allen said.

Earlier this month, Campari announced that a private UK textile company had made a proposal involving the provision of additional working capital. However, that company had now come to the conclusion that Campari's requirements were too great. Mr Allen said they had come

"very, very close" to bringing in the new backers. But he added: Textiles is not a popular sector. We are a turnaround situation. We had stopped the losses, but had been unable to reduce the risk to get the new money in."

The group was given a stay of execution last year when shareholders, including Wing Tai and Mr Sanderson, backed a £1m emergency financing package following a six month suspension of the shares and a boardroom clear-out. Mr Allen said discussions possible buyer in Holland.

publisher, has earmarked up to £250m for acquisitions in the print, radio and television mar-kets world-wide, the company revealed yesterday, following the launch of a one-for-three rights issue aimed at raising IR£106m (£109m).

holder, is putting in IR£22m of his own money to keep his holding at roughly 26 per cent. "Yes, it's quite a big under-writing." Dr O'Reilly said yesterday, following the company's annual general meeting in Dublin. But he said it was justified by the growth prospects. "Effectively we are de-gearing the company," he said. Asked what the company might buy, he said: "It could be the purchase of nationals or regionals in Britain, it could be expansion in South Africa or consolidation in New Zealand or further investment in Australia.'

Campari | Irish newspaper group reveals £250m war-chest

MATHEW HORSMAN

Independent Newspapers, the Dublin-based international

Tony O'Reilly, the company chairman and its largest share-which coincided with last might's announcement by Pearson that it was selling its regional news-paper group, Westminister Press, fuelled speculation that Independent Newspapers could be a buyer.

Capitalised at IR£600m, the Dublin-based company has seen profits increase fivefold in five years to IR50m, on the strength of an aggressive acquisition strategy.
The rights issue, which will reduce gearing to just 14 per cent from 56 per cent currently, will give the company "much greater flexibility to move quickly when we need to," finance director James Parkinson said.

"We are shown a lot of interesting opportunities, and need to be flexible," he said. "This was a good time to go to the market."

The company owns or co-owns newspapers in Ireland, Australia, New Zealand and the UK, where it holds 46 per cent of the Independent. It has newspapers worth about £1.2bn under administration, and pub-

The timing of the rights issue, lishes 12 million newspapers a eek world-wide. The group h been linked to a number of possible acquisition targets, most recently the ailing Express titles.

Mr Parkinson declined to comment on specific targets, but said the company's interest in the UK was limited to the print sector. Overseas, both radio and television were viewed as attractive, he said, confirming that the company would consider bidding for radio licences in South Africa. Earlier this year, a consortium in which Independent Newspapers was a member bought Radio New Zealand, the privatised radio company.

Mr Parkinson said that both television and radio companies in the UK were "on the expensive side," but that there wereopportunities in overseas markets

Australia was viewed as the most likely target for future growth. Dr O'Reilly's son, Cameron, is chief executive of Australian Provincial Newspa-pers, the Independent affiliate company, and has been based

In Brief

 Anagen, a biotechnology group, is in discussions with three potential marketing partners to replace Organon Teknika, part of Akzo Nobel, which last year withdrew from an agreement to sell its AuraFlex automated immunoassay system. The system is used for the testing of medical and food samples. Consideration is also being given to marketing the system through national distributors based in key countries. Anagen also said it regretted "wholly uninstited and unfounded allegations" in the weekend press concerning usified and unifounded allegations" in the weekend press concerni former venture partner Integrated Technologies.

• Rexam director Eric Priestley is to leave the company at the end of July to join Jefferson Smurfit as executive vice-president and chief operating officer.

• Scott Pickford yesterday shrugged aside legal proceedings begun against the company by Westelay, a private company controlled by former director, AB Phipps. The claims, which concern a share sale agreed at the end of 1993, were without merit and no provision would be made for any liability, said Scott Pickford chairman Ian Maxwell Scott. The company is seeking a listing on AIM, with dealings due to begin next month. It expects an improved performance this year, after reporting a dip in pre-tax profits from £583,000 to £417,000 in the year to March. Tony Birch is to step down as chief executive after seven years.

 Tinsley Robor is to raise around £11.4m in in a one-for-three rights issue at 130p. The new money will be used to finance the rights issue at 150p. The new money will be used to finance the group's capital investment programme and provide the flexibility to continue the expansion of the business. The group warned that its strategic objectives were being hindered by delay in the delivery of some new generation machinery, along with the costs of its installation. The ground work was being laid for further improvements in results, it said as it unveiled a 57 per cent rise in pre-tax profits to £3.51m for the 1995-96 year. pre-tax profits to £3.51m for the 1995-96 year.

• Business Post, one the UK's largest independent parcel and mail carriers, was upbeat yesterday as it revealed that profits had jumped 42 per cent to £13m in the year to March. Michael Kane, chief executive, said the current year had started well. Sales growth. operating efficiencies and sound cost control should enable it to continue to deliver some of the highest margins in the sector, he added.

• Directors of Therapeutic Antibodies, a biotechnology group coming to market next month, are due to pick up emoluments totalling nearly $573,000 this year. The board and other officers of the company will own a stake worth over £40m, assuming the float achieves the expected £150m market capitalisation.

Racal takes the plunge into Internet business services

MATHEW HORSMAN

Racal Electronics yesterday became the latest UK company to plunge into the exploding mar-ket for Internet business services, announcing a plan to connect government departments and private-sector clients to the global "network of networks".

The news followed confirmation earlier this month that BT in league with its US partner MCI, planned to spend £300m upgrading their network to supply businesses with Inter-net connections. Cable companies are also developing Internet services for their telephone customers, and at least two operators plan to develop national networks to support telephony and business applications for the Internet.

Telewest Communications, the country's largest cable company, is considering applying for a national network licence, and will be rolling out cable modems later this year, targetting business customers. were now taking place with a erator, International Cable Tel, bought transmission company NTL earlier this year, promising to develop a national network. The US telephone giant AT&T is also planning to provide business Internet services in the UK and on the Continent. Under chairman Sir Ernest The third largest cable op- gressively expanding its telecom- Coopers & Lybrand.

munications business. The com-pany spent £133m late last year to buy British Rail Telecommunications, a network of 5,000 miles of trunk cables and 7,000 miles of distribution cable. The Internet market currently boasts about 20 million users worldwide, and analysts forecast rapid growth in the next five years. The network is particularly attractive for clients looking to communicate not only internally but with suppliers and cus-tomers across the globe. Racal also announced yesterday that a consortium in which it has a leading role had won a multi-million pound contract to reconfigure the Ministry of Defence's accounting, financial management and planning sys-tems. The contract, part of the Government's resource accounting and budgeting initia-tive, known as Capital, will see Racal Datacom design and supply infrastructure and cabling for the new system, in association with management consultan-Harrison, Racal has been ag- cies Deloitte and Touche and

THE INDEPENDENT Win a luxury weekend break

The Compleat Angler has an idyllic position on the banks of the River Thames in the Georgian town of Marlow. An atmosphere of warmth and intimacy makes The Compleat Edwardian conservatory, details on line. So call... And now you could win a weekend break for two.

break or for any special weekend break, including celebration. Renowned for evening meals with wine it's excellent food and breakfast and a river cruise service, guests can enjoy - all worth over £1,000 - dining in the Riverside call now, answer 2 simple restaurant or relax in the questions and leave your Calle cost 39phain cheep rate, 49phain all other limes. Winner picked at random after lines alose 30th June, 95. Usual Newspaper Publishing rules apply Editor's decision to heat.

market report/shares

DATA BANK FT-SE 100

NIFICANT SHORTS

FT-SE 100 3679.5 -31.3 FT-SE 250 4384.5 -48.8 1861.5 -16.9

SEAQ VOLUME 772.6m shares, 29,684 bargains . Gilts Index 92.52 +0.03

Run of bad news ends a bleak year for blue chips This year has been a wipe-out for blue chips. The FT-SE 100 index closed at 3,679.5 points,

ITURDAY 29 JUNE 1996

The stock market has clearly found the latest run of poor trading news too much to handle. Although hopes are running high for profits next year there has been a series of highprofile downgradings, such as Imperial Chemical Industries. And the wounding speculation about whether BTR will be able to hold its dividend has taken its toll. The fragile atmosphere was ill-prepared for the self-imposed demolition job from Wickes, a sort of do-it-yourself builder's merchant. Its shares officially opened at 109p although there was an overnight trade at 80p. They were quickly suspended at 69p, but not be-

The hesitancy was not helped by rumours that a large investment house had turned nega-9.8 below the level it started the tive on market prospects and aggressive futures selling by Barclays de Zoete Wedd and Merrill Lynch. The political uncertainty, heightened by the Portilio rebellion, sliced into already taunt nerves.

The dramatic slowdown in investment interest has left the market long of stock, leaving market-makers little choice but to lower prices. Unlike many earlier retreats blue chips were not alone in their suffering. The rest of the market was hit, with second and third-line prices crumbling. Conglomerates, largely due to BTR's difficulties, flourdered. BTR continued its debilitating retreat, down to 246p, off 9p. The 1995/96 warrants went further out of the money.

MARKET REPORT DEREK PAIN

Stock market reporter of the year and spirit division.

The group has admitted it looked at the possibilities of a break-up but concluded it would not be in shareholders' interests. However, the market

Hanson demerger under even splitting the food and drink more pressure, with the shares sides, continue to intrigue; falling 5p to 174.5p, a 12-month low. Some analysts have sugthere is also a persistent suggestion that Guinness could begested a near-240p demerger come involved in any action, valuation. perhaps bidding for the wine

Other congloms looking less than happy included Tomkins, off 3p at 236p, Wassall 4p at 286p and TT, involved in a controversial tender offer for the Johnston building materials group, 3.5p to 347p. Caradon lost op to 221p. Grand Metropolitan was one taken out of Grand Met's hands. Its weak share perforof the few blue-chips to ignore the gathering clouds. In brisk mance - the price hit a 506p price falling 11p to 221p, a yown-ing 14p gap from the issue price. enters, ahead of investment meetings, rose 4p to 764p, and BT lost 7.5p to 3349.5p. with Dennis Exton at Nikko wondering whether telephone coups could be overwhelmed by the Internet explosion.

Amstrad surged 36p to 184p on the possibility of a takeover bid from Psion, the hand-held computer group, off 25p at 6p to 336p. Nick Bubb at Mees Pierson says the group, after nearly being squeezed out by its rivals, has become a strong player. He sees profits of £450m this year with £513m next. Prudential Corporation added 4p to 409p as it confirmed it intended to float Mercantile & Marine. It is expected awakening suspicions that a major group will barge into its merger with Varity, the US car parts group.

Television shares stirred on suggestions that Scottish TV is talking to Grampian. Scottish lost 14p to 678p.

Credit Lyonnais Laing, ahead of next month's defence contracts, alighted on British Aerospace and Hunting as beneficiaries. BAe added 3p to 993p and Hunting was little changed at 179p.
Norbain, Europe's largest closed circuit TV distributor, gained 13p to 538p after a 28.3 per cent profit increase to for six licences in Ireland at 15.3m. Panmure Gordon exist thought to have agreed to pects £6.4m this year. Anglo United, doubled to 1p on hopes it will get some ben efit from the expected Falkland Islands oil boom. Pan Andean

TAKING STOCK

THi-Tec, the sports shoe maker, has had a spectacular run since Blacks Leisure's fine results. The shares put on 4p to 57p, a 12 month neak. The company was back in the black at the interim stage and should have made further headway, perhaps approaching £2m for the year.

Cambridge Mineral Resources, due on Ofex next month, is looking for gemstones in Ireland. Spain and eden. Backers include David Bramhill, a director of Pan Andean, it has applied for six licences in ireland and acquire control of two diamond concessions in Sweden.

TLatest AIM hit is Staffware, a software group with work-flow systems. waite at 225p the shares closed at 254p.

1 (0)

unt, i

twee

peak four years ago - leaves it trading the shares rose 7p to to sell 40 per cent of the reinwas little changed at 850; an en-419p, against 464p at the turn fore other City professionals off 3p at 5p. They offer the right Placed by Henderson Crosth-Sun Life & Provincial conirance company. Lucas Industries put on 4p couraging statement on its Bohad escaped at prices as low as tinued to demonstrate how not LUASOND FRAMT livian oil adventure is expected BTR's difficulties put the Stories of a US break-up bid, to handle a flotation, with the to 231p in brisk trading, rein the next two weeks. The Independent Index The index allows you to access real-time share prices by phone from Seaq. Simply dail 0891 123 335, followed by the 4-digit code printed next to each share. To access the latest financial reports dial 0891 1233 followed by one of the two-digit codes below. ne 00 Sterling Rates 04 port 01 Bulson Report 05 02 Wall St Report 20 03 Tokyo Market 21 independent Index, including its portfolio facility, phone DB91 For assistance, call our helpline D171 873 4375 (930am - 530pm). Market leaders: Top 20 volumes FT-SE 100 index hour by hour Open 3710.2 down 0.6 11.00 3688.7 down 22.1 12.00 3686.1 down 24.7 15.00 36912 down 196 "you don't get passed from person The state of the s

Bred for profits, treated with barbarity

Paul Field reports on a call by MPs for a clampdown on the puppy trade

MPs are calling for a ban on pet dogs are kept in cramped or shops selling pupples as part of a clampdown on the sickening bitches are bred too often; trade which produces at least 50,000 dogs a year, bred for massive profits on unlicensed farms in appalling conditions.
The animals are, at worst, confined to small pens, rarely exercised and forced to live in their own filth. They are traumatised, deprived of contact with their mothers and suffer health problems. A report published yesterday claims that legal loopholes and poor enforcement allow unscrupulous breeders to escape prosecution in a trade which is worth millions of pounds. There is also concern that some licensed breeders are flouting the law to increase profits. One litter of pedigree puppies could have a retail value of £3,000.

Most popular puppies

Labradors West Highland terriers German Shepberd

The working party which produced the report was set up by the Commons All Party Animal Welfare Group and included representatives from the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the British Veterinary Association, the Kennel Club, the National Canine Defence League and the British Small Animals Veterinary Association.

Copies have been passed to the Prime Minister, Home Office minister Tom Sackville, Environment minister David Curry and the Foreign Secretary Malcolm Rifkind, because of concern about the export of puppies, sometimes for consumption in the Far East.

Tory MP Roger Gale, chairman of the group, said: "This is a national problem. We are seeking to ensure that all puppies sold are bred by licensed breeders. If we can achieve that then we might be able to start to stamp out this evil trade. We will be seeking all-party support for the introduction and implementation of legislation."

The report lists as particular puppies are taken from their mothers too early;

Under current legislation farms with two or more breeding bitches must obtain a licence from the local authority but this requires only that consideration is taken of the structural surroundings the animals are kept in, basic feeding requirements and exercise arrangements.

However, the Puppy Farm Working Group is concerned that the Breeding of Dogs Act 1973 does not compel the local authority to ensure the health and welfare of the animals are reasonable before a licence is granted. RSPCA inspector Ro-han Barker said: "The problem is that whenever we visit these farms the breeders claim the bitches are only pets and that the animals are regularly exercised. It is so frustrating because we are so powerless." The group recommends that a veterinary surgeon should ac-company local authority inspectors before a licence is granted and every farm should be visited on an annual basis before a licence is renewed.

The group believes the current penalty for unlicensed breeders of £2,500 is sufficient but recommends local authorities should take tougher action against them. The best way to ensure that more premises become licensed is to demonstrate that those who break the law will be penalised.

The report highlights the involvement of dealers - some breeders sell direct but, more often, a middleman offers puppies for sale to pet shops, at car-boot sales or through classified advertisements in newspapers.

The working group believes the only way to establish a chain of sale, and protect the consumer, is for all puppies to be implanted with a microchip - inserted by a painless injection - providing a record of their background. The most simple, yet most draconian, measure to eradicate the trade is prevent the sale of puppies from pet shops. Brian Leonard of the Kennel Club said: "Anybody buying puppies should do so from a registered breeder and see them in the conditions where they were born and with their mothers."

dogs are given insufficient exercise and human contact.

Plight of 15 terriers trapped in a farm cottage essary suffering and barred bought an eight-week-old gold-from keeping dogs for 10 years. en retriever last Angust for £185,

Collies chained to a post, labradors cowering in their own filth, a German Shepherd darting back and forth in a cramped pen, half a dozen puppies in a bread basket in total darkness...

These were some of the distressing scenes in the video footage taken by the RSCPA in recent months at puppy farms in Wales, and shown at a press conference in Westminster yesterday, writes Paul Field.

Rohan Barker has been an RSCPA inspector for seven years. He has seen cockfighting and appalling cruelty to animals but he was still shocked by what he filmed.

In April, he visited the house of an elderly woman who bred Airedale terriers. The woman had 15 terriers on the premises at the end of a dirt track and about the same number of mongrels. Most were in a filthy condition and the house was littered with excrement. In barns, Mr Barker and his colleagues found bitches weaning puppies in cramped pens, covered in mould.

The woman admitted she reg-ularly sold puppies through newspaper advertisements. She claimed she did not need a licence because she did not have more than two bitches for breeding. The RSPCA spotted five. As in most cases, prosecution did not follow. The RSPCA sends details of visits to local authorities but action is seldom taken. Mr Barker recalls one success in 1994 after he discovered puppies kept in twofoot square boxes, with the lid sealed down. The breeder was found guilty of causing unnecis to go to a farm." Jacqui Cresswell agrees. She

The Independent crossword: Sports Section, page 12

breaks down the immune sys-tem. Honey vomited and suf-The problem is the dealers supply the pet shops as well," said Mr Barker. "So the best bet fered diarrhoea, despite veterinary efforts to treat her

The story is typical of the and named her Honey. She had trade, perpetuated by unsuspecting dog lovers who would rather meet a dealer in a lay-by and pay £50 less for a pedigree

puppy than travel to the farm to check on breeding conditions.

and 24-hour attention from Mrs Cresswell. "It was a horrific death and she was in such distress," she said.

responded to a newspaper advertisement and went to kennels dead, from parvovirus which

Within a week, Honey was in Essex to collect the puppy.

a puppy I suggest you go to a rescue centre or seek advice about buying direct from a breeder," said Mrs Cresswell

Since launching a campaign to stamp out puppy farming last. October, the National Canine Defence League has been giv-However, when she tele-

£350 in vets fees, she was told she had been sold a healthy puppy.

The kennel owner was licensed to sell puppies in a commercial venture and is still operating. "If you want to buy

The HealthRider exercises all of your major muscle groups at once.

In just 20 minutes a day, three times a week, you'll look better and feel better.

So why not give us a call for a free video to introduce you to the world's best all round exercise machine.

CALLERS OUTSIDE THE UK SHOULD DIAL +353 1 406 4132

THE TOTAL BODY FITNESS MACHINE lealthRider International is a Forza Group Compan

VEHICLE RESCUE from just 26.50 from just 26.50 a year

$	5	I A	N V		0 W M 0	A N D N E Y
Ł	ÇΟ	E L V E	O F	WAS	N O W	SAVING YOU
7	L C	i A Ext	101	189.5 0	£82.50	£7.00*
ÇOI	M PR	EHE	NSIVE	165. 50	£60.00	£5.50*
AS	0 Å 5 T	BSI	DE MCE	238 ,00	£35.00	£3.00*
R	E C (D V E		729.50	£26.50	£3.00*

*Plus a once only enrolment fee of £9.50, waived

if you join by Direct Debit or continuous credit,

0 600 0 (

To celebrate our 25th anniversary, GREEN FLAG are offering you the chance to save up to £16.50[†] on vehicle rescue, Prices now start from just £26.50 for a full twelve months cover anywhere in the UK. But hurry - this special offer is only valid until 30 June. ■ 35 minute average call-out time. Most problems repaired at the roadside.

- All recoveries are completed in one direct
- 6000 skilled mechanics always on call.
- 3 million members. 25 years experience.

ENGLAND SQUAD MEDAL COLLECTION PACK 1996

When you join Green Flag at our special 10% off prices

From questionnaires re 1£16.50 includes the £9,50 er

POST TODAY • NO STAMP NEEDED
To: GREEN FLAG National Broakdown, FREEPOST, Leeds, West Yorksbire LS99 26f. Please send me more information about GREEN FLAG National Breakdown. G3150	•
Name (Mr/Mrs/Miss/Ms)	•
M	45.

ome Tel. including STD code

THE INDEPENDENT

summer of sport Wednesday 26 June 1996

England searching tor the heroes inside themselves

England enters the realm of opportunity at Wembley tonight. The stakes are enormous. The players can clinch a place in Sunday's European Championship final, the fans can shorten the odds on a home World Cup.
The prospect of a successful

The second second

English bid for the 2006 World Cup is but one of many subplots behind tonight's drama. There is also the inescapable historical background, and a Klinsmann's expression when be left the field on Sunday sugginning with those of Phil Neville and Jürgen Klinsmann.

But, come 7.30pm, all will be submerged by a match which has the potential to be a classic. This is not because England and Germany are packed with great players and thrilling talents, though each have their share, but because both are full of the courage and spirit which ensures their matches are never over until the final whistle.

Germany are probably the one team which can match the British ones for character. The history of previous meetings, suggests that the teams bring the best from each other. The game is certain to be tough, but un-likely to be spiteful; tight, but not der-rated, and there are other negative. If Klinsmann does not play England's attack has the ad-vantage - but Germany's defence four games.

If Klinsmann does not play... will he? Won't he? Yesterday. after laser, massage, electrical and chemical treatment he said he "did not think" he would, which is a step closer than the Klinsmann's expression when gested he will not start - but he is likely to be on the bench, stripped and apparently ready. If Germany are a goal down with minutes to go do not rule out an

His importance is more than just talismanic. Germany have spent two years searching for his partner, now they have to find two strikers. The likely pair, Stefan Kuntz and Oliver Bierhoff, are the sixth and seventh choices. Bierhoff, though 28, has only played six games for the national side. Kuntz has has not scored in the last 15. His last goal was on 7 Sept 1994 - the same day as Shearer's last before Euro 96.

has only been breached once in sources of goals, from Andy Möller and Mehmet Scholl in midfield, to the dangerous left wing-back Christian Ziege and influential sweeper Matthias have the more obvious match-

have turned on difference. There

By Glenn Moore, Football Correspondent

Sammer. England, however, winners and that could prove crucial. Individual brilliance, as Karel Poborsky showed, can make the difference.

Andy Roxburgh, the former Scotland manager, has been fol-lowing Euro 96 as Uefa's technical director. "A lot of games one incident," he noted. "A red card, or a penalty, or a great goal. The standard is so even, sides are so organised, everyeveryone else. You need the great talents to make the

are enough of them left. Gascoigne is one, Shearer is another who can can produce a goal from nothing."

So can Steve McManaman. The need to free him should ensure that Phil Neville wins his second England cap in place of his suspended elder brother Gary. McManaman was restricted in the first half against Spain by having to attend to Sergi's breaks from full-back. Ziege is just as much of a threat and, to counter him, England are expected to play Neville on the right.

ENGLAND v GERMANY 1 David Seam (Arsenal) 1 Andreas Köpke (E Frankfurt) (A Villa) 14 Markus Babbel (B Munich) (N Forest) 2 Stefan Reuter (Dortmund) (B Munich 10 Teddy Shering 11 Alan Shearer (Blackburn) 20 Oliver Blerhoff

It will be a bittersweet occasion for Neville, who admitted at Bisham Abbey yesterday: "I was gutted when Gary was booked. It was only at the end of the match I realised it meant I would have a chance of play-ing." Phil replaced Gary in the Manchester United team and ended up playing in the FA Cup final, but he added: "Gary has been playing brilliantly. I am sure he will be back if we get to this final. Maybe that will make up for the FA Cup."

The pair are very close - they are the only England players sharing a room - and Phil said: "We've never been rivals at sport. He'll be hind me tomorrow, as a brother and a team-mate."

he has already shown impressive composure. Right-footed, he prefers to play at left-back, citing Germany's Andy Brehme as his inspiration. "He took corners and penalties with both feet. I've try is not funny " been striving to do that ever since." Both Nevilles watched Ziege, regarded in Germany as "the new Brehme", play at Old Trafford on their day off, on Sunday. "I like to watch opponents before I play them," Phil said. He will be expected to push up, leaving the back three to attend to Germany's anticipated twin strike-force. If Germany play one up, Gareth Southagte will step into midfield. Darren Anderton is the biggest doubt among England's chuch of injury victims. Paul Gas-coigne, Teddy Sheringham and Tony Adams should all play. "Germany are very still and year, hard to draw out of resivery hard to draw out of posi-tion," Terry Venables, the England coach, said. They are a counter-attacking team."

Venables also made a plea for the German national anthem to be respected. "We are showing the world we can create a great atmosphere without trouble. It is a football match, it has players to do tonight.

nothing to do with events of 50 years ago. Some of the coverage, for this game and the Spain one, has gone too far. Insulting people's mother coun-

Should inflammatory words be followed by violent actions. the FA may have to forget plans to bid for the 2006 World Cup. Ironically, this would leave the Germans free to pursue their intended bid.

You will not find footballers denigrating Germany. In the last 12 tournaments and 25 years, they have reached eight finals and won four. In that time England, who have beaten Germany just twice in nine encounters since 1966, have not reached a single final.

England can do so tonight, but it may take something special. Before Euro 96 began, Roxburgh held a seminar for all 16 coaches. He ended it with an inspirational football video set to the M People song: "Search for the hero inside yourself". That is what Venables, the bulk of a Wembley full house, and more than 20 million TV viewers will be exhorting his

Prepare well for a night to savour

Keith Elliott

Anvone who was around in the 1960s is supposed to remember where they were when John Kennedy was shot. I'll have a small bet that any true-blood-ed Englishman of that vintage will have far more vivid memories of what they were doing when England beat Germany in the 1966 World Cup final.

Our greatest footballing moment? Well, there haven't been a lot to choose from over the past 30 years, have there? That's why it's crucial we prepare for tonight's match as carefully as we hope Terry Venables is doing.

Non-football enthusiasts might puzzle over why the nation is getting so frenzied about The Match. "It's not even the final," they argue. What these sad souls do not realise is that victory tonight is more important than winning the final. England might be the old enemy for Scottish fans but, for the English, beating the Germans is far more satisfying than turning over the Jocks, whom we usually beat anyway. The tabloids have been conducting a campaign of German warfare since the weekend, while the broadsheets have been far more restrained. You can snigger at Sun readers thinking xenophobia is a dislike, of Chinese philosophy but, mark my words, tonight's game will bring out the bigot in us all. To hell with the better team winning – just let it be us.

If you have any sense, you will be reading this at home rather Rail is staffed entirely by foot-ball-haters who will relish the opportunity to announce this evening: There has been a serious delay to all trains..." Buses will break down and lorries driven by malicious Scotsmen will shed their loads across three lanes of every major motorway. Don't let them catch you out. There are certain other precautions to take. Unplug the telephone because there is certain to be a plague of wrong numbers between 7.30pm and 9.15pm. Disconnect the doorbell and secure all doors. Get rid of the family. Locking them in a cupboard may seem extreme, but giving valium to particularly noisy children or pets is perfectly acceptable. Getting dressed up is not compulsory. Office workers may find their grey suits, per-haps with adhesive stick-on numbers on the jacket, are all that is needed. If eating during the match, make sure you order your pizza delivery to arrive at least an hour before kick-off. Alcoholic beverages will heighten your appreciation of refereeing decisions in a way that tea or orange juice can never do. Champagne should be your preferred drink. It has the double advantage that you can shake the bottle and squirt it all over yourself when England win. Dutch and Swiss beer is acceptable, but do not in any circumstances consume anything made in Germany or Austria.

This may all seem like a lot of effort just for 90 minutes of football. But, in 30 years' time, you will be able to look back and say proudly: "I was there."

If anyone can England can success tonight.

As proud sponsors of Euro 96™ and associate sponsors of the England Team. Canon UK wish England every oub ast CJ atl erdict the worker wi tural caus today. anklin, 5 full fitness eck in only se of Cre l: "I have f a natural , t is one of lose frien aid after wenough) remains

eve it was : really low

ad been an

er. If it wa

vhat was i

mer wife.

Avenue. his roast I'm convi ad him, to with catt ruld have i if people at sure. hologist, from L y, who can imation old the inq from CI usual for ariant, he s such a i no statist between ras the o vorker in d told t meat, esp in enorme had grad a period

ust, he lo

is sense

ud that

ne unable vent by, h ok uncor lied at h reet. Yor ked at a hs in 198 ved in the trying to beef that racd with Oncerned rs might eveloping ng CJD is it can be

Ken Jones on the memorable encounters of the past between two great rivals

Shortly before West Germany played a friendly against Eng-land at Wembley in 1975, a presentation was made to their famed coach, the late Helmut Schön, by members of the English Football Writers' Association.

A mark of the esteem in which Schon was held, it provided him with an opportunity to express genuine admiration for the virtues of English football. "As a small boy I knew about the game in England and matches against them have been among the most important events of my career," he said.

By that time Schön's experience encompassed three matches that figure prominently in the football lore of both countries.

ENGLAND v GERMANY: THE. COMPLETE RECORD

1966 Wembley (friendly) England 1 West Germany 0 1966 Wembley (World Cup Final) England 4 West Germany 2 (set) 1970 Leon (World Cup q-final) England 2 West Germany 3 (aet) 1972 Wembley (Euro Champ) England 1 West Germany 3 1972 Berlin (Euro Champ). West Germany 0 England 0 1978 Musich (Friendly) West Germany 2 England : 1984 Wembley (friendly) England 1 East Germany 0 1985 Mexico City (Mendiy) England 3 West Germany 0 1990 Birth (World Cup semi-flor England 1. West Germany 1 (act) West Germany won 4-3 on pens) 1991 Wembley (Friendly) England O Germany 1 1993 Detroit (US Cup) England 1. Germany 2

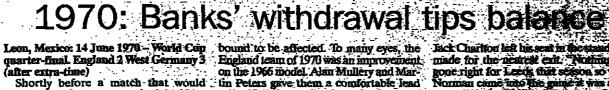

The ball bounces above the goal-line for England's controversial third goal during extra time in the 1966 World Cup final Photograph Hulton Cety/Alisport

1966: 'Lunatic' gamble reaps reward

July 1966 - World Cup El who was always a certainty in my mind, the ball straight to Helmut Ma.
4 West Germany 2 faith; and showed an excellent understanding, sent it past Gordon Banks. Engin with the other West Ham lark Bobby porters were reassured six minimal Moore and Martin Peters."

In Germany's cassar, Helman Schon, 100. Ind teached a decision — one that involved when Hurst shet Moure's free kills a flawless header. With 13 minutes play, it looked as thomas England hands on the Inice Rimet ropid from Hurst, a deflection across the Germany's last minute baudisse ma of extractions. You've won it of go out and win again," Ramsey sa Hurst's clinching goal. Ramsey sa bring West Germany revenge for four-years earlier, England's goalkeeper. Gordon Banks, collapsed in a team meeting.

Taken ill the previous day, he had improved enough overnight to do a little light prac-tice but now it was obvious to Alf Ramsey that he would have to be replaced. the team had any doubts about his ability but the uneasiness felt over Banks's absence was understandable. A thrilling save to thwart Pele in a group match against Brazil had confirmed that his gifts of agility and handling were still without equal in and with a little more than 20 minutes to play they seemed set for the semi-finals. It was then that Schon replaced Libuda with Grabowski, who had established a rep-ntation for being the most influential substitute in the tournament. Inspired by his example, the Germans began to spread With less than an hour to go before alarm in England's defence and Becken-England departed for the stadium. Peter bauer brought them back into the game with Bonetti learned that he was about to play a shot that sneaked beneath Bonetti's in a World Cup for the first time. None of dive. Fate was crowding in: The controversial substitution of Colin Bell for Charlton followed immediately (our the flight back to London two days later Ramsey apologised to Charlton for bringing him off in what was the last match of a great international career) and soon Northe game, so England's confidence was man Hunter was on for Peters. Seeing this, gone right for Leets that sesson so when Norman came into the game it was a bad onen," he said. Unable to watch any longer he wandered around outside the longer he wandered around outside the stadium until the game was over.

Hunter had only been out there a few seconds when the Germans chew level through Seeles, whose looping header caught Boneau in no man's land as set up extra-time. Long steri Gerd Minder's goal finished off England, Ranney could be found sitting discoussitately near small model chalet, still in the reaction and sipping champagne. Of all the chalets in Seeme had to lose Gordon. Beinglighed the seeme seeme seeme states the seeme seemed.

ENGLAND

1990: Robson pays the ultimate penalty:

Gordon Banks turns away in despair and Gerd Müller in triumph after West Germany's penalty strike at Wembley, 1972 Photograph: Alsoon/MSI

Inrin: 4 July 1990 - World Cmp sent-final and the introduction of David Platt as an him out of the final whetever the outcome.

England 1 West Germany 1 (after extra-time auxiliary attacker, things began to happen. Gascoigne teams into it, and yet again England penalties).

Almost out of nowhere, they were in flurin. Land and West Germany west into extra-

After living dangerously in the worst. World Cup on record, lucky to get past Belgium and saved from humiliation against Cameroon by Gary Lineker's penalties, England found themselves within one match of the 1990 World Cup Final. Again they were up against the Germans, who now had Franz Beckenhauer as their coach.

Bobby Robson's team had not got that far without coming under heavy criticism at home and falling out with football writ-ers who had questioned their ability and commitment. It was a pretty miserable at-mosphere that some of us came across when arriving for group games in Sardinia, and nothing much had improved by the time England reached the mainland.

Nobody outside the England camp imagined much of an improvement, but with Paul Gascoigne coming on in the game and renewing their historical rivalry with and renewing their historical rivalry with the Germans.

Standing on the teachline, a historical rivalry with time.

Standing on the teachline, a historical rivalry with time.

Standing on the teachline, a historical rivalry with time.

The unsatisfactory if necessary settlement only be described as high drama. Timeter, coaches, Beckenbauer's hope of becoming the only man other than Mario Zagaillo of Brazil to win the World Cap both as a player and manager was clearly under threat when England settled down to play their best football of the tournament. At last there were clear signs of togetherness, and it enabled them to overcome the blow of losing a goal when Andy Brehme's free kick was deflected past Peter Shilton.

Fearing Lineker's predatory instinct, the Germans had gone deeply into means of containing him but were in disarray when he spun clear of markers to equalise 10 intrustes from the end of normal time.

Knowing that a second booking had ruled

Knowing that a second booking had ruled

Paul Augustialer Deft) and Paul Gascolgae ran neck and neck during the World Cup semi-final to Turing 1990. - Photograph: Popperint

Vogts saves his best put-down until the last

Germany responded yesterday with a famous Churchillian gesture to the tabloid newspaper which tiresomely declared football war on them on Monday.

Berti Vogts' team have self he had hardly stepped foot enough casualties on their outside the "massage room" to hands after the battle with Croatia to get involved in any further hostilities, real or imag-ined. Wembley tonight, the German coach trusts, will be the scene of a football match - nothing more. Their sombre mood of Sunday, when they counted the physical cost of their bruising good, I personally don't think semi-final victory against the Croats gave way, within the Germates tomorrow," he said. man camp, to lightheartedness and a degree of fatalism which days to heal... not being able to one sensed was a deliberate ploy to lull the England team into a trating."

false sense of security.

as a spectator. It was significant, however, that the Germans had not given up hope on his torn calf recovering in time for Sunday's final. Such nerve. Klinsmann was a quick healer, Vogts

As for the former Spur himoutside the "massage room" to make his re-acquaintance with the English capital since flying down from Manchester on Monday. He was undergoing constant heat and laser treatment since having seven or eight injections in the calf immediately after the game. "While our doctors are very good, I personally don't think play in the semi-final is very frus-

His fellow striker, Fredi Bo-Their talisman, Jürgen Klins- bic, injured in the same game, mann, will get no closer to the has flown home to see whether action tonight than possibly a his torn shoulder cartilage reseat on the substitutes bench - quires an operation. "If not"

said the interpreter, "he will back to cheer the team on in the next matches." He meant match. Old habits die hard.

The relaxed atmosphere, first generated at the squad's training camp in Ireland, has continued to stand them in good stead throughout these adversities. The German press expressed surprise that, unlike with one or two other countries, there had been no internal strife in their own team's camp. Vogts replied: "The truth is there have been problems but we haven't ventured outside with them. It only seemed to be quiet on the German front." Asked whether tonight's highly emotive occasion might effect some of his players - only two of whom, Thomas Hässler and Andreas Möller, have played at Wembley before -Vogts came back with one of the great put-downs of this tournament: "No, not at all. The German team is quite used to reaching the semi-finals of mafor tournaments. So far as we're World Cup qualifiers.

Möller: Wembley experience

mal European Championship. The little coach was clearly in good form. If his feet were as quick as his mind, one sensed the former full-back might still give Anderton and McManaman a run for their money. Would Gazza cry? "Yes I think there would be tears. Whether they are tears of joy or disappointment remains to be seen, but cry he will.

England would begin the game as clear favourites, he said, shifting a little more pressure the host's way. They have warmed to their task and gone from strength to strength."

He enjoyed a "close, cordial relationship" with Terry Venables, he said, to whom he had given all Germany's files on

Georgia and Moldova, two of England's opponents in the Wembley - this is where the eyes of even grown men and spoiled stars, like Jürgen Klinsmann, are turning moist.

Tears choked the German captain as he limped off at Old Trafford last Sunday. Tears of desperation, not of pain, fully aware that he was very probably going to miss Wembley. But tendinms will not prevent Thomas Heimer from appearing in the semi-final: "I have never played at Wembley. For me, a personal dream has come true." Until the Fifties, Wembley's hallowed turf was unconquerable for over half a century, its protective aura scattered only when the Mighty Magyars travelled across the Channel. Its dramatic symbolism to Germans is not surpassed by any other stadium in the world. Wembley made one German prisoner of war an English hero: Bert Trautmann, the legendary goalkeeper, who won the 1956 Cup final with Manchester City despite sustaining a broHartmut Scherzer looks at Wembley's emotional significance to the visitors

Germans make awed approach to football's greatest symbol mous and most contentious goal in football history. The third English goal, which came off the crossbar and bounced on the line, making the score 3-2, was decisive in England's victory over Germany in the World Cup final 30 years ago.

Germany had to wait until 1972 for its first victory over England at Wembley, a memorable 3-1 victory in the European Championship. This match marked the birth of the Wunderteam, spearheaded by Beckenbauer and Netzer, which went on to become European champions a few weeks later.

But Wembley also moves personal destinies in a mysterious way. Stefan Kuntz knows something about that. In 1991, Germany's Footballer of the Year should have made his first international appearance bley's home advantage against against England at Wembley. a drastically weakened Ger-

Wembley gave us the most fa-ous and most contentious But stepping out of the coach before a Bundesliga game in Munich, he fell and tore a ligament. Now the injuries sus-tained by Klinsmann and Fredi

> For the English, however, Wembley is not the stage of its dramas involving the Germans. In the 1970 World Cup in Mexico, England, the reigning champions, squandered a twogoal lead and tumbled out of the quarter-finals at the hands of Gerd Müller.

Bobic bring Kuntz back to the Twenty years later, in Turin, England again fell to Germany. this time in the semi-final on penalties. Stuart Pearce, who missed one of them, has only now healed his six-year trauma in the shoot-out against Spain.

The English media do not conceal their delight at Wembley's home advantage against man side, disappointing in their quarter-final win over Croatia We were once again not able to put the opponent under pressure," Helmer said. Andreas Möller added: "If I had played better, the team would eve played better." And even the outstanding Matthias Sammer remarked: "We did not coler ourselves in glory in reaching

After reaching the semi-finals, Wembley could determine Berti Vogts' personal destiny but only in a positive sense: winning Euro 96 would give him his first title as team manager after all the setbacks.

Wembley beckons and Helmer tries to confound the critics and the doublets. We critics and the doubters. should learn to be happy again - at least until the next game. I am looking forward to Wemb-ley, we will face the English of the no fear. The chances are 50-50 In spite, or perhaps because of the power the Wembley mith holds over German football.

Translation by Thomas Gent

صحدًا من الاعل

Stuart Pearce celebrates (above) after finally exorcising the ghost of his penalty miss against Germany in the 1990 World Cup semi-final in Turin (top right) in the quarter-final shoot-out against Spain last Saturday (bottom right) Photographs: David Ashdown/EPA/Robert Hallam

pac eight week ago, he has not spend of more. Paid by increasing in 1990, wh

8 Maithlas Sa

(28, 44, 4) YELEOW 8006

(24, 21, A) VELION CASO ack whose dust with Michiganian doubt to a

[23, 17, 3)

ENGLAND (probable)

WHO'S WHO IN TONIGHT'S LINE-UP

Plasterer's mate on the way to greatness to celebrate his 50th birthday, George Best was invited by BBC 2 to select his all-time fantasy football XI made up of players from the British Isles. Denis Law was in there, Bobby Moore, Jimmy Greaves, Bobby Charlton too, the XI was full of the kind of names standard in that type of in-the-pub ex-ercise. But there at left-back was an unexpected inclusion, proof positive, for some commentators, of the debilitating effects of alcohol. Never mind his appearance on Wogan, nothing confirmed that old Bestie's in had finally addled quite as conclusively as his selection, in his best team of all time, of Stuart Pearce. Until last Saturday afternoon,

Pearce was, for many commentators. metaphor for the limitations of English football. Unquestionably wholehearted, committed, steel-lunged, he nevertheless lacked the technical capabilities required to make a difference at the highest level. The cut of his shorts seemed to say it all. Hitched up higher than is strictly necessary, they expose yards of thick thigh, the pistons to make this machine run and run all day. It was those legs that were, in several quarters, blamed for the disappointing international career of John Barnes. Instead of the clever ball-tofeet he was used to at Liverpool, when he played for England Barnes spent most of his time receiving atomic-powered trajectories drilled by the left-back at his shins. There was nothing deliberate in Pearce's bad passes, it was just that those body-builder thighs were too mus-cular to undertake any of the finer subtleties of the game. England would get nowhere with plasterers' mates like him in the side, it was reckoned: the moniker Psycho said it all. Since Saturday, those of us who held such views have, like the television critic who suggested Alan Partridge lacked daring, been getting out a large dish, a knife and fork and have been eating our words. A doorto-door delivery business has been required to service the critical need for humble pie. On Saturday, Pearce proved us wrong. He gave ample demonstration that the qualities he possesses in abundance - those of courage, commitment and strength of character - are as valuable in the nerve-searing atmosphere of an international football tournament as any amount of subtlety and technique. The Spaniards may have thanks to Pearce, they, like the foot-

this man you'd want him to go over Platt had even scored that evening. number of other England players. with you first," said Alan Hansen immediately after Pearce's penalty many in 1990 was all the more aw- on that night in Turin and includes pable of recognising a great full-back.

(25 9.1)

2 Stofan House 29 85 3 Tollow CVID 20 85 South spini logar in *2011*96

ratings

Jim White salutes Stuart Pearce. the England left-back whose spirit and bravery lifted a nation and silenced his many doubters

in the cold light of reflection, but Hansen, as usual, had a point: at times football, like warfare, is advanced by acts of individual determination and courage rather than broader visions of tactics and buried itself into the corner of the Spanish net. Hyperbolic it may seem ful because it was not what you expected of him. Reliability was his game, that and power, the two prerequisites for a penalty-taker, you would have thought. As he stepped up to face Bodo Illgner, the nation believed it had a banker. Instead the lionheart fluffed it.

The miss haunted Pearce. It was the great if-only, he couldn't be commight react, down there in the stalls, watching what might have been England recalls watching him, nervous about the pain he was about to re-inflict and remembers that when the moment came, and the dream penalty went in on stage, Pearce leapt to his feet, yelled "Yeecess!" and brought the house down. On Saturday, Pearce brought the house down again.

"I think you could call Stuart the

Von S

OU

as C.

itural c

ranklin

ı fuli fit

eck in c use of C

i I hav

t is one lose fr

aid aft

OW CIRK

Juestini

really

ad been

er. If it

vhat wa

merwi

Avenue

i his roa

I'm cor

d him,

with ca

ruid hav

if people

Di Sure.

hologis

from

y, who c old the i

trom C

⁺usual (

mant, h

Such a

no stat

rid that vas the vorker i d told i meat, c ил епогл

a fantasy sequence in which Pearce doesn't miss. Chris England, the play-wright, was worried how the player bravest man on the planet to take that penalty after what happened be-fore," said his team-mate Paul Ince, his recollection erased by the euphoria of triumph of the memory that the two of them had once clashed in a Premiership match over alleged racist taunts. Pearce himself said he had no doubts. He needed to take a penalty in a shoot-out, he said he'd wanted to from the day he'd missed. His face, a rictus of square-jawed pride and relief, suggested what a re-lease it was. And rightly so. On Sun-day he went to Finsbury Park to introduce his favourite group, The Sex Pistols, up on stage: the tumultuous greeting he received made it clear the nation (or at least its crustier representatives) had forgiven him for Turin.

In a way Pearce is lucky to have been able to exorcise his penalty chost, Had Graeme Le Saux not broken a leg. had Terry Venables done what most critics implored and replaced him after two poor early performances in the tournament with Phil Neville. Alex Ferguson's Maldini-in-the-making, Pearce wouldn't even have been on the pitch at Wembley. But if it was lucky for Pearce that he was, it was even luckier for his team-mates and the evergrowing England following. After he scored, he turned to the crowd and bellowed "come on." This was not an instruction to applaud him, but to get behind the team, to lift them to even greater heights, to take collective responsibility. With that goal Pearce suggested to us all that it was now possible. That if everyone fol-lowed him and displayed his guts and attitude it will be enough to defeat even a team as skilful, committed and determined as the Germans.

At that moment Stuart Pearce proved his worth. He might not be able to pass as well as Neville, he might not be be able to read the game like Maldini, he might not be capable of as devastating an overlap as Sergi, but when it comes to lifting a nation's heart, he has no equal. West End, Pearce, along with a We should have trusted Bestie all was invited along. The play centres along: he of all people should be capenalty than its execution. Gascoigne, Platt and Shearer all took theirs with equal precision and purpose; all of them stood four-square when volunteers were called for: all of them would have been aware of the consequences of missing as they stepped up to ad-dress the ball. None of them, however, had, on 4 July 1990, in the Stadio delle Alpi in Turin, missed a penalty in the shoot-out of the World Cup worn beautifully cut shorts, but semi-final. None of them had experienced what Pete Davies memo-"If you were in the trenches with "the black pit of loss opened wide."

Pearce's miss against West Gerforted about it, not at the time or later. This man you would want beside you in the trenches, this man who reckons that the best Christmas present he has ever received was the flag-pole and Union Jack his wife once gave him, felt he had let his everywhere he went people reminded him of it, he watched videos of the shoot-out time and again at home. When the play An Evening

For six years he couldn't escape it:

country down.

EDITED BY RUPERT METCALF

The master of the shoot-out

ceedings at Old Trafford today, France can rest assured that they will have the calmest man on the pitch. Few players view penalty shoot-outs quite like Bernard Lama, whose save from Clarence Secdorf opened the way for Aimé Jacquet's team to beat the Dutch and earn today's semi-final against the Czech Republic.

"I love the challenge," Lama told the French sports daily L Equipe af-ter Saturday's quarter-final. "It's a moment when you have to be strong and sure of yourself. It's one with Bruce Grobbelaar, whose ec-

Lama's brilliant reflex saves but sometimes eccentric goalkeeping timidate the opposition. "I don't say win the European Cup-Winners' (his kicking can be erratic, to say the a word and I don't try to catch the Cup: now a greater prize beckons. least) have prompted comparisons eye of the penalty takers," he said, this level. The penalty-takers are all strong-willed guys. I prefer just to concentrate on the ball. The ball is the only thing that counts. You need to see what direction it's going and move at the very last moment."

Nor does Lama's contribution

end there. At Anfield he gave words of advice and encouragement to France's five penalty takers before each kick. Lama has even been known to take penalties himself, although he has yet to do so for his country.

The 33-year-old Lama only beof the rare occasions when a goal- centric antics during another fa- came a regular choice at the age of keeper can save his team. In my mous shoot-out helped Liverpool 30. A pillar of French football for the whole career, and even as a boy, I've win the 1984 European Cup final last 10 years, he is proof that success never lost a penalty shoot-out." in Rome. in Rome. can come to those who wait. Last
Not that Lama ever tries to inmonth he helped Paris St-Germain can come to those who wait. Last

RIP-OFFS

No 15: Buses from Leeds city centre to Elland Road last week were charging £1.50 for the short trip – almost three times the normal fare. Have you come across any monster rip-offs? If so, fax details to Euro-spy on 0171 293 2894.

Sleepy Russian caught in bed

The Russian defence often gave the impression of being in a state of collective slumber during their Group C matches against Germany, Italy and the Czech Republic. As they left for home last week, however, one der strict orders during the tourmember of their squad really was nament and were not allowed to caught out - he overslept at the have much fun, but on their last team hotel and was left behind as the Russians set off.

He was found in bed at the good time.

Wrightington Hotel and Country
Inb, near Wigan, by a chamber-the chambermaid went to his room. Wrightington Hotel and Country Club, near Wigan, hy a chambermaid 20 minutes after the party had left for the airport. The embarrassed player was then bundled into a car team-mates, who had not even no- to tell them they'd left one behind ticed that he was missing.

The hotel refused to reveal his name, but its manager, David Calderbank, said: "He made the plane home although I think he had a bad head. The squad had been unnight they went to a night-club in Wigan and they obviously had a

She ran down to me and, although he could speak no English, when I showed him my watch he just leapt and was rushed off to join his from the bed. I rang the team coach and they hadn't even noticed ..."

FOOTBALL: THE UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

"Stuart Pearce ist eine bluse für ein grosses mädchen." which is German for: "Stuart Pearce is a big girl's blouse."

Semi-finals

Tance v Czech Republic (5.0) at Old Trafford, today)

Sunday: (7.0) (at Wembley).

FOUR GOALS: Shearer (England). THREE GOALS: Stoichkov (Bulgaria), B Laudrup (Denmark), Klinsmann (Germa-ny), Suker (Crostia). TWO GOALS: Costraghi (flaty), Sher-ingham (England), Sammer (Germany).

SUSPENDED FROM SEMI-FINALS: G Nevillo (Engand), Karembeu (France), Bejol, Latal, Kuka, Suchoparek (all Czech Republic)

ON ONE YELLOW CARD: England: Adams, Shearer, Sheingtam, Southgate, France: Di Meco, Blanc, Djorkseff, Desally, Dugarry, Deschamps, Germany: Reuter, Hassler, Möter, Muntz, Ziege, Bierhoff, Klinsmann, Sammer, Cauch Remarkier, Bullak Manne, Seriandie.

åerman

aps rewa

had gra a perio īrst, he is sense re unabl ffered fr vent by, ok unc tied at reet, Yo ked at !hs in 19 lved in the trying CJD ca beef th

:cted wit опсетис 'rs migh evelopin ng CJD i equires:

STATE TO STATE

France want the will to win Free-kick maestros

France's coach, Aimé Jacquet, used the word "explosive" to characterise the kind of encounter he expects in today's semi-final against the Czech Republic. While not the most sensitive term for a game in Manchester, Old Trafford can only hope he is right after the damp squib of the quarter-finals.

Jacquet must be wary of promoting too combustible a contest. The Czechs have the worst dis-ciplinary record at Euro 96, which has cost their coach, Dusan Uhrin, a quartet of suspended players. The same number of Frenchmen - Laurent Blanc, Youri Djorkaeff, Marcel Desailly and Didier Deschamps - play knowing that a caution would put them out of Sunday's final.

The Czechs' latest flurry of cards, tarnishing the 1-0 win over Portugal, should have tilted the balance towards France, Likewise the news that the underdogs' most cultured player, Patrik Berger, has only a 50-50 chance of playing af-ter missing two days' training with through illness.

Jacquet, seeking to discourage the notion that a final place is little more than a formality, said yesterday: "I know the Czech team well. They hang back and send you to sleep, breaking up the rhythm of the match. Then they explode forward. The new players in the side will make them even more dangerous than usual. They'll be fresher, with something to prove." The occasion, Jacquet added, promised to be "very explosive, full of emotion". Proving that he and Eric Cantona agree on one thing, he described Manchester United's home as a "magnificent stadium" where good football was "passionately appreciated". At this stage, unfortunately, artistic merit does not rank high among the priorities of tired players or coaches. France, while yet to give full expression to the talents which convinced Jacquet he needed neither Cantona nor David Ginola, have their best side since Michel Platini lifted the trophy in 1984. Yet their edge in quality may be worthless unless they impose their will on the game.

TWO TO WATCH OUT FOR AT OLD TRAFFORD TODAY

Age: 27. Sparta Prague.

While leaking six goals in three group games was not the best sales pitch to Rangers, Wolves and other interested parties, Kouba was largely blameless and did not put a finger wrong against Portugal. At 6ft, he is on the small side for his position nowadays but compensates with spectacular agility. Son of a former Czechoslovakia keeper and coached by Ivo Viktor, of the Euro 76 winners, he also has sound technique and temperament. Having displaced Ludek

Jacquet selects from a full Karembeu (suspended) and Christophe Dugarry (injured). The former's absence could let in Sabri Lamouchi in midfield. Alternatively, Desailly might switch from the back into central midfield, with Deschamps moving right and Alain Roche coming into defence. Such a rejig would mean disturbing the unit on which France's progress has been founded.

Miklosko and Pavel Smicek, he epitomises an underrated side. Compared with the Czechs, squad apart from Christian France have an embarrassment of riches. For the most important game in the history of the fledgling nation, Uhrin found himself counting players as much as much as coaching them.

"My biggest wish is to beat France, but without five players it will be very difficult," he said. If Berger is unfit, we will have to consider a change of tactics. We'll probably play two strikers instead of one."

PATRICE LOKO Age: 26. Paris St-Germain.

With the injured Christophe Dugarry out of the tournament, the striking burden for France will fall on a player who has been a prolific scorer in club football in recent years. Patrice Loko, who made his name with Nantes before moving to the French capital last summer, had been alternating with Dugarry in the national team in recent months. While Dugarry is regarded as a better pivot to the attack, Loko is perhaps the better goalscorer, as he showed with his calm finish to score against Bulgaria last week.

smokescreen. The Czechs' record - three defeats in 22 games - almost matches that of Jacquet's France, who are unbeaten in 27. With hindsight, it was amazing that any team taking eight points from the Netherlands and Norway in qualifying could have been considered makeweights.

In Prague, the new parliament has voted to break up in time for kick-off. With their alleged exploits in the field of beer and

All of which may well be a bonking, the Czechs have captured floating voters much as Denmark did four summers ago. But France are equipped to ensure that their story does not have the same, dizzying denouement.
czech REPUBUC (Probable) (1.2-5-2): Koulpa (Sparsa Prague): Kadleo (Passassausan): Hernak
Sparta, Kable, Petas Droues): Pobosile (Sava Pague): Pydok (Sparta). Barger (Brusse Dor-

need some magic

"Get the free-kicks on target" and "Make sure the keeper makes a save", are among the oldest mantras in the game. Euro 96 has yielded precious few goals from set-pieces, but the lack of invention has been even more disappointing. There have been too many thoughtless lashes against the wall and not enough attempts showing guile and originality.

I had hoped these championships would see the unveiling of new ideas, maybe even the emergence of a Tostao or Platini for the Nineties. Instead the blunderbuss approach seems to have triumphed.

Until recently, the fashion for free-kicks just outside the box had become ever more intricate. In the end too many touches and too many dummies led to a loss of momenturn. Teams ended up shooting 10 yards back from where the original free-kick was.

National team coaches will tell you that there are no opportunities to practise their set-pieces in secret these days. Certainly, when travelling abroad with Scotland, we encountered everything from Romanians spying on us up in the trees to Italians posing as tourists, attempting to film us on camcorders.

Of course we are no different, and are often supplied with information from "sources". So why not work out a new freekick on a board in the team hotel, or even walk through it in the lobby? Well, it doesn't work. At the top level, free-kicks need to be drilled with split-second timing. It can only be done on a pitch. Saturation television coverage by Sky, Eurosport and the terrestrial stations poses another problem. As soon as a new idea is used it becomes obsolete. I once copied a John Collins idea. (The ball was rolled to me. I stopped it and as a third man was about to hit it, I dragged it away and had

COMMENTARY

PAT NEVIN a shot myself. The momentum of the defender trying to charge down the shot took him through to the decoy, giving me the space to shoot.) I tried it again a month later and was almost halved in two by a defender. Even at Football League level, everyone is watching everyone else. One excellent double bluff occurred in the recent Scotland v Netherlands game. In previous matches our wall had been instructed to jump as the kick was taken, making it more difficult to get the ball up, over us and then down again. The Dutch coach, Guus Hiddink, had spotted this and their first free-kick was struck firmly along the ground, un-demeath our "airborne" wall, almost resulting in a goal. Looking at the teams in the semi-finals, England seem to have put the most thought into their set-pieces. Terry Venables is particularly wily, but I will be mightily impressed if they breach the German defence at any set-piece other than a penalty kick. Under pressure in the Italian game, the Germans rarely looked like cracking. They are excellent defenders, superbly organ-ised and, vitally, they are big, powerful blockers off the ball.

France have talented deadball specialists in Djorkaeff and Zidane, but they haven't produced the goods yet. They did manage to score from a corner, Laurent Blanc producing an old-fashioned centre half's header, but I doubt if the Czech Republic's Suchoparek will allow him such a clear run at the ball today. Don't think for a moment that the coaches have thrown in the towel with set-pieces though. Scotland practise both our own kick-offs and the kick-offs our opponents commonly use. Even throw-ins in the opponents' half are worked at long and hard. Just watch how many teams have players doing "crossovers" in order to receive the ball on the move, in a little space. It is simple, almost always effective and difficult to defend. The Italians have used the technique to great effect for years. Roberto Baggio would stand near the junction of the penalty box and the goal-line. He would then make an arced run that took him to the edge of the area and then horizontally across the 18-yard line. The ball would be thrown along the 18-yard line and after one bounce he would have an angled shot at goal. Baggio was usually free from defenders because a team-mate had made the same run in the opposite direction, blocking Roberto's marker as they crossed. Gianfranco Zola used the same ploy in the game against Russia, almost resulting in a goal. England may well revert to their more old-fashioned techniques. Gary Neville's long throw will not be available tonight, but they could still use Tony Adams's near-post flick from corners and Pearce's blast from free-kicks.

I just think that a set-piece goal is more likely to come from a touch of individual brilliance. From a player who can do delicate things with a ball that others can't. There isn't a Stoichkov or a Hagi left in the tournament, but there

WIN a drive in a grand prix car

lormula 1 Dream Team is just like Fantasy Football: you pick and manage your dream grand prix team to score points over the sea-

Even though the grand prix season has started, it is not too late to join in: pit your wits against other enthusiasts and you could win our overall 1996 champion's prize, a drive in a Formula One car plus additional prizes for each race.

Your team must comprise three drivers, a chassis and an engine; your budget is £40 million. Make your selections from the grand prix shopping list (printed right); the only restriction is that your third driver must come from the £1 million category. Details of how to enter are given on this page. You can enter a team at any point during the grand prix season but the earlier you enter, the greater your chances of being our overall champion. Remember, there are prizes for the winning Dream Team in each ndividual grand prix so you can enter a different team for each race.

HOW YOU SCORE

Points are awarded per race to the top six finishers, based on the Formula One World Championship points scoring system (10, 6, 4, 3, 2, 1) but with an extra 10 points awarded to each of the top six finishers. All drivers are eligible to score for a top six finish but can also notch up extrá points as follows:

The fastest driver in race-day warmup will collect six points, with five for the second and so on down to one point for the sixth quickest.

 Drivers score one point for each place they make up over their grid posi-tion. Points are not deducted by losing

Five points are lost if your driver posts first retirement, four for second down to one point lost for the fifth retirement. If your driver makes the quickest pitstop (from the entry of the pitlane to the exit) you gain five points.

● If your driver sets the fastest lap time in the race, you gain five points.

■ If your driver receives a stop/go penalty, you lose five points. If your driver starts on pole position.

you gain five points. The Independent will name a Driver of the Day after each race for a particularly impressive performance. worth five points.

● Non-qualification for a grand prix loses you two points. If a driver is on the

Plus prizes to be won with every grand prix

DREAM TEAM TOP PRIZE

FIA's published starting grid but fails to or any early retirement. The score is based on the first chassis home of that particular manufacturer. Likewise, only the first chassis retirement will count if they are

• Engine rules are the same as the chassis rules, without the retirement

both among the first five to retire.

The Dream Team manager with the highest number of points at the end of the Grand Prix Championship season will win our top prize - a drive in a 650hlip FI car. You will be flown to the AGS team's training school in the south of France for the most exhibitrating experience of your life. The school specialises in F1 courses and provides all the racewear and instruction you will need for a day driving F1 and other single seat airs.

HOW TO ENTER Choose your Dream Team from the shop-

take the start, no points are lost. Drivers removed from the results for ping list on this page. Remember, you must choose three drivers (the third from the any reason lose all points gained that £1 million section), one chassis and one weekend. Any driver not competing in a engine. You must not exceed your grand prix weekend scores no points. budget of £40 million. Chassis score and lose points in the Give your team a name and register it same way as drivers for a top six finish by ringing 0891 891 805. You will immediately be asked the entry question: How many races are there in this year's Formula One World Champi-To enter your Dream Team details you can use one of two methods. Method 1 uses a tone phone that lets you DREAM TEAM registration: 0891 891 805

PRESCH GRAND PRIX PRIZE The Dream Tours in abor of polists following the French ed fictions to the Gormon Grand Prix et > key in the code numbers of your driver, chassis and engine choices. The comput-er will check that your team falls within budget and is eligible.

Method 2 uses a non-tone phone and you give your details verbally. A budget check is not possible using this method. When you have registered your Dream

Team, you will be asked to predict the number of points this year's champion will notch up over the year. In case of a tie at the end of the season, the nearest figure to the champion's points will win the top trize. In the event of a further tie, the team that registered first will win. Once you have registered your team you

TEAM POSITION CHECK THE STOP SOF BOS CALLES & TOP SO TRANSCRIPT SO SOF

telephone number. Your team selections plus your personal details will be played back to you and, when you confirm that they are correct, you will be given a PIN will be asked for your name, address and

This is confirmation of your entry and will enable you to access the score check-

There is no limit on the number of teams an individual can enter, but only one team can be registered per call.

CHECKING YOUR SCORE

Formula One Dream Teams.

You can check your team's position at any time by calling 0891 891 896 and quoting your PIN number. If you want to know the individual driver, chassis and engine scores from the most recent race, call 0891 891 807. This line will also list the Top 50

1. All telephone calls are charged at 39p per minute cheap rate, 49p per minute at allother times, with a typical call to secure your entry lasting between five and 2. The deadline to be included in a particular race is midday the Friday prior to that race. 3. The judge's decision is final, no correspondence will be entered into and there is no cash alternative for prizes.

4. Employees of Newspaper Publishing Plc, Haymarket Publishing Ltd and all associated companies and their families are incligible. 5. Entrants must be 18 or over and residents of the UK or the Irish Republic. 6. To be eligible for the main prize, you must hold a current driving licence, be no more than 1.95m tall and weigh no more than 2201bs. 7. All scores will be worked out according to the official FIA time sheets produced at the meeting. The values stated for drivers, engines and chassis bear no relation to real life. 8. In the event of a tie for the Dream Team Top Prize or for any of the individual race prizes, the team that registered first will

9. For lost PIN numbers please call: 0891 891 808. For our Helpline call: 01275 344183.

10. The Top 50 Teams Line, lists the top 50 teams from the last race. Both the Team Position Check Line and the Results & Top 50 Teams Line will be updated at 2 pm on the Monday following a race.

Shopping List

DRIVERS £25m 1 M Schumacher

2 J Ales 3 D Hill £20m 4 G Berger £18m 5 D Couithard 6 E Irvine

£23m

7 I Villeneuve £13m 8 M Hakkinen 9 H H Frentzen 10 M Brundle

11 R Barrichello 12 J Herbert 13 M Salo

14 P Lamy £4m 15 P Diniz 16 U Katayama 17 J Verstappen 18 0 Panis

19 L Badoer 20 R Rosset 21 A Montermini 22 G Fisichella

23 V Sospíri* 24 T Marques* 25 F Lagorce* 26 H Noda* 27 T Inque+

28 M Blundell* 29 J-C Boullion* 30 K Brack*

32 E Collard* 33 N Fontana* 34 D Franchitti* 35 N Larini*

36 J Magnussen* 37 A Prost* 38 G Tarquini* 39 K Wendlinger*

*Not competing in French GP but may compete later

CHASSIS £20m 40 Benetton

Hingis ke

49 Minardi £1m 50 Forti ENGINE 51 Renault 52 Ferrari

£13m 53 Mercedes £12m 54 Peugeot £10m 55 Mugen 56 Ford V10 £6m 57 Yamaha 58 Hart

41 Williams

42 Ferrari

43 McLaren

44 Sauber

45 Jordan

46 Ligier

£6m 47 Tyrrell

48 Arrows

£18m

£15m

£14m

£10m

£5m

£3m

59 Ford Zetec V8 60 Ford ED V8 1996 RACE SCHEDULE French GP June 30 British GP

July 14 German GP July 28 Huagarian GP August 11 Bolgian GP August 25 italian GP September 8 Portuguese GP September 22 Japanese GP

October 13

محكنا من الاعل

Won $300

out

ast CJ

atl verdict the worker w itural cam

ranklm. 5

i full fitnes

eck in onf

e, a York

J: "I have f

a natural d

t is one of

lose frien

juestion o

2 really low

ad been an

er. If it wa

vhat was i

mer wife.

his roast I'm convi

ed him, to:

with catt

ruld have :

if people

ut sure.

hologist,

from L

y, who car

unation

old the inq from CII

rusual for triant, he s

such a i

no statist

between iid that vas the o vorker in d told t

i meat, esp

in enormo

had grad

a period

īrst, he lo is sense

re unable :

ffered from

reet, York

ked at a ths in 198

lved in the trying to cted with:

oncerned

'is might

ag CJD is it can be

CID car

ftoday.

wimbledon 5 ne

Grossman fails to break $1m

first round thwarted the chances of the Ohio-born right-hander joining the tre Court appearance, lest 6-2, 6-2 to Seles and only earned $6,800 (£4, 250) as a first-round loser. This now leaves Grossman, who has yet to win a title on the WTA

$950,000, although the figure is not bad for someone ranked

Aged 25, Grossman has already overtaken the career earnings of one of Britain's best, Sue Barker, now a BBC

TV commentator, who banked $878,701 in her tennis life.

As you would expect, the queen of tennis, Martina

Navratilova, the former world

No 1, is the leading money-

Grossman, in her first Cen-million dollar club.

66th in the world.

Ann Grossman's with an incredible $20.337,902 mick-fire defeat by Monica Seles in the Graf, is, however, catching

This year's favourite, Steffi her fast and will crash through the $18.5m barrier if she lifts her fifth title in six years.

Olympics, where she will not earn a penny if she triumph.

The gold medal meant as much to me as any Grand Slam

title", she said after the Scoul

As the temperatures soared into the mid-70s at Wimbledon, the bookmakers believe it is getting more likely that there will not be a drop of rain during the Championships fortnight. William Hill were forced to shorten the odds of no rain falling at Wimbledon in 1996 from 8-1 to 4-1 after a

"flood" of bets. "There's only heen one day lost to rain in three years, so the odds are coming down all the time," said

William Hill's Graham Sharpe

Olympics eight years ago.

Graf, ironically, will go from

Graf dominates after rusty start Courteire land

Maybe Ludmila Richterova's confidence is resilient enough to withstand a battering, but just in case the Czech thought she had a slight chance of winning on Centre Court yesterday, she should have peeked at the Wimbledon programme. "Thinly disguised as cannon fodder" is not the description you would want to show to a prospective sponsor.

Then again there are a lot of women for whom that cap fits when they are facing Richtero-va's opponent. Shocks happen to Steffi Graf, but they normally come in the shape of static electricity when the cleaner's ill and she dusts the television. Two years ago the six-time champion was defeated in the first round; her next surprise on the lawns of the All England Club is due after the millennium.

It certainly looked unlikely to arrive any earlier yesterday. Graf played poorly, had barely practised and was running gingerly, half expecting her left knee to send a shooting pain up her leg. Among the men, if the world's No 75 found the top seed in such a wretched condition, then he would be confident of making ripples, but this is the distaff, and therefore upsetresistant, side of the game. Richterova did not have a hope. Outside a select company of about a dozen opponents, Graf. with an injured knee, is about as vulnerable as a tank with a dodgy windscreen wiper and once the German had got the rest-induced rustiness out of her limbs she mowed Richterova down, 6-4, 6-1 in the space of 53 minutes. Canon fodder seemed like a generous description by the end.

Graf had not spared her op-

Martina Hingis is approaching the big fork in the road. One option will take the 15-year-old to the promised and of tennis celebrity, the route charted from teenager to successful adult by Steffi Graf.

by the premature retirement home in which Tracy Austin and Andrea Jaeger inhabit the dormitory and one from which

THE INDEPENDENT

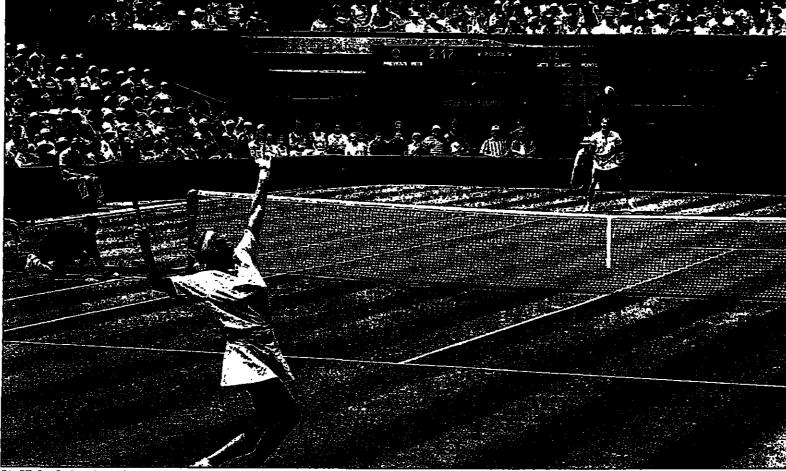

completed OFFICIAL INFORMATION SERVI

VISITORLINE

© 0891 555691

iway, a road that is bordered

RICHARD EDMONDSON

Steffi Graf, the champion, serves to Ludmila Richterova in their first-round match yesterday. Graf won 6-4, 6-1

Hingis keeps on the straight and narrow court and she hardly reined back afterwards. Someone pointed out her backhand return was than lethal, to which she said her other wing was not ex-actly flying either. "Backhand and forehand," she replied. "I didn't have any preference. Either way was difficult." If someone had just taken eight games out of the last nine, you hope she says she is playing well. More taxing in these Euro 96-

inspired xenophobic times was the inevitable question about England's football semi-final against Germany. "I heard that you keep on asking that to everyone who comes in here," she said with a smile." Her prediction? "Not in this room.

Talking to German journalists she was less circumspect, however, saying that she regarded her team's chances as quite good". An answer to the tabloids' "Let's blitz Fritz" theme, it was not. The blitzing among the women yesterday, like it had been on Monday, was being done by the seeds. Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, Anke Huber, Brenda Schultz-McCarthy and Lindsey Davenport went through in straight sets while Mary Joe Fernandez beat Jana Kandar, 6-0, 6-0. With Britain's for 24 hours, an absence that was No 1 Clare Wood squandering three match points before losing, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4 to Germany's Claudia Porwick, there seemed to be a predictability to it all. Which makes the antics of people like the eccentric American, Murphy Jensen, even more interesting when he is held up in contrast. Last year he jilted Schultz-McCarthy on the mixed doubles court and went missing keep her mind occupied, a sort of junior basket weaving exer-

The Hingis people under-stand that adolescent giddiness is an uncorkable genie and are prepared to give the young girl

some rein. Her mother gave

Martina the opportunity to go yesterday. "He was all ready to go," Smiltz-McCarthy said, "and he forgot his shorts, got stuck in the traffic and was 15 minutes late. It could happen to all of us." She paused. "But not all of us would go fishing. That was the

The American brothers,

Luke and Murphy Jensen, wanted to wear England football shirts for their doubles rankings that represent a pretty useful first innings.

Viollet is the daughter of United striker (well, inside-for-lects freckles, which she keeps

Gilbert is planning to stick by

Agassi for the foreseeable future and sent him home with a positive message to "go back, practise and regroup for the

Nick Bollettieri, Agassi's original coach, reflected on his former pupil's struggles. Agassi, the 1992 Wimbledon champion, has won only two matches in the

Sure, he's made a good run with Brad. He made a good run with me, winning the Wimbledon title. But I don't think he knows where he's going, right

last three months.

On the eve of Wimbledon.

Signing on: Steffi Graf, the defending champion, makes Gaudenzi loses his cool

Italy's Andrea Gaudenzi took said: That was bloody useless. just a few hours to record the first fine at Wimbledon as he advanced to the second round for the first time vesterday. Gaudenzi, the Italian No 1, was fined £1,000 by the tour-Dennis, the former Manchester nament referee, Alan Mills, after his five-set victory over ward in his day actually). She colthe American Michael Joyce. The umpire in the match, Anon her face, and has developed dreas Egli, reported that a serving action with which Jo Gandenzi swore when he passed under the chair because he thought he heard a handers like her and even seems not looking at anybody', he appeal of the fine.

go and fuck yourself". Egli said in the report. Mills added that the fine is being deducted by the tournament from the player's prize-money and his being forwarded to the Grand Slam Development Fund.

The incident may well have inspired Gaudenzi because after it he managed to lose just four more games, picking up two sets and taking the match. The player now has 10 days from the last day of the tournament or until 18 July 1996

SINGLES

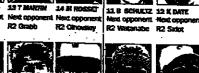

THE SEEDS' PROGRESS

(United States)

play. You could see that a little today. That's why it took me a little while to get into the match 360 - number of umpires and line judges at Wimbledon.

TODAY'S WEATHER

Maximum temperature 22C car

7.6

112 . . . **

į,

...3

7.7

.

Weather outlook Booking tickets for '97 FAXLINE

Getting there

Order of play

Latest scores and results

Today's

© 0891 662246

Knockout chart

Order of play Visitor info Promoted by Greenland Interactive Uni 4 Greenland Place, London NW1 BAP. Is cost 39phnia cheep, 49phnia at all other S

Melanie, a former player, and her coach are in the same bed every night (they are one and the same person), and she underdence, Hingis seems to have got land seems to have a better chance than most. Her mother, her bearings right.

temperamental equipment. As she eased to a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Jana Nejedly, the most extreme in behaviour we witnessed was rucful looks and the

Piret round
J Grabb (US) by E Sanchez (Sp) 6-16-36-3
J Grabb (US) by E Sanchez (Sp) 6-16-36-3
T END/VST (Swa) bt A Chang (Can) 5-46-26-1
S Stolle (Aus) bt D Nangeo (Np 6-36-36-1
B Ullimoch (Cz Repl) bt C Costa (Sp) 1-66-3

Othorsky (Rus) bt H Dreskmenn (Ger) 8-7 6-2 6-2 6-2

I Hasek (Switt) bt A Chesnoliov (Rus) 6-3 6-2 6-3

KRAJICEK (Neth) bt J Sanchez (Sp) 6-4 6-3

Matsucka Liapan) bt C Ruud (Nor) 6-1 6-0

M ROSSET (Swift) bt S Draper (Aus.) 4-6 6-4 6-3

M Penchey (GB) bt L Paes (Ind) 1-6 6-2 6-4 7-6

T Carbonell (Spl bt F Clavet (Sp) 7-8 4-6 1-6 6-4 6-3

G Prozzi (II) bt. J Cumha-Silva (Por) 6-2 6-4 6-2 B Stoven (NZ) bt T Kempers (Neth) 7-5 7-6 6-3 L Milligen (GB) bt J Bjorkman (Swe) 4-6 5-1 2-6 7-5 6-4

D Rostagno (US) bt J Van Herck (Bel) 6-4 6-3 7-6

M Larsson (Swe) bt M Woodforde (Aus.) 6-3 6-2 7-5

A Corretja (Sp.) bt M Tebbust (Aust) 3-6 7-6 6-4

T Hereman (GB) at Y KAFELNIKOV (Rus) 7-68-3 6-7 4-6 7-5

M STICH (Gen leads S Schelken (Neth) 6-3 3-8 4-1

fter (Aus) tx D Vacek (Cz Rep) 6-2 6-4 7-6

ski (GB) bt D Nestor (Can) 7-6 7-6 5-2 h, Kucera (Slovek) bt K Alerra (Mor) 6-3 6-3 6-3 B Black (Zim) bt K Goossens (Bel) 5-7 6-1 6-2 6-3

ord (GB) bt P Tramacch: (Aus.) 7-5 6-4

Hingis seems to possess the match on an experimental lev-It is not easy to grow up in ...el, coming to the net with much emis, but the girl from Switzer—greater frequency. That faciliif she is to beat the person she is scheduled to meet in the fourth round, one Steffi Graf.

occasional gentle bounce of no longer locked away with racket head on turf. There are her father in a single cell of the signs of youth on Hingis's fore- prison at Mannheim.

Jennifer Capriati seems to have bead but little in her game. She crashed. On yesterday's evi-was too consistent for her opponent yesterday and ended the plus an improvement on her first serve, will be required

> Hingis has already beaten Italian Open, where the German's thoughts seemed to be on courts other than the ones she has made her name on. Subsequent events have shown. though, that the No 1's mind is

Hobies: T Woodbridge and M Woodbride (Aus)
Plast round
H J DAVIDS (Neth) and C SUK (Cz Rep) bt D
Adams (SA) and D Prinosil (Ger) 6-3 6-1 6-2
L Marea (SA) and S Noteboorn (Neth) 6-3 6-4 7-6
Marea (SA) and S Noteboorn (Neth) 6-3 6-4 7-6
Marea (SA) and S Noteboorn (Neth) 6-3 6-4 7-6
Marea (SA) and S Noteboorn (Neth) 6-3 6-4 7-6
Marea (SA) and S Noteboorn (Neth) 6-3 6-4 7-6

ISAy and S Noteboom (Neth) 6-3 6-4 7-5 R Matheson and T Spinks (GB) bt D Johnson (US) and F Montane (US) 6-4 6-4 6-2 P Pala and P Vizzer (CR Rep) bt W Black (Zim) and J Frane (Arg) 6-4 6-4 2-6 7-5 J NOVAK and D RIKL (Cz Rep) bt M Barnard (SA) and G Van Emburgh (US) 6-3 6-7 3-6 6-3 9-7

P Cash and S Stolle (Aus.) bt T Kronemann (US) and D MacPherson (Aus.) 7-5 6-4 6-4 R Mattheson and T Spiriks (GB) bt D Johnson and F Montana (US) 6-4 6-4 6-2

A HUBER (Ger) bt G Leon Garcia (So) 6-1 6-1

A SCHULTZ-McCARTHY (Neth) bt J Kruger

(SA) 6-0 6-3 :Testud (Fr) bt S Cacic (US) 8-1 6-3 :Suglyama (Japan) bt A Kramer (Luo) 7-5 6-4 Watanabe (US) bt R Boblova (Cz Rept 6-3

A Fusiai (Fris) bit S Dopter (Aut) 7-5 7-6 A SANCHEZ VICARIO (Sp.) bit A Serra-Zeneta (b)

L DAVENPORT (US) by M Schnell (Aux) 6-4 6-1

Holder: S Graf (Ger)

Capriati example to keep them on their toes. There are those who fear the American's career is over at the age of 20 as she appears to be putting more efrt into her encounters with Florida night-club waitresses than anyone she meets on a ten-

Team Hingis always has the Capriati was brought before us amid publicity fireworks as also carries with her the onerous link with a great from yesteryear, as her first name might suggest. There was a wobble at the Lipton championship earlier this year when Hingis said she was getting bored with practising. She subsequently started to play more doubles to

M HINGIS (Swit) bt J Nejedby (Can) 6-2 6-2 M J FERMANDEZ (US) bt J Kandarr (Ger) 6-0

L Courtois (Bet) bt A Glass (Ger) 4-6 6-2 6-2 N Arendt (US) bt H Nagyova (Stovald 6-3 6-2 I, Neiland (Lat) bt K Rmaldi Stunkel (US) 6-3 8-2

J NOVOTNA (Cz Rep) bi V Mentinek (Ger) 6-4

B-UR Dregomer (Rom) bit Y Bassuld (Indon) 6-7 7-5 C Ponnek (Ger) bit C Wood (GB) 2-6 7-5 6-4 K A Guse (Aus) bit N Bradthe (Aus) 6-3 6-0 R Visiblet (GB) bit M Miller (GB) 6-2 2-6 6-1 K Adams (US) bit A Gareldon (Med) 7-6 6-1 N Medhedeva (Ulo) bit C Morariu (US) 5-7 7-5

N Zvereva (Bela) bt F Lubieru (It) 6-3 6-1 E Likhoniseva (Rus) bt E Calens (Bel) 7-6 6-3 K Boogart (Neth) bt V Ruano Pascual (Sp) 5-7 6-4 6-2

Hy-Boules (Can) bt M De Swerdt (SA) 7-6

Holders: J Novotna (Cz Rep) and A Sanchez Vicario (Sp)

J Lutrova (Rus) and T Yanesugem (Thei) bt M Lindstrom and M Strandfund (Swe) 7-6

6-1 6-1 Meleg (Lapan) and S Reece (US) bt L Mon-talko (Arg) and P Suprez (Arg) 6-4 6-3 T Krizan (Stoven) and C Papadalul (Gr) bt S-A Sudall and A Wainwight (GB) 4-6 6-3 6-2.

Women's Doubles

6-2 6-1

edexo (Uler) bt C Morariu (US) 5-7 7-5

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS FROM WIMBLEDON

Durie ended her career. Miller back to school recently, but the teenager decided hers was not grunts like Seles, plays doublesuch a bad life after all. tween Rachel Viollet and having plastic surgery in the image of the No 2 seed. Sadly, that

Megan Miller transpired to be a battle of the wild cards with is where the resemblance ends white caps. We say British even and she allowed her opponent though both women have spent much of their lives in Florida. 6-2, 2-6, 6-1. which led to the suspiciously Transatlantic accents on Court to collect a fluctuating match, Viollet now meets Hingis in the second round. After that,

Olympics."

10 yesterday. Both have world Hingis will play someone else.

Andre Agassi made another quick exit in London yesterday morning, this time from Heathrow airport.

Agassi, beaten in the first to reporters at the airport, leaving his coach, Brad Gilbert, to explain the American's latest

"It's a little bit disappointing, but what can you do," said Gilbert, who remained at Wimbledon to work with his other illustrious charge, Mary Pierce. "He's in a little bit of a slump right now, but there'll be an-other day. There's always an-marriage? Who knows what's other day. There's always angoing through his mind?"

man (GS) v D E Sopplord (CB).

COURT TWO: T MARTIN (US) v J Grabb (US); A

COETZER (SA) v M MeGrath (US); C MARTINEZ.

(Sr) and P TARASHN (Mg) v K Negstaule and A

Sullyama (Gapant); J BJOROMAN and N RURTI

(Swe) v L B Jensen and M Jensen (US). COURT THESE R Pulsa (II) v C Beecher (GB); B SCHILTZ-McCARTHY (Neth) v J Watarrabe (US); P Absens Vigo and G Koves (Hunt) v B BLAZ (Zmb) and G COMMEL (Can); H Crook and V Davies (GB) v M J McGRATH (US) and L NELAND 10 of

COURT FOUR: G Paschini (b) of Fernandez (US);
T A Whoothings (Aust v M Gustafeson (Swe);
T A Whoothings (Court of M Gustafeson (US) of FERNÁNDEZ (US) and N ZVEREVA (Bole); M Heel (US) and
M Lansson (Swe) v A L Foster and P T Hand (GE).
COURT FAVE: D Whiseson (US) v G Rooux (Fr); I K Wheener (Aut) v M Fox (Arg); N ARRHOTT (US) and M BOLLESIAN (Neth) v A Cacchini and L Garrone (Bt); Pustan and L Woothoffe (GE) v Y BASUNT (Indon) and C VIS (Neth).
COURT SDC: P Hearthus (Neth) v N Perent (Ven); T Lementica (Nus); I Eagle (Aus); and
A Flomet (Aus); v B Machine (US) and M Tebbort
(Aus); E SMYLE (Aus) and L WILD (US) v K Northwerdt (Ger) and F Labot (Arg).

ora (sourae).

COURT BENHT: J Pairmer (US) v D Flach (US); B Schert (Aut) v F Labet (Arg); S Draper (Aut) and E Sanchez (Sp) v M Ardrigh and N Bruno (It); S
Fanne (It) and V Rueno Pascuel (Sp) v R Grande
(It) and E Lithouseva (Rue).

Protected (Leaf) and a Labou (Cz Rech) v A Sugyo-ma (Japan); F Perfetti (It) v N Savamatsu (Japan); M Huning (Gar) and J Iteland (Aus) v J A Conde and A Compte (Sp); F Dragomir (Rom) and A Grossman (US) v S Meier (Ger) and H Nagy-con (Shrush).

Agassi's second exit round of Wimbledon on Monday by the unheralded American Doug Flach, arrived at the airport by car. He sat in the back seat with a baseball cap pulled low over his eyes as an aide checked his bags, and then refused to sign auto-graphs as he walked to his Los Agassi also declined to talk predictable, Bollettieri said. Angeles bound flight. lacklustre performance.

now, and I'm not sure Brad does, either. "Andre has great talent, but he doesn't always know what to do with it," Bollettieri said. "Is

TODAY'S ORDER OF PLAY

COURT NEWE: J Stark (US) v M Knowles (Bahr), N Feber (Bell v A Müer (US); R Bergh (Swe) and S Cannon (US) v B Haygarth and C J Van Rens-burg (Sk); I Demotraged and C Cherin (Pr) v L Gin-rati-Rubbi and S Pelowski (Fr). uni viuxes empt where stated)

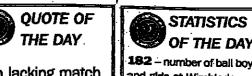

CENTRE COURT: A HUBER (Ser) v P H Shriver
USS; T Carbonet (Sp) v B BECKER (Ser): M Oremars therby v A SANCHEZ VICARIO (Sp): G FORGET (Fr) and J HLASEK (Swit) v K Janes (US) and
P Kubnen (Ser). COURT 10: No play. COURT 11: Pain Sung Hee IS Korl v A Frener (LS); A Restulescu (Gerl v S Peacocoleto (III); O Lug-ria (Lin) and E Wagner (Gerl v L M RRYMCND) (LS) and R P STURBES (Vusit, I MCNELL (US) and N TALIZIAT (Fr) v N Feber and D Van Roost (Bel).

COURT 12: G Starford v N Godwin (SA); Y Karnio (Japan) v D Yan Roost (Belt; M Costing and S Schallien (Neth) v S E Davis (US) and P Ridery (Way: N BRADTHE and R McQUILLAN (Aus) v V Lake and S Smith (GB). COURT 13: S Testad Fro v M J FERMANDEZ (US): L Milligson (CEI) v N Lapental (Ed); C G Barcley and K Godnige Wasy v M HANGES (Switt and H SURC) VA (CZ Rej); D J Jones (Aust) and T A Price (SA) v N Dehlman (Fin) and C J Wood (GB).

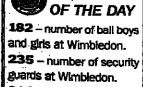

COURT 14: M Westington (LS) v T ENOVISIONE); I Gornomatega (Arg) v I SPIRLEA (Romit Lang) (Bankin (LS)) and A CLHOVSNY (Roup v Alloy) and R Legat (LS); A Lebrer and C Moratu (LS) v A BOOGERT (Neth) and I SPIRLEA (Romit LA); A Lebrer (Romit COURT 15: No pily.

COURT 18: A Olsza (Pol) v S Appelmans (Bel): H Asst (Mor) v T Johansson (Swe); M Wardel We-meyer and Y S Whidinger-Jones (US) v M Grzy-bowska and A Olsza (Pol); R Hiraki (Japan) and COURT 17: A Carlsson (Swe) and A Terresveri (Huri) v C Crissee (Rom) and C Schneider (Ger): B Uilhrach (Cz Rep) v F Dewulf (Bel): E S H Cal-lens and L Courtais (Bel) v K M ADAMS (US) and M DE SWARDT (SA): D Bestr (Swe) and L Markarts (Huri) v J Beltok (US) and L Paes (In-

'I'm lacking match Steffi Graf, after her first-round win

31,200 - number of tennis balls used during Wimbledon.

Sunny, cloudy later

Fortunately, the road-going version is smoother, somewhat quieter, and fits neatly through your letterbox.

Audi (III)

SO YOU WANT TO ... GO RIDING

By Sue Montgomery

For all its élitist image, riding is one of the most accessible of sports. To get into the saddle you do not have to join a club or society at vast ex-pense (the wallet drain comes later, when you get hooked, and want to own a horse); all you need do is find a riding school and book a session. Such schools - or equestrian centres - can, depending on their emphasis and geographical location, supply virtually every form of fun on horseback, from basics to advanced coaching in show jumping or dressage, or even, at specialist centres, activities like polo or carriage driving. Or, if you do not want a lesson, you can simply go for a ride, anywhere from Hyde Park to the Devon moors.

Riding schools are almost invariably privately run businesses offering a service. Riding clubs are different in concept to golf or sailing clubs, merely being folk who get together locally to organise competitions and instruction. A club can be based at an equestrian centre and, with a few exceptions, membership subscriptions are minimal and waiting lists non-existent.

Any establishment in Britain which offers instruction must have a local authority licence, but that is no guarantee of quality. Consult the British Horse Society's list of some 700 approved centres. The BHS, a charity based at Stoneleigh, in Warwickshire, is the sport's main organising body, responsible for training and examination of instructors, the promotion of equine welfare and road safety. It also governs some sections of competitive riding and runs the Riding Club and Pony Club movements. The society offers advice on every aspect of equestrianism to anyone, member or not.

The BHS publication Where To Ride, which details all approved establishments in Great Britain and Ireland, is a most useful starting point for finding a suitable school.

Riding is traditionally a country sport, and though many equestrian centres are easily accessible from Pacificias: Ridge in Hyde Paric use of outdoor arens in park for jumping; summer holded yourses when the school ups stocks to Guidford. Telephone: 0171-262 3791

Horse and car: riders out with Ross Nye's school make their way through the traffic in Hyde Park, central London

Photograph: Sarah Bancroft

settings. The exception is London, where most of the city's green spaces have horses in them; there are 16 establishments with a London postcode listed in Where To Ride.

According to the latest figures, some 3.3 million adults and children ride regularly in Britain, 600,000 of those more than three times a week The BHS membership - the benefits of which include public liability and personal accident insurance - is at an all-time high of around 64,000. Most equestrian centres welcome new clients and do their best to dispel the notion that horses are only for the rich and privileged. There are some sections of the horsey com-from £12; Yeoldry, £16 per floor. Borses/poties: 40 Facilities: Indoor arene; two outdoor arenes; cross-country course; off-road hacking lecture room; BHS training liveries; affiliated shows. et 0181-363 9005 - cities, there are few in wholly urban munity who look down their noses handicapped people and we hold af-- the exclusive hunts in the shires have a poor image, and there is a tendency to play polo just to prove you earn £500,000 a year - but mostly the sport really is for all, and you only have to spend a couple of hours at any riding centre to realise it. Trent Park, 200 yards from Oakwood Underground station in north London, is a typical school. One of the instructors there, Nikki Harland, says: "Our riders are multicultural, multiracial and of every age, from young children to a pensioner who wanted to learn to ride as a surprise for his granddaughter. We have housewives who ride, we run pony filiated show jumping, when some of the big names turn up."

Ross Nye's, in central London close to Hyde Park, caters for tourists as well as its regular client base, which includes the only affiliated Pony Club - a 60-strong group of youngsters - attached to a commercial stable as opposed to a hunt. Riders go out into the park in groups of up to a dozen, with two experienced outriders, and are given instruction as they go along. Nye's daughter Kirstie says: "All our horses are extremely well-behaved and used to the routine, so even if someone's never ridden before, they'll be OK."

but an adult can expect to pay up-wards of £15 an hour for individual tuition. Because riding is a physical sport, it is advisable to start off gently. You should expect to be taught ideally in an enclosed arena - by a BHS-qualified instructor, and to be matched to a horse suited to your height, weight and ability.

There is an element of danger in riding, though a reputable school will do everything to minimise risk. But horses – which weigh up to half a ton – can be unpredictable, and although falls are exceptional, accidents will happen and you should realise and accept this. Most establishments carry third-party insurance, it is up to the victim to prove negligence, which can be difficult. The other danger is that you will get hooked, and want to own your own horse. This is the wealth-warning stage; you're talking £2,000-plus for a reliable "first horse". Livery (boarding) fees will set you back upwards of £100 a week and then there is tack (£300 plus for a decent saddle), transport, vets' fees and assorted other items. Ownership is a huge commitment not to be entered into lightly. If in any doubt about your resources or competence, do not.

The beauty of riding is that, uniquely among sports, it is a partnership which can be appreciated and but in the case of personal injury enjoyed at any level.

35.7 327...

From Neil Rose Two years ago, I and three friends bought tickets for all the games at Wembley for Euro 96. We received confirmation on 16 June 1994 and were told the best seats available would automatically be allocated.

Two years later, we find ourselves tucked away in the corner, getting closer to the pitch with every game, while other friends who bought similarly priced tickets for the same games in the last few weeks and months enjoy the view from vastly superior seats.

Being at Wembley for the Scotland and Holland games have been unforgettable experiences, but I still cannot help feeling - and not for the first time as a football fan - a little ripped off. NEIL ROSE

London NW2

SPORTS LETTERS

From Mario Caderamanpulle Is it not an honour to represent Britain in the Atlanta Olympics and even more of an honour to captain the British team? Maybe the se lectors should look to Roger Black to lead the side and suggest to Linford Christie to take up advertising MARIO CADERAMANPULLE London SE19

Letters should be marked "For publication" and contain daytime and evening phone numbers. They should be sent to Sports Editor, The London E14 5DL. They may be shortened for reasons of space.

RULISTY LEAGUE: European Super League Cram-pionship Wales v Engand (Cardiff), CRICKET: British Universities v India (Cambridge, to 28th June). Fleat women's Test: England v New Zeotont (Sachborugh). HOCKEY: Women's International: Spain v Great British.

SPIEEDWAY (7.30cm unless stated): Today: Pre-mier League: Long Eaton v Eastbod; Today: Pre-don. Speedway Star Cup second round; second-leg: Pode (51) beater (61). Tassaday: Pra-mier: League: Ipsinch v Belle Viac; Middlesbrough v Waterhampton: Sheffield v London (7.45). Priday: Pramier: League: Belle Viae v Pode; Odond v Long Eaton: Peterbrough v Bradford.

£15, Juniors (16 to 25-year-olds) £12; Grandstand £10; Silver Ring £5. (6.4). SALESERIET: Members £12.50; Tatthersals £8; Course Enclosure £4 (eccompanied under-life tree all enclosures). (2.0). Thursday: CARLISELE as Wednesday. (2.15). NEWBURY: tskyl Members £13 (Juniors up to 21 years half-price); Tattersals £2; Silver Ring £3 (0APs half price). (6.30). SALESBURY: as Wednesday. (2.0). Utbooster: (skyl) Club £15 (0APs £12); Tattersals £10 (0APs £7); Course £3. (6.45). Friday: FOLKESTONE: Club £12 lunder-15e free! Tattersals £8.50. (2.10). G0000M0000: (skyl) Richmond Enclosure £16, Gordon Enclosure £10, Public Enclosure £4 (over-65e £3). Accompanied under-17e free at enclosures. (6.40). NEWCASTILE (skyl) Club £15; Tattersals £10; Silver Ring £4 (22 for OAPs and registered disabled). (6.15). NEWCASTILE (skyl) Club £15; Tattersals £10; Silver Ring £4 (22 for OAPs and registered disabled). (6.15). NEWCASTILE (skyl) Club £15 (16 to 25-year-olds £5); Farmly Enclosure £3. (2.0). WOLVER-HAMPTON: WWY Club £15; Tattersals £5 (0AP members of beamond Club £4); Vessing Restaurant £25.90 including entrance and meal. (2.20).

This weekend Saturday

CRICICET: Tetley's Challenge Series: Giarnorgar v Palestan (Portigorida); Hampshire v India (Southamp gon). Other Mariches: Kent v Odord University (Car-

RACING: BATH: Cub £12; Tettersels £8; Siver Ring £4; Course £1. (2.15), DONCHSTER (stq.) Cub £14; Grendstand £8; Fernily Enclosure £3 (under-16s fee all anciosures). (8.45), LINGFLD: (turfAW, stq.) Members £13, Teuersels £9; Saver Ring £5. (6.30). NEWCASTLE: (C14) Cub £20; Tettersels £10; Saver Ring £4 £2 for OAPs and registated disabled). (2.05). NEWMARRIGET: (C14) Cub £14 (15 to 25-year-olds £10); Grandstand & Pacticok £10 (16 to 25-year-olds £10; Family Enclosure £3. (2.30). Wioroester: Members £12.50; Tattersels £9.50; Course £5 (0APs £2.50). (2.35).

Sunday

FOOTBALL: European Championship final: Wentole, ATHLETICS: BUPA International (Gatesheed). ATTRILITORS DUTY TRATTRICTORS (CONSIDERATION).
RELIGIT LANGE Stones Super League (12 matches).
CRICKET: AXA Equity & Law League: Durham v Gloucestorshire (Chester-le-Street): Essex v Survey (Southerno): Lancester v Somerset (Old Traffourd): Middlesex v Warnackshire (Lord's); Northamptonskire v Derhyshire (Northampton): Worcessershire v Yorkshire (Northampton):

Next week

CROCKET Toesdey, Varsity Match: Oxford University of Cambridge Linversity (Lord's), Wednesdey, Entannic Assurance Championship Sussex v Hampship (Aunch), Tetley's Challenge Series.

shire v South Africa 'A' (Three days, Headingley). Thuss-day: Combital Insurance Test Marton Tabrd Test Marton Test Marton Test Marton Test Marton Test Marton Test Marton Marton Marton Marton Marton Test Marton Test

Plan ahead

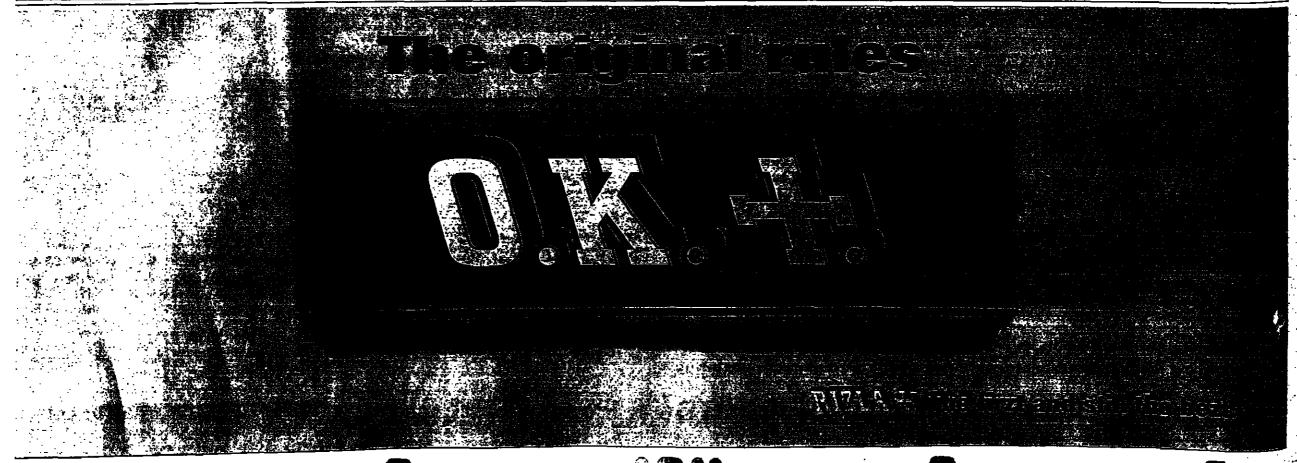

The current cricket series between England and India has, of late, been slightly over-shadowed by the successes of the national shadowed by the successes of the national football team. Euro 96, will of course cease this Sunday, leaving dis-hard cricket fans with merely Wimbledon and the Olympics to contend with this summer. England face another stem test when Pakistan arrive at the end to a formidable batting line-up, they also pos-sess two of the world's finest fast bowlers in the shape of Wasim Akram and Waqar You-nis. A series win against Pakistan will be an undoubted triumph for England. Three Test matches and one-day internationals are presently scheduled. Even at this late hour there are plenty of tickets still available, al-though they are selling fast.

Pedistan Tour to UK 1998; First Cambil Test Match (Lards), 250-29th July, tickets resembling (68-637) for 25th and 28th, box-office: 0171-289 5005; Sec-and Cambil Test Match (Headingley) 8th-12th Au-gust, tickets remaining (£11-£32) for all days, box-office: 0113 278 7334; That Cambil Test Match (The Oral) 22nd-25th August sold out. (The Over) 22nd-25th August sold out.
First Texaco Trophy one-day International fold Institute, sold out. 29th August, Second Texaco Trophy one-day International (Edghaston) 31st August Tolarts remaining (£12-£36), how-office: (121-446, 5506; Third Texaco Trophy one-day International (Berlin)).

Details of forthcoming events with in-formation on tickets and venues should be sent to: The Sports Desk, The Independent, I Canada Square, Canany Wharf, London E14 5DL Fax: 0171 293 2894.

Compiled by Alister Morgan

حكذا من الاصل

Allure of the timeless Test

THERE

Picnics, Pimm's, grass and cricket. The Lord's Test is a uniquely British summer occasion. Nick Coleman tucked into it here is a small ellipse of rich green grass behind the Warner Stand at Lord's. It is about the size of a tennis court and is girdled by a low wall. A path bisects the lawn allowing foot-traffic to approach a tastefully appointed stand at which Pimm's is served by the jug. At 10.25am on a Test match Sunday the green is alive with activity. Vigorously, yet decorously, members stake out their patch, unfolding, clipping, stacking, spreading, en-trenching their picnic gear - their rugs, their hampers, their portable tables - until the green is a quilt of tiny fiefdoms, each one moated with nine inches of grass, rising at each centre to a mighty castellation of the latest in ice-box technology. Having established themselves, the members then go away and watch the cricket. By 11.02am the green is empty of people. Only the ice-boxes and hampers remain, monumental on their rugs. There is an atmosphere of sumptuous desolation. It is as if some boffin has invented a neutron bomb which, on detonation, vaporises MCC members yet leaves their picnic equipment standing.

The cricket on Sunday was not exciting. It was a day of drift and counter-drift, in which the initiative was offered but declined by both sides for fear of disturbing the nervous equilibrium established over a Test match and a half of fretful striving. The image that filled the mind was of two underweight sumo wrestlers lacking the strength to hump one another out of the ring, instead tacitly agreeing to mooch about in the middle and clash bellies for formality's sake. There were side-issues of course - Rahul Dravid's approaching century, for one, Alec Stewart's approaching superannuation, for another - but by and large torpor reigned. In the stands the usual things were going on: people lining up snacks for the first session, testing the rigidity of the seat-backs in front, settling under

人名英格兰

75

Lord's is beautiful on days like modernist-colonial rigging of the new these when the sun plays peekaboo from eleven until the close, dividing the ground into dissolving sections of light and shadow. It is possible on these days to stare without blinking for minutes at a time and see everything happening at once in synchronous fragments. I like to sit near the top of the roofless Edrich Stand, out of the breeze but high enough to include within a single field of vi-

Lord's is Victorian democracy realised in bricks, mortar and the abstract principle of enclosure

the peripheral stuff, which is essential if you want to do Lord's properly. The peripheral stuff at Lord's is always central stuff. The tone, the order, the meaning of the place is governed by its architecture and the way it disposes of space, which is another way of saying that wherever you are at Lord's you get the feeling that you are being watched.

To the left of the Edrich the high

Mound Stand rises like sculpture above the boxes of the corporately sponsored. Ahead range the Members' Stand, the Pavilion, the press box, the Warner. To the right, you follow the declining curve of the Edrich's twin, the Compton, which rakes down to the four-square emulsioned Grandstand and its all-seeing eye, Father Time, who can, on good ys, look benign It is a pie chart, Lord's; a diagram of a vision of society expressing not a single indivisible whole but a construction of discreet but interlocking parts, each of which stands as an essential constituent in the self-regard of the others. Some parts you are entitled to enter, others not. At all times you're aware of your place, and of being patronised. Lord's is Victorian democracy realised in bricks, mortar and the abstract principle of enclosure. I have a feeling I like the top tier of the Edrich Stand because it appears to be neutral in this respect. It is featureless. It has no emblewatic status. Underneath, on the lower tier, is the place for getting pissed and shouting. Above and to the left, separated by an eight-foot void and a couple of sets of railing, are the en-closures of those privileged by mon-ey, who get drunk and chit-chat. Opposite, across the grass, up the slope, behind a picket fence in the lap of their giant red pavilion, sit the men in orange and yellow ties, the proprietors. They seem to be miles away in several senses, immobilised certainly by distance, possibly by fatigue, disappointment and pink gin. They were all fighter pilots and submarine commanders once. And when they do move, they walk slowly around their cloisters in twos and threes under panama hats looking pained, their eyes travelling ahead reluctantly, freighted with dread.

"Accountable," gloomed one, without looking at his partner as they passed slowly through the Mound Stand ambulatory, mid-morning. "Someone must be accountable... His partner made a dark sound in his throat but did not reply. So I like it up there on the Edrich top tier because in my mind it sets me above snobbery (which is, let's house at school. Didn't play very offace it, in itself an act of snobbery by internal memo rather than by exhibition). Here, you can participate without actually participating. You can watch dads and their sons doing their stuff.

For instance: a middle-class son is restrained by his father from leaping up in the middle of an over to visit the gents. "You know why, don't you?" dad says reprovingly. He is kitted out in the warm-weather togs favoured by middle-aged Englishmen in the pomp of fatherhood: big kha-ki shorts, socks, sandals, pink polo shirt, a sucked-looking floppy cricket hat - baby clothes in all but size and context. His son wears a baseball cap and a frown. "Yeah. Sorry." In the row behind, another tussle. The voices are public school, one ex. one current; one past its youth, the other full of it. "So..." It is the younger voice, fill-the last pass of the vacuum flask. "So, what were your moments of personal cricketing glory?" There is a good 10 seconds of silence during which it is impossible not to think of an empty bucket ing a pause that has endured since plummeting down the shaft of a deep, dry well.

"Oh, I don't know, really," replies Older Voice, evasively.

"There must have been some?" "Well..." Older Voice sighs. "Well, I did most of my cricketing for my

ten. Hardly at all in fact. I don't think I was a key member of the team. "But you must have had a moment of glory. A brilliant catch? A big six?

You know ... a run out?" "I didn't have any glory at all, I suppose." He sighs again. "Didn't get picked very often. Never seemed to score more than about 20. Don't know why, really...' There is another pause. Alan Mullally pitches short and the ball balloons off Dravid's head. There is a gentle expulsion of air from the nostrils of Older Voice.

"Um... and you? Your moments of cricketing glory?"

"Well, I haven't scored a century

A West Indian gent, carrying his MCC's steward's moss green jacket and a bag, settles himself in the seat in front. It is 12.30; half an hour to lunch. He unpacks a huge baguette and begins to work his way through it as Peter Martin chunters in from the Nursery End to Srinath. The steward's ears go up and down as he

Glasses chink and people hitch their legs up beneath their bodies to ride sidesaddle into lunch

chews. The Lancashire swing bowler's knees pump as he runs, and as he lengthens his stride before delivery, the steward's ears and the bowler's knees for a moment become synchronised in motion. Then the ball is released, the mouthful swallowed and the overspill of wobbling flesh at the steward's neck retreats back within the rim of his collar. The ball beats the bat. "He's bowlin' well. that boy," says the steward, rotating his head benevolently to address his nearest neighbour, which is me.

"Y'know, I like the look of that boy.

out

ast CJ

atl

worker w itural cau

ı full fitne:

a natural

t is one of

lose frien

aid after ow enough

: really low

ad been ar

er. If it wa

vhat was i

mer wife.

l his rousi

I'm conv

ed him, to

with catt

uld have

if people nt sure.

hologist.

from L

y, who car

ination

trom C11

usuai (o

mant, he such a ;

no statist

between uid that vis the o

vorker in

i meat, esp

n cnome

had grad

irst, he lo

is sense

re unable

ffered from

ok uncor reet, Yor

wed in th

trying to CJD car

beef tha

ected with ng CJD is equires a

Avenue.

D'you mind if I smoke?" He is a charming man. He works the lift to the private boxes in the Mound Stand. This year he has had Mick Jagger and J Paul Getty in. He drinks from two bottles, one containing colourless fluid, the other something pink as geraniums. He tells me an innocuous anecdote about one of his regular customers in the lift, which I would like to recount but dare not for fear that Lord's would visit itself terribly upon its steward. Lord's is a genteel place but one fairly seething with oedipal rage.

It is one o'clock. The players troop off and spectators swarm down staircases, over concourses, into action. In the Compton Bar a weary man pours UHT milk into the black plastic dustbin provided and drops the empty plastic UHT container into his cup of coffee. He curses mildly, shakes his head and walks back out into the sunlight.

Meanwhile, behind the Warner Stand the grassy picnic area is alive again. It is taking on the look of a garden party. Glasses chink and people hitch their legs up underneath their bodies to ride sidesaddle into lunch. And all the ice boxes are exactly where their owners left them, because at Lord's they are safe. Safer here by far than in their own

Belle of the ball given the lenient treatment

Viewed from the United States, football's yellow card rules appear brutally unforgiving. If you were to apply to Gary Neville the sanctions standards of American baseball, there is no way the two cautions he incurred in the earlier rounds of Euro 96 would have ruled him out of today's semi-final against Germany.

At worst, a baseball player found guilty of showing or tripping an opponent might be told by the management of his team that it might be a good idea to undergo a course in sensitivity training. But even that is to exaggerate. In analogous circumstances Neville's crimes, not to mention those of the poor belea-guered Czech Republic team, would not have merited a raised eyebrow. Short of a baseball player shooting an opponent, punishments for bad behaviour are fabulously lenient.

Take that staple of baseball fun, "the bench-clearing brawl". Typically, the pitcher hurls his ball a little too close to the batter's head. Whereupon the batter drops his bat and runs with menacing intent towards dered instead that Belle should seek the pitcher. The pitcher's on-field acounselling. Last week Belle struck team-mates charge to his defence, again, knocking a Milwankee Brew-whereupon the batter's team-mates leap off their benches and a biff-bang mêlée of cartoon proportions ensues.

The response of Major League Baseball will then turn on whether the pitcher ought be suspended for one game (the baseball season runs to 162 games), or whether he should be let off with a gentle reprimand. None of the other players' behaviour will receive even passing mention. This is what happens when a baseball player does something that in British sports would be considered really bad, say the equivalent of the Cantona incident. Albert Belle, the Cleveland Indians' star batter, got upset with a press photographer in the. course of a game on 6 April this year. Whereupon he started hurling baseballs at the photographer's head, the consequences of which could have been severe brain damage.

Gene Budig, the president of the American League, judged it would be a little severe to fine or suspend Belle, who even by local standards has a record of indiscipline. So Budig or-

SPORT IN ANOTHER COUNTRY

John Carlin unravels the American way of disciplining errant baseball players

ers fielder to the ground with a stiff forearm to the face. The umpires did nothing but Budig, who watched the game on TV, decided it was time to make an example of Belle. So he espended Belle for five games.

Belle sought help from the play-ers union, who suggested he see a lawyer. Belle did, and then threatened to sue Major League Baseball. Whereupon Budig promptly backed down. Belie's suspension was reduced from five games to three. Upon further appeal it was reduced on Monday to two. "Albert Belle is of good when she explained to Sports not a bad person," Budig said.

On the other hand, the owner of the Cleveland Indians is a bad person - or has been deemed to be, at any rate, by the baseball authorities. Marge Schott is bad, not because she attempts to cause people physical pain, but because she has a habit of saying stupid, ignorant things.

A couple of weeks ago the owners of all the other clubs met and decided she should be suspended from her day-to-day management duties at the Indians for a period of two and a half years. Her crime was to have said the following about Hitler in a cable TV interview: "Everything you read, when he came in he was good. They built tremendous highways and got all the factories going. He went nuts, he went berserk . . . Everybody knows he was good at the beginning, but he just went too far."

America's thought police went bonkers. Newspaper columnists, editorial writers, TV pundits joined the Anti-Defamation League and other Jewish support groups in a chorus of indignation and rage. Schott, who is 67, did not do her cause a great deal

Illustrated she had not wanted to talk about that stuff, it had just come up because the cable TV interviewer had asked her why she kept a swastika armband in her home.

As Major League Baseball dithered, more and more articles appeared in the press showing that a couple of years back she had been ordered to take sensitivity training therapy after describing some of her black baseball players as "million dollar niggers" and once during a newspaper interview she had mimicked the English-speaking accent of the Japanese prime minister, saying "Cadinac" for Cadillac. It turned out, too, that she had told the New York Times in an interview in 1992 the same thing about Hitler having been an OK guy at first.

So the public pressure piled up and eventually Major League Baseball, facing the appalling prospect of being labelled politically incorrect, were left with no option but to slap the twoand-a-half year suspension on the confused and foolish woman. Belle, who might have killed someone, will be

SPORTING VERNACULAR

"And when the sun was up, they were sults and the graphic representation scorched; and because they had no Agassi could do worse than meditate on the parable of the sower as he leaves Wimbledon, verily a seed that fell on stony ground - in his case Court Number Two, a patch of soil that has proved notably infertile for other seeds before him.

The Oxford English Dictionary's earliest citation for "seed" as a sporting verb comes from an American article published in 1898 (the norm follows later), but it seems likely that this is a relatively recent inclusion because as late as 1924 the Times felt it necessary to explain to its readers exactly what the term meant and the writer sniffily advances the fact that the usage is not in the OFD as evidence of "how little seeding accords with British notions". There is no explicit etymology for the phrase but the image is presumably straightforward - every seed packet carries detailed instructions about. the optimum distance to be left between seeds to ensure the best reof a tournament's early rounds even looks a little like the furrows of a ploughed field. Though "seeding" also has a chemical meaning when you "seed" a solution you mtroduce small particles to start off a process of crystallisation - this seems far less likely as an origin than its horticultural sense. For the Times, the idea that you would carefully plant your best prospects into a competition, spacing them out to ensure plenty of room to grow, was clearly not quite fair play. For the Americans, it was simply common sense - elementary husbandry which ensured an even and abundant harvest of vigorous late rounds There are no guarantees, though, whether you're growing corn or exciting tennis games.

From time to time the weeds defeat the seeds, or, as St Matthew, a tennis correspondent before his fime, put it: "And some fell among thoms; and the thoms sprang up and

Gue with Allsen Mayer und Gracine Le Saux live on MSN. Just click on the MSN icon on your Microsoft" Windows" 95 PC, you can try it FREE for a whole many with UNITABLED Internet access. Have a shot at it! MSN — The official Internet Software Provider of Euro '96.

Will product in the UK. Talephone connection charges are not included. Goods card required for law total. Offer ends 31/12/96. Microsoft and Windows are registered trademarks, and MSN and Where do you want to go techny? one treatments of Microsoft Corp in the US and/or end

Khalid Abdullah's racing manager Grant Pritchard-Gordon was yesterday as right-lipped as an England football coach about the decision to run a pacemaker for Irish Derby favourite Dushyantor. The Judgmonte team's Private Song was one of three £60,000 supplementary entries for Sunday's classic made before the mid-day deadline, bringing the total number of names in the hat at this stage

Pritchard-Gordon refused to be drawn as to the details of the strategy for Sunday, when Dushvantor, the runner-up in the Derby, will hid to go one better in the enforced absence of his Epsom conqueror

"Does Terry Venables tell the Germans about his plans bea horse who is good at forcing at 10-1 by Ladbrokes, four tactics. The colt, trained by points shorter than French Der-Roger Charlton, made nearly all the running when he was a close second in the King George V Handicap at Royal Ascot six days ago. Dushyantor, from Henry Cecil's vard, is a dour galloper rather than a lightening quickener, and will doubtless appreciate any sting being drawn from his opponents by a strong pace. His half-brother Commander In Chief, who displayed many of the same qualities, had the assistance of a pacemaker, Regency, when he hit the front nearly three furlongs out and outstayed Hernando three years ago.

The other two late entries, Don Micheletto and Sharaf Kabeer, both represent the Dubai-based Godolphin operation. Sharaf Kabeer, who easily won a 12-furlong Kempton maiden two weeks ago, is the by fourth Don Micheletto.

Godolphin director Simon Crisford, while acknowledging that Sharaf Kabeer, a handsome son of Machiavellian, faces a huge step up in class, is hopeful that he will not be disgraced. He said: "On the book

RICHARD EDMONDSON NAP: Rock Symphony (Chester 7.55) NB: Hurtleberry (Kempton 9.10)

he's certainly got to improve. But we rate him highly, he's improving, and he deserves to take his chance."

The former John Gosden inmate, who runs in the yellow silks of the youngest of the four Maktoum brothers, Ahmed, was big and backward last year forehand?" he asked, though dark horse of the pair, but has - hence his non-appearance before jetting to Dubai for his winter holiday. Crisford added: "It's really only in the last two months that he's begun to get himself together physically."

It was a late decision to run

Don Micheletto, who had one of Sunday's rivals, 10-1 shot Polaris Flight, in front of him at Chantilly and two of last weekend's winners, Grape Tree Road and Astor Place, behind. Crisford said: "There were several factors that influenced us, among them the fact that the French Derby form is looking pretty solid."

On the betting front (which entirely concerns British challengers), the plunge on last year's champion two-year-old, Alhaarth - who will be blinkered for the first time - continued. The colt, a staying-on fifth in the Derby, is now a 3-1 third favourite, from 7-1, behind Dushvantor, who has drifted to 7-4, with Dr Massini at 9-4. Michael Kinane, it was confirmed yesterday, will ride Dr

"Alhaarth has been the only horse we have laid to any sigmificant money and it seems that people knew of his work in blinkers before we opened a book on Sunday," Ladbrokes' spokesman Ian Wassell said. There seems to be a strong belief that the headgear will enable him to recapture his sparkle of last year. Paul Kelleway, typically, has an ambitious programme planned for Glory Of Dancer, who was just touched off by Grape Tree Road in Sunday's Grand Prix de Paris. Plans include a possible rematch with his conqueror in the York International, a trip to the Unit-ed States for the Arlington Million, or a tilt at the Japan

Cup.
"He is in good shape, in fact doesn't look as if he has had a race," Kelleway said. "He only just does enough on the track, and timing is everything. I wish I could get Scobie Breasley or Harry Wragg to ride him."

No day return for the Derby

Sue Montgomery on a Classic which seems stuck with its Saturday slot

Despite opposition from many racing professionals, the Derby seems set to continue to be run Epsom and sponsors Vodaon a Saturday. Yesterday not only did Epsom director Edward Gillespie throw hints, af-ter a meeting with the race's ments for next year's race, with sponsors, that the Saturday a conclusion that will be andate would be retained, but the nounced later this week. new chairman of the British Horseracing Board, Lord Wakeham, threw his weight behind a Saturday Derby.

Lord Wakeham, a former government minister and chief whip in Mrs Thatcher's cabinet, took up his new post on the eve of Shaamit's victory 18 days ago, and, speaking publicly for the race's popularity, the Euro 96 first time, urged the industry to clash between England and give the race's rescheduling more than two years before

He said: "The decision to move back from Saturday to Wednesday would be of far greater significance than the ini- Derby's already shaky stature tial move, and could be disastrous. I think, therefore, I would be supportive of any decision to stay with Saturday. I wouldn't be in too much of a hurry to change things back again.

and I think we should see what needs of sponsors and TV, there things look like in a few years' time. But this year's Derby was ditionalists will be able to prea much greater spectacle than the first Saturday running, and there was a better atmosphere."

Yaroom gives Hern a lift

Hal Hoo Yaroom was a timely third winner of the year for Dick Hern vesterday. The former champion trainer has been having a poor season but his stable looks to be running into form in time for Alhaarth's run in the Irish Derby.

After Hal Hoo Yaroom had made all the running under Richard Hills in the Tote Credit Maiden Stakes. Hern's travelling head lad, Peter West, said: "The horses are just coming to themselves and Alhaarth is very well. It must be a good two years since we had a win-ner here, I think."

Brett Doyle and Clive Brittain, the jockey/trainer partnership who team up with Amfortas in the Irish Derby, collected a double with Influence

Lord Wakeham was speaking fone, whose director Terry Barwick is a Saturday fan, were Gillespie said: "It was a very constructive meeting and the opinion of our sponsors is extremely valued. Despite the fall in TV viewing figures, we were all very pleased with the upward trend in attendance in the face of what was perceived to be a very real threat to the Switzerland on the same after-110011.

Opposition to Saturday has come from many quarters within the racing and betting industries, in the belief that the will be further weakened by a permanent switch from Wednesday, its "special" day.

But when the Olympic marathon runners are being forced to compete in Atlanta's seems little hope that racing traserve the unique position in the sporting calendar of the world's greatest race.

Strong raiding party at Evry

British raiders account for half of the eight-runner field for the Listed Prix Lovelace over a mile at Evry in France this af-The John Hills-trained Royal Philosopher, ridden by Olivier Peslier, joins Simon Dow's charge Nagnagnag (Cash Asmussen), Serious (Paul Eddery) from Lady Herries Angmering yard and David Loder's Verzen (Richard Hughes), to spearhead the strong challenge from this side of the Channel.

The quartet may have most to fear from the David Smagatrained Trojan Sea, who taking a drop down in class, and Rio Verde, who hails from the pow-erful André Fabre stable. Rio Verde finished a highly en-Pedler in the Tote Dual Fore- couraging second last time out cast Handicap and Hippy in the Tote Place Only Maiden Stakes.

RACING RESULTS

YARMOUTH

YARMOUTH

2.15: 1. REFULENCE PEDLER (8 Doyle)
11-4 Tox: 2. Glowing Reads 25-1; 3. Sedder Malk 6-1. 6 run. 7. nl. (C Britian, Newmorker). Tokes: 63.10; 53.80, 55.90. Dr. 527.60. CSF: 540.85.
2.45: 1. HAL HOO YAROOM (R His)
5-2; 2. Bold Classic 11.1: 3. Anchor Venture severs in. 4 run. 5, 11. (W R Hem, Lamboury, Tokes: 52-90, Dr. 19.60. CSF: 53.75.4.
3.15: 1. SOVERBERN PAGE U Stock)
5-2 tox: 2. Apollono 5-1: 3. Moletil 4-1. 6 run.
114, rik. (B Harbury, Neumarkey, Tokes: 53.10:
12.30, 51.60. Dr. 25.70. CSF: 514.19.
3.45: 1. Employs 7-4. (C Dwyer, Neumarkey).
7-4. tax. 4 run. 5, 4. (C Dwyer, Neumarkey).
Tokes: 53.30. Dr. 53.10. CSF: 16.74.
4.15: 1. NUPPY (B Doyle) 20-1; 2. Aethra 4.15: 1. HIPPY (8 Doyle) 20-1; 2. Aethra 7-2; 3. Hulm 9-2, 10 run, 9-4 ta. Royal Jade. 24, 14, (C British, Novimarket), Total: £18,90; £5,40, £1,90, £1,80, DF: £90,90, CSF: £86,38, Trio: £132,50,

Z DIZAN	Menter
	981
972	982
973	983
	984 LTS
	973

4.45: 1, NASHAAT (P McCobe) 3-1; 2. Dubai Collego 7-1; 3. Balpare 8-1. 9 ras. 2-1 fav Darcey Bussel (4th, 4-, 6. (M Chepman, Market Resch), Tetar: £4.40; £1.70, £1.80, £2.30. 0F: £11.40. CSF: £23.30 Tro: £27.30. Troas: £135.35: 5.15: 1. PELHAM (Pat Eddey) 2-1; 2. Lest Chence 7-4 fax; 3. Smart Boy 11-4. 4 ras. 4-, 7. (R Harmon, East Beefelgi), Totar £2.90. (Pf. £1.30. CSF: £5.60. Jackpot: £7.100.00; £4.389.87 carried forward to Carlele today. Placespot: £758.50. Quedpot: £45.90. Place 6: £513.01. Place 5: £171.01.

LINGFIELD
2.30: 1. SET ADRIFT (A McGione) evens
fav; 2. Typhoon Lad 15:2: 3. St Adele fav; 1. 6 ran. 1/4, 1/4, (H. Goct, Newmarket).
Tote: £1,90; £1.20, £2.10. DF: £5.60. CSF:

8-1. 6 ram. 1-1/4. 1-1/4. (H Coci.) Newmarket. Totas: E1.00; £1.20, £2.10. DF: £5.60. CSF: £8.68. NR: Serretus.
3.00: 1. INILCULLEN: LAD IT Quinni 100-30; 2. Engler To Pienne series Rev; 3. Emmark Risk: 12-1. 4 ram. rk. 9. (P Mooney. List). Totas: £3.30. DF: £3.20. CSF: £6.63.
3.30: 1. U-40-HARRY IF Lynch 9-2: 2. May Queen Megan 33-1; 3. Standown 4-1. 9 ram. 9-1 for Fath Mone. 1-4/4. 1-1/4. R Hollinsheed, Upper Longdori, Totas: £5.10: £1.10. £7.00. £2.10. DF: £58.70. CSF: £104.01. Tricast: £566.04. Inor £56.60.
4.00: 1. WARRY BEACH (S WINSOUTH) 11-2: 2. Give Nie A Ring 7-2 R km. 3. Quiet Rack 7-2 R km. 12 ram. 5. 3. (G L Moore. Epoorn). Totas: £6.70; £1.90, £2.40. DF: £19.30. CSF: £4.78. Inor £19.70.
4.30: 1. DEAR LIFE (A Clark) 5-1: 2. Arouty 7-1; 2. Winton Sen 4-8 fax. 5 ram. 3-24. rk. (Mrs.) 1 God; Normanderil. Totas: £10.70.
18.00: 1. WHITE PLAINS (R Mulech) 3-1 ft. km. 2. Cheffinian's Crown 3-1 ft. far; 3. Shelliams 20-1. 9 ram. 1, 7. (A) Bell, Newmonth 10. (124.51). E1.50. £1.20. E1.50. £1.20. Revenut; £1.16.64.

The: £118.60.

Inc: £114.60. Placepot: £1,024.30. Quadpot: £48.80. Place 6: £251.59. Place S: £154.21.

SALISBURY

2.00 Royal Orchid 3.30 Ela-Yie-Mor 2.30 SECOND BARRAGE (nap) 4.00 Monument 3.00 Tart And A Half

GOING: Good to Firm (Firm in places).

STAILE: Straight—far side; im 4f – stands' side.

DRAW ADVANTAGE: None.

Right-hand course, mainly uphill and testing.

Rescourse is 3m SW of city off A3064, Salisbury station (London, Waterloo-Exeter line) Sm. Bus service to course. ADMINSSION: Members 512,50; Tattersalis 58; Course Enclosure 54 (accompanied under-16s free all enclosures). Prices hold und8 end 1996. CAR PARK: Free.

SIS PACIFIC ILEADING TRAINERS WITH RINNIERS: E Hammon – 42 winners from 305 runners at a ratio of 13.8% giving a return to a $1 keel stake of $19.80; P Cole – 14 winners, 96 runners, 14.6%, $15.71; I Balding – 11 winners, 108 runners, 10.2%, $58.59; J Gooden – 10 winners, 37 runners, 72%, $52.28; M Chamnon – 10 winners, 172 runners, 755%, $68.75; L Cunnard – 9 winners, 27 runners, 33.3%, $520.63; P Chapple-Byam – 8 winners, 31 runners, $25.5%, $54.13.

ILEADING MCCRETE I, Detroit – 25 winners, 115 winers, 17 m, $53.70 - 1 Raid – 25

■ LEADING JOCKETIS: I. Dettori - 25 winners, 115 rides, 21.7%, +535.79; J Reid - 25 winners, 165 rides, 15.2%, 457.72; W Carson - 22 winners, 153 rides, 14.4%, 461.76; Pat Beldery - 20 winners, 105 rides, 195, 459.71; T Quirm - 18 winners, 156 rides, 11.5%, 461.61; W Ryan - 11 winners, 67 rides, 16.4%, 453.25 BLINKERED FIRST TIME: None.

BLINKERED FIRST TIME: Nose.
WINNERS IN THE LAST SEVEN DAYS: Nose.
LONG-DISTANCE RUNNERS: Noedle March (4.30) C Wall; Head Over Heels (2.00) &
Stram (2.30) J Goeden; Mishaweer (2.30) J Furshave; Yamarkaba (4.30) J Fayne; Second Barrage (2.30) & Ha-Yie-Mon (3.30) L Cuman; and Blockade (4.00) M Belt all sent 2.00 EBF WEYHILL MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS D) £5,000 added

	2YO tillies 5f Penalty Value £3,600
	ARRUHAN (Hamden Al Malezum) P Waleyo 8 11
	CHELL CONCERTO (Ten Hosepower) P Malon 8 11
	HEND OVER HEELS (Ms Rachel D S Hood) J Gosden 8 11
	LUCY OF ARABIA (John Sheehen) J Sheehen 8 11	S Drotees (3) 6
	QUITEBLING (T A F Prost) H Candy 8 11
	RUSE TN SHINE (11) IR M Cyant C Cyan 8 11
	ROYAL ORCHED (43) (Materiood Al-Shuaibi) R Hannon 8 11
34	THEO PARTY (30) (Mrs G R Smith) S Dow 8 11	A Daily (6) 1
	- 8 declared -

BETTING: 11-8 Royal Orchid, 9-4 Head Over Heals, 5-1 Rise W Shine, 8-1 Arrebus, 10-1 Quibbl 14-1 Third Party, 16-1 others 1995: Wilsow Dale 2 8 11 T Qunn 7-1 (D R C Basonth) 7 ran

FORM GUIDE

ROYAL ORCHID ted the subsequent Queen Mary winner Dance Penede until edging off the rail inside the final furiong at the big York meeting on her debut. There's bags of speed in her female line – her dam is a half-sister to smart sprinter Mistertopoggio – and thet's by for the pock of the form of the three that have raced, quite epart from the fact that she is likely to come on a fair bit for the experience. John Gosden had his first two-year-old winner of the season when Krissesh obliged first time out at Safurday's Ascot Heath meeting. His newcomer here is Head Over Heads, with Pat Edday riding, and sire'd need to be sharper than her pedignee suggests to topple Royal Orchid. It was only a 14-furiong maiden at Tramore in which her dam broke her duck. Richard Hills rode Khassish for Hamdan Al Makhoum st Asout on Safurday and teams up here with the owner's Arrabas, trande by Pener boum at Ascor on Sacurday and teams up here with the owners a must walkeyn. The stable has had just the one gwentle numer this season a Select ruhan will need the arring.

2.30 MARGADALE STAKES (CLASS C) £7,650 added 310 7f Penal-ty Value £4.222

Ty Value ±4,822
1 SECOND SHIPMAE (33) (OT (M Mastheli) L Quirest 9 2	# White #
01 SUP NG (35) (CD) (John Horger) R Harmon 9 0	Reiu Z
51. STRAZO (30) (K. Abdulla) J. Goeden 9.0
1 FRSBURY FLYER (13) (D) (P Sade) R Hodges 8 10
15- OLERNA (249) (C) FIRM Prints Fated Salment P Chia 8 S O-5 MISRAMEER (64) (Abouto Al Viroldo) J Farekano 8.5
– 6 decimed −

BETTRIR: 5-4 Strazo, 7-2 Silp Eg. 4-1 Second Berrage, 6-1 Oleman, 10-1 others 1995: Moon King 3 8 12 Pat Edgery 5-4 (R Harmon) 4 ran

STRAZO had Sile Jib just under four lengths behind when both made promising debuts in a 20-runner Newbury maden won by Helton lent moren. The pair have gone on to vin since, though Sip Jig had the harder task when gating back up against Double March over seven furiongs here on soil ground. Staxon had little to beat and was odds on for a nale maiden at Cheptatow, which he duly won by making all and having things seven up with a furiong to go. The one big fly in the orniment of Second Samage, who won just as impressively in a 12-runner maden in tably last month. Oleans had a good start when she beat 17 others at Lascester back in Octobe.

3.00 SOLENT PREMIER CLUB SPRINT HANDICAP (CLASS D) £5,250 added 5f Peraity Value £3,581.

_						C Adminster (5) 2 B
	002040	TATTANDAR	40 F (120) (121) (127) (127) (127)	gisi B Menhir	:498	D Sweenly (7) 1 B
	005815	SALLY SLADE	(7) (D) (R M Cycer) C	Cpay 498
	416830	GOLDEN PURP	ED (EUSA) (EUS) (A P G	ndîn) Mey Gay	Kelency 497	W J O'County 4
•	410020				795	2 Dro ness (2) 5
				eciarad -
F	TING- GAL	Test Beef & Held	f. 11.4 Resulters Res	n. 7.2 Sally :	ه 11.2 مغد	thers

1995: Christmes Kes 3 9 3 Dane O'Ned 9-4 (R Hannon) 5 ran

FORM GLIDE.

SALLY SLADE, who came back to form under a big weight earlier in the month at Goodwood (50), where she overcame traffic problems, looks best.. She had 1.0st on her back wood (on), where she overcame transportations, tooks best.. She had 10st on her back again when staying on into fifth behind insider Trader at Ripon last week. Bowden Rome showed she was on the way back with her fourth on soft ground behind Thatcharalla at Newbury last month, just shead of Golden Pound and Tent And A Half. She confirmed that form with Tart And A Half when caught by Top Benarata late swoop in a decent heat at Namarket safer in the month and Epsom, being a law unto itself, it may not pay to take too much notice of her recent run there. Alleter Johan could manage only alignit behind Sir Joey over six furlongs here last time.

Selection: SALLY SLADE

3.30 GBBS MEW BIBURY CUP HANDICAP (CLASS C) £8,000 added 370 1m 4f Penalty Value £5,540 1 130-0 SIG ACADEMY (11) R E Singstod P Chapple Hyern 9 7. R Herlin (8) 2 3-20331 BOWLED OVER (12) UR R M Charl C Charl 9 1. I Reid 3 2-432 SENEROSA (23) HER Prace Part Salmont H Charly 8 13. T Coher 4 05-0313 EA-YES-MOU (15) Hodges Michael L Curred 8 11. Pet Siddey, 5 00-066 VILLAGE KING (5) (N Ahamed R Hannon 8 1. J F Egen 5 ESTING: 9-4 Ein-Yes-Mon, 3-1 Generous, 7-2 Bowled Over, 4-1 Ski Academy, 7-1 Village King 1995: Beyond Doubt 3 8 12 L Detton 4-6 (Lord Huntington) 4 zer

FORM GLEDE

ELA-YIE-MOU went for home with three furiongs to run at Haydock 19 days ago and looked the winner until put in his place by Double Agent, eventually losing second to Flocheck. With Double Agent winning impressively at Notingfann three days later that may run out to be good form. SM Academy won over a mile at two, so a mile and a half in his second seeson shouldn't be a problem. He stamped himself as a promising journils when staying on an third behind the useful Bonaretti in Listed company at Goodwood next time out and lost his race when getting colly in the paddock at York on his reappearance. Generoes could Arminista, trained by Peter not go with Ninotchka in the final quarter of a mile and it's more likely that she came up against a decent filty rather than falling through stamma at her first assempt at this distance.

Selection: ROYAL ORCHO

Selection: S

SS

100	Penelty Value £2,721
100-4	MOMBATA (29) (29) (29) (Att PM Ning) J King 498
4.03	SECOCKADE (15A) (23) (C) (C) (A M Warrander) M (REF T 9 5
2027	PRESENT CALLE M (12) IOS Dats News Dutfield Mrs P Dudeld 7 9 3 Resent 2 16
0050	MATE AND IS IN HERMON & HORMON 3 9 0
1335	REPRESENTED FOR STATE OF CHARGE PROPERTY OF THE STATE OF
04	WITHERSON (27) (C C Sampson) R Harmon 3 9 0
0000	URAC RAM (ES COS UR Amoid) J Amoid 4 8 (T Quien 5
00-	EMONY T.A.P.S (271) (Terry Pasquale) J Moore 3 7 13

- 8 declared - BETTING: 5-4 Reinbard, 3-1 Bioclade, 5-1 Monapord, 8-1 Only, 10-1 With

BLOCKADE, a decent out as a two and three-year-old, has come back with in clasmors these past two seasons since he has been tubed. Now seven, he dight recipied runth but mind and then stepped up on that conseback when he led —as usual—and stepped on all the same pice once headed with over a furing to go behind Scottish Park in a Lecoster (1m) clasmer 23 days ago. With those two runs to put him right he is more likely to be able to dominate him field as he usually does in this grade. Monument scraped home in a live-runner formation mades for Rogar Cherton last season and was hunding for his present yard, with little students, up until Easter. Returning to the Flat at Sandown lost month, he stayed on to first a close fourth behind Early Peace in a Sandown claimer, yet as promising as that was still falls short of Blockade's best and he has to give him 3th, Past time out as a beoryear-old Reinhameth ran third to Mark of Esseen at Goodwood and was then short-headed in a field of 22 to Newbury, Undortunately, it has been mostly downhat from them and, although the has the form to make short work of these, there is no gaznamee of him reproducing it.

Desert Callen was stighting on well when besten two necks in an apprentices' handicap over Desert Cellar was staging on well when besten two necks in an apprentices' handcap ore seven furiongs here early on last month and isn't out of it. Selections BLOCKAD

4.30 SHREWTON RATING RELATED MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS F) £3,450 added 3YO 71 Penalty Value £2,784

٠.		TOTAL STORY OLD ILL STORY I SEED SEPORT
1	6235	ANALKALI (21) (HTH Subun Airtrati Shaff Mass Gay Helleway 9 (
2	334-54	BELZIKO (11) (John IV Machall M Charnon 9 0
3	0040-04	ECTRA HOUR (22) Olistad Paylon) W Max 9 0
4	00-0	PLYING HAROLD (CB) Statesim P Aller) M Channon 9 Q
5	0-500	NEEDLE MOTCH (41) (Pols R Printed) C Wal 9 0
6	60-0234	VELVET JOHES (5) Gibs Jesses Charles-Jones G Charles-Jones 9 0
7	530-00	WHETE SETTLER (19) () Newsource) R Hodges 9 D
8	0000-0	YA MARKAMA (80) IG Jabrel J Payre 9 C
9		BANCIT GIRL (25) (J.C. Smith Bailing 8 11
釢		MARASCHIPIO (13) (B H Smoson) 8 Median 8 11
_		- 10 declarati -

BETTERS: 5-2 Velvet Jones, 11-4 Randit Giri, 4-1 Arak-Na, 7-1 Bakzac, 8-1 Extra Hour, 10-1 Flying Harold, 14-1 Needle Match, 16-1 others

FORM GUIDE

The last time NEEDLE MATCH raced here he led for an furlongs under a big weight in a mile handcap won by Sound Check from subsequent scorer Dancing Image. Dropping down a furlong in un-of-the-mill company gives him a better chance. As a two-year-old, Sletzeo kicked off with a third (of sh) to previous winness Dovebrace and Lucayan Prince at York and then occupied a straigar position behind the subsequent Covertry Stokes. Generack and Middle. Park winner Royal Applause and Rembling Bear at Newbury. Not surprisingly Setzeo was odds on for his first start only to flop at Sath, and he was also odds on at Thirsk in April on his responsive, a lithough on that occasion there was some excuse as he met trouble in running. He is back to a more suitable trip after failing to stay at Bath (Limst) less time and there are those who might want to give him another chance in this grade, for which he would there are those who might want to give him another chance in this grade, for which he would

CARLISLE

HYPERION 2.15 Danehill Princess 2.45 Call To The Bar 3.15 Halmanerror 3.45 Habeta (nb) 4.15 Fairy Prince 4.45 Mathon 5.15 Grey Galva

GOING: Firm.

STALLS: Inside except 1m 4f - outside.

DEAW ADVANTAGE: High from 7f to 1m 4f.

Biglis-hand, undulating course. Run-in of 250yds.

Course: is on southern outsions of town, 4m W of junction 42 of Mt. Bus service from Carbale station 2m. ADMISSION: Club S12 (OAFs & under-21s 53); Tattersulls 56 (OAFs & under-21s 53). CAR PARK: On rails Sil; remainder free.

BLINKERED FIRST TIME: Butterwick Kid (4.15, visored); Washington Reef (4.45). WINNESS IN THE LAST SEVEN DATS: Kings Cay (4.15) won LONG-DISTANCE RUNNESS: Grey Galea (5.15) B Hills and Win-ter Scott (3.17) C Brooks both sent 297 miles from Lambourn in Berkshire.

2.15 EBF SILLOTH MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS D)

	20,200 00000 210 01
	BARRESHO C Farture 9 0
ş	EPIC STAND (13) Mrs J Ramsden 90
0	REDISTRICT (25) Mrs A Swintank 9 C
	NAMITY GAMER (FR) J Berry 9 0 Carroll 4
	CAN CAR LADY M Johnston 8 9T Williams 2
-3442	DANGELL PRINCESS (8) (SF) R Holinshead 8 9_F Lynch (5) 8
	MESAN CAREN D World 89
	RED CAMELLIA Ser litaris Prescote 8 9
	- 8 declared -
NG: 3-1	Can Can Lady, 7-2 Daniel Princess, Nest Y Gerner, 4-1

BETTING: 3-1 Can Con Lady, 7-2 Dannehill Princess, Heat Y Rad Comellia, 5-1 Epic Stand, 10-1 tie Distinct, 12-1 Others

2.45 BBC RADIO CUMBRIA SELLING STAKES (CLASS G) £3,000 added 67

10 BROWNESS PROMISES (9) M Bernari 3 8 12 ... G Parkle (9) 5
11 00 BROWNESS PROMISES (9) M Bernari 3 8 12 ... G Parkle (9) 5
12 0-05006 THORNTOLIN JEWEL (9) (0) Miss Z Green 3 8 7. Perming 3 B
13 54- TRAE FOR A GLASS (00%) D Missing 3 8 7. Described (9) 10
13 declared BETTING: 4-1 Selektarov, 5-1 Brookkead Lody, 6-1 Amogha, Coll To The Bac, 7-1 Secon of Priority, Jungle Patrol, 8-1 others

CHESTER

HYPERION

6.55 Rebel County 7.25 Fredrik The Flerce 7.55 Rock Symphony 8.25 Canton Venture 8.55 Sceni-

Left-hand, tight, executar course. Not suitable for long-suriding

■ Counse is near centre of city on A548. Chester General raff su-tion one rafe away. ADMISSION: County Enclosure 515; Temessalls 58; Dee Stand 54; Course 52, GAR PARE: $1.

BLOWERED FIRST TIME: Rock Symphony (viscos), 7.45).
WINNERS IN THE LAST SEVEN DATS: None.

LONG-DESTANCE RUNNIESS: Fancy Beights (9.25) has been acut 128 miles by Lady Bexnes from Angmening Park, West Sussex; Robel

County (6.55) has been sent 186 miles by M Pipe from Michalashayae, Devan.

cris 9.25 Kawanin

SES

GOING: Good to Firm (watering). STALLS: Inside, curept im 2f - outside. DBAW ADVANTAGE: Low numbers heat.

BLOWERED PIEST TIME: Rock Syn

3.15 RACING CHANNEL HANDICAP (CLASS D) £5,100 added 7f

3.45 S. P. GRAHAM CARLISLE BELL H'CAP (CLASS D) £6,500 added 1m

1	204233-	RED YALERMAN (338) (D) G Moore 5 9 10
2	000012	SPANSKI VERDICT (13) (CD) Danys Smith 9 9 7 K Felio
3	1000-20	NEW ALBION (USA) (30) Miss Z Green 592 Farmin
4	00-0315	RET FROM (14) (D) 14 Javes 389P Robbess
5	1500-64	BUESKEN (S) C Fairburst 4 & 8
6		CEE-JAY-AY (20) (D) J Barry 9 8 2
7	22-0531	HABETA (USA) (16) (D) J Watts 10 8 2
8		SHTBBAAM (FR) (26) Mrs A Swotperk 4 7 13
9		THATCHED (13) (CD) R Berr 6 7 12
10	552100	COURSE RISHING (265) B McMahon 5 7 10 G Burdure
		= 10 declared —
B _C	maio S.o	One Brance A. 1 Construct Manufact C. 2 Barbarban C. 1 Throbarba

BETTRAR: 5-2 Ret Prers, 4-1 Spanish Verdict, 9-2 Robets, 6 7-1 Cap Jay-Av, 8-1 Balsars, 10-1 Red Valeries, 12-1 other 4.15 C. G. TRUCK HANDICAP (CLASS E)

	£4,200 added 3YO 6f
	1	061004	CISERANO (9) M Channon 9 7P P	Marphy (5)
	2	006310	TROPICAL BEACH (B) J Barry 93	Carrol 1
	3	4005-30	ANSWERS TO THOMAS (12) J Jeffeson 8 12	K Pallon (
	4	050 003	FAIRY PRINCE (13) Mrs A Mrs 8 12	FLyack (S)
	5		OPENNIS CHORUS (8) D Nichols 8 11
	6		PATHAZE (4) N Bycrost 8 7
	7		MULLAGH HELL LAD (28) B Mollaton 8 7
	ā		THE BUTTERHICK KID (8) R Fahey 85
	ē		DOUG'S FOLLY (19) M W Easterby 8 4
- 9 declared -
	RETTING 3-1 Opening Charus, 7-2 Petisans, 4-1 Clearans, 6-1 Felry Prince

4.45 RATING RELATED MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS F) £3,450 added 2m 1f 52yds

BETTING: 4-5 Washington Reof, 11-4 Mathon, 5-1 Tencred Mischief, 8-1 Royal Vacation, 25-1 Unifit

5.15 S. P. GRAHAM MEN AMATEUR LIMITED STAKES (CLASS F) £3,450 added 1m 4f

- 4 declared -BETTING: Bruns Grey Galava, 9-4 (Gugs City, Auchorona, 66-1 Jetore

6.55 YELLOW LASEL CLAIMING STAKES (CLASS D) £6,000 added 1m 2f 75yds 32-0113 SECOND COLOURS (117) (87) Mrs N Poulley 6 9 12 ... K Dadey 1

DETTRAZ 4-6 Robel County, 12-8 Second Colours, 16-1 Trylane, 20-1 Beech

7.25 WHOW MADEN STAKES (CLASS D)
1 0	BALLEYS BAP (13) M. Joinsson 9 0
2 0	COMMANDER JONES (12) B Meetan 9 0
3 .442	FREDRIK THE FERRIX (39) J Berry 9 ()
	MRUIOVA (11) R Hollostead 9 ()
	NOMORE MR NICEBLY (89) E Alston 9 Q
6. 22 5	MAD BY THE FIRE (USA) (12) P Cole 8 9 Carrol 6
7 0	PROPERSS OF HEARTS (22) W Hagges 89
OCTION C.4 Maid the fire 24 Mains 7 a for the re-

Nomore Mr Micegny, 7-1 Princess of Hearts, 12-1 others

7.55 PRIX DE LA GRANDE DAME RATED HAND-ICAP (CLASS C) £13,000 added 6f

-4 dec BETTING: 6-4 Tanania, 9-4 Wandering Star, 11-4 SIR: Masque, 14-1 La

KEMPTON

HYPERION

6.40 Ethafid 7.10 Wandering Star 7.40 Double Echo 8.10 Bal Harbour 8.40 Sue Me 9.10 Sea

GOING: Round course - Good (watering); Jubilee course - good to firm (watering).

STALLS: 5f & 6f - stands' side; rest - inside.

DRAW ADVANTAGE: Low best for 5f and 6f.

Eighs-hand course. Separate straight course for 5f and 6f races.

Practically flat.

Course is on A308 at Sumbury. Kempton Park railway station adjoins course. ADMISSION: Chib $15, Juniors (16 to 25-year-olds) $12; Grandstand $10; Silver Bing $5. Accompanied fulform under 16 free. CAR PARK: Members $2; remainder, free.

BIJNERERD FIRST TIME: Hovest (7.40).
WINNESS IN THE LAST SEVEN DAYS: None.
LONG-DESTANCE RUNNESS: Double Echo (7.40) has been sent.
245 miles by J Bethell from Middleham, North Yorkshire, Yesing
Dake (9.10) sent 184 miles by R Baker from Stoodleigh, Devon;
Yangtae (6.40) sent 185 miles from B Milman's Kentisbeare stable in Devon; Maike A Stand (7.40) sent 183 miles from M Pipe's Nicholashayne stable in Devon; Rocquatine Bay (7.40) sent 182 miles from M Bolton's Shrewion stable in Winshire.

6.40 ERF MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS D) £5,000 added 270 77

O WALLACE (LA) C Murey 9 0______

- 13 declared -BETTING: 5-2 Esrolink Exceller, 4-1 Sheer Foly, 9-2 Moster Pink, 8-1 El-imild, 10-1 Shee's My Key, Sheer Face, 12-1 others

7-10 SUMMER STAKES (CLASS C) £7,850 added 370 filles 1m

TURSA B Gubby 9 0...

BLINKERED FIRST TIME: Roresti (7.40).

8.25 CLICQUOT ROSE HANDICAP (CLASS D)

SETTENC: 4-6 Caston Venture, 9-4 Classuss, 6-1 Sobs Up, 7-1 Bactories

8.55 St. PETERSBURG HANDICAP (CLASS D) £6,000 added 3YO 7f 9.25 PONSARDIN MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS D) £8,000 added 3YO 1m 5f 89yds 006 Sty March (7) A Balley 9 ()...... 6-3 FRANCY HERCHTS (228) Lady Harnes & 9......K Deslay 2 HALEAKALA M. Johnston 8 9...... 002 KANKANIN (13) PWahnin 89 _____ Cerrol 5

صكذا من الاحل

la column never with

8.40 '1812' OVERTURE HANDICAP (CLASS D) £5,100 added 6f

7.40 VANGUARD PARTNERSHIP HANDICAP (CLASS E) £5,000 added 1m 4f

Minimum: 7st 10th. True https://declared — Minimum: 7st 10th. True https://declares. Minimum: 7st 9th. Sorisly 7st 6th. BETTING: 5-2 Minim A Stand, 4-1 Fabricas Mitche, 9-2 Recognisine Bay, 8-1 Mordansk, 8-1 Double Echo, 10-1 Missauld Dymor, 14-1 others

8.10 GALA STAKES (CLASS A) (Listed Race) £17,000 added 1m 2f

BETTING: 4-5 Bai Harbour, 7-4 Jural, 5-1 Ryfisher

9.10 FIREWORKS HANDICAP (CLASS D)

652-33 MADABE STERLEN (46) B HEA 8 9

- S declared - Statement - Sta

Jones broadens the horizons

An uncompromising Australian is inspiring England's least Cemake.

fashionable club. He spoke to Adam Szreter an Jones had just made centuries on successive days for Derbyshire; the first helped them to a resounding 363-run victory over Middlesex in the Championship; the second was not quite enough to prevent defeat in the Sunday League. He might have been reasonably pleased with his form.

"I'm not worried about those type of performances," he said. "I'm just worried about getting results for Derbyshire, improving what we did last year and giving the club some future, some direction, and seeing where it wants to go.

For someone who made 11 centuries in 52 Tests for Australia, and averages over 50 in first-class cricket and 46.55 for his country, a cou-ple of hundreds at Derby probably are fairly small beer, on reflection.

Jones's dedication to his new post started somewhat prematurely, you might say. His wife was expecting their second child when he was about to leave for England in the spring. "Jane said, You're not going until you've seen this baby'. So I said, well you better get it induced because I've got to go'."

Baby Isabella was induced and dad was on a plane within the hour.

Although his wife may not have appreciated it too much, you feel that Derbyshire are about to benefit from Jones's uncompromising personality. They have struggled to fulfil their potential in recent seasons, despite a regular battery of top-class bowlers, but now they are third in the Championship and have a number of young players who are catching the eye. Jones, however, is not satisfied yet.

It's been good and bad," he said of his first two months in charge. "We're getting there, slowly but sure-ly. I've inherited a squad and there's no doubt there'll be changes made to it before next year. I can't say which areas at the moment - that would be a bit silly of me, wouldn't it? But we are looking at a few guys and decisions will be made in the next mouth."

Of the younger players at the club, Jones is in no doubt that they are generally behind their Australian contemporaries in terms of their overall development. "At home, you get picked for Australia at 20 or 21 if you're any good. Here you're just playing the first game for your county. County cricket is a full-time professional job and therefore guys stay on longer, earning good money, and positions vacant are not readily available. At home, the turnover

Focal point: Dean Jones makes a point to his players before they wrapped up their third successive Championship win on Monday picking young guys. If they show po-tential, we just whack 'em straight in." Despite his nationality, as a county captain Jones is clear about his duty to the England team. "I can't play Corky in the Nat West. He's just bowled 42 overs for England and I've got to make sure he does well for his country. That's my job. The chib wants him to play well here, sure, but for his career, his life, it matters what he does for England. He wants to play against Staffordshire, which is the little minor county he's from, but I'll rest him."

Even without Cork, Derbyshire are not short of big names. One. Devon Malcolm, is being nursed back to form after South Africa. "We had to pick the pieces up from Dev, who was in bits after South Africa, but we've put him back together and he's a pretty useful bowler again.

"I think that what was done to him

can still play for England, without doubt. I've just got to keep him relaxed. He's a loveable bloke, very dry sense of humour, and I've just got to make sure he keeps running in fast and runs straight through the crease, instead of peeling off too quickly.

"Changing a guy's action at the age of 32 or 33, as one particular Eng-land fast-bowling coach advised, was bloody stupid. Absolutely ridiculous. I think they're trying to do things to justify their jobs. Despite the Malcolm affair, Jones believes England are at long last heading in the right direction. They've got some good selectors, they're starting to pick the right blokes, they're ringing captains up and speaking to players. A player might have got a hundred, but he might also have been dropped four times, so they're getting the right mail.

"Mike [Atherton] has done a their coupons, like Goughie. He's starting to take wickets and make runs at county level. England caps used to be handed out, now they're getting earned, which is good. World cricket needs England. We need them playing well. We need a really tight series next year to keep lift-ing up the standards of Test cricket."

As someone who spent a season with Durham under the captaincy of David Graveney, Jones has the ear of at least one England selector, and he has already had a say. "[Alan] Mulially bowled beautifully here, knocked us over and I thought. 'He's ready.' The major reason was that he swung the ball back in. But I've noticed in the last Test he's gone back to trying to bowl fast instead of shaping the ball. He's always been a fast left-arm medium, not a quick, and he thinks he's a quick again."

As far as his own staff at Derbyshire of the way players such as Johnny Owen, Andy Harris and particularly Chris Adams have responded. "It's a very unfashionable county. We've only won one Championship, in '36, so we're trying to change things. If you pick up the Cricketers' Who's Who, where it says 'Least Favourite Ground', they always say Derby. So we're trying to clean the place up. The players don't like playing here because they always soup up the wickets, and they're facing Malcolm, Cork and Bishop, so I can understand there's a bit of hatred for it." Jones is quickly becoming something of a local hero in Derby, and if you ask him about his own heroes, he does not have to think long. "Border without doubt. Toughest guy I've ever met mentally in sport. He doesn't care how he looks, he just goes out there and does the business. I've seen him facing the West Indi-

them on. What I like about him is that he doesn't carry a grudge, which I think is very, very important." best batsmen in the world, but he accepts that his international career is over. "I'm finished," he says. "It's time for the young punks to come in and play. Australia doesn't need me

Jones has, however, signed to play one more season with Victoria this winter, despite losing the captaincy to Shane Warne, who he believes will be the next captain of Australia.

For the time being, he and his family are adjusting to their new life in the East Midlands. His elder daughter, Phoebe, is settling in to her school a little too well for her father's liking. "She's starting to speak English, which worries me," he says. 'She's got this Pommie twang and I'm going to knock the hell out of it."

University break is bad news for Kent

THE WEEK AHEAD

Put to most cricketers, the idea of long, recuperative breaks between County Championship matches would receive a high level of support. However, a poll in the Kent dressing-room today might reveal some Having claimed pole position in the Britannic Assurance table with their impressive defeat of Warwickshire, Kent temporarily leave the contest to entertain Oxford University By the time they return, they may have been knocked off their perch by Yorkshire, who attempt to regain the leadership at the expense of Worcestershire, or Derbyshire, who completed a hat-trick of wins by trouncing Middlesex in the last round and have a chance to extend the sequence against bottom-ofthe-table Northamptonshire, start-

Derbyshire are thriving under the Australian influence of their captain, Dean Jones, and their coach, Les Stillman, who have so far delivered their promise of a well-schooled, wellmotivated team. Jones will be relieved to have Dominic Cork available at Northampton, still without a Championship success this season and well beaten by Hampshire last time out.

Warwickshire travel to Lord's under orders to go easy on Shaun Pollock. The demands being made of the 22-year-old South African caused Dr Ali Bacher to place an anxious tele-phone call to Edgbaston last week, reminding the champions of the "gentlemen's agreement" they made over how long and how frequently the fledgling Test star should bowl.

It has created a dilemma for Warwickshire. They accept Dr Bacher's concern, but believe Pollock is still not fully attuned to English conditions and, therefore, needs to bowl. On top of that, injuries to Tim Munton and Gladstone Small have stretched their resources.

Andrew Caddick, meanwhile, is keen to bowl as many overs as possible after several marathon stints against Worcestershire last week, when he took 7 for 83 in the first innings, impressing England selector Brian Bolus. Although Somerset lost the match, Caddick and Australian allrounder Shane Lee are in fine fettle and could cause problems for Lancashire, whose Championship results so far have been disappointing.

If a column is published and nobody reads it, does that mean it was never written? The correct answer is probably: so what if it does and no one hears it, it hasn't really I was there to see it, of course. I was made a sound. I know how that tree feels. Last Wednesday, this column was surrounded by reports of the Engwas surrounded by reports of the England football team's best performance at Wembley for 30 years. Today it's surrounded by previews of the England football team's biggest game at Wembley for 30 years. If a column is published and nobody reads it, does that mean it was never really written?

The correct answer is probably: so what if it does? But it's not just cricket writers who are being swallowed up by the roar of football. It's cricket itself. On Saturday at Lord's - the Saturday of the Lord's Test - the five biggest cheers were all for penalty kicks. One of them was big enough to provoke Dickie Bird into sticking his left arm out and holding up play

(a prerogative long thought to be at an overshadowed event is the of Russell and Sourav Ganguly.

nately, England and Germany were in Turin. For some reason - a shrewd assessment of England's chances of beating Belgium, no doubt - I had agreed to review the Rolling Stones that night, live at Wembley Stadium. Just as at Lord's, the biggest recep-tion was football-related. Mick Jagger looked first bemused, then disgruntled. The show was stolen. It was no coincidence that the Rolling Stones' next tour was in 1995, leaving him free as a bird for the hig summer of sport. Sure enough, he was spotted at Lord's on Thursday and at Wembley on Saturday.

They say if a tree falls in the forest, long to small dark clouds). Not that worst of both worlds. You miss out on the big event, without having the slightest hope of preserving a news blackout and enjoying the video in full innocence. And you also miss out on the one you're at, because it's impossible to get the most out of any spectacle, sporting or artistic, if your mind is elsewhere.

This Test match, as it turned out, was a good one not to be concentrating on. It was dour and largely drab; except for two sessions (Thursday evening, when Jack Russell managed to combine defiance with strokeplay, and Monday morning, when England thought about collapsing) it was a better advertisement for football than anything paid for by Nike. The match will be re-Wembley on Saturday. membered only by fans of Dickle Even for a mere spectator, to be Bird and close friends and relatives

the moment the players formed a guard of honour for Dickie. Apparently that was Mike Atherton's idea, so it was a neat joke on the game's part that he should be given out by Dickie, a noted not-out-er, three minutes later. Atherton walked off with a broad smile on his face, further evidence that the Captain Grumpy image didn't fit.

There was plenty of hard cricket character, didn't bother to go up and which few conclusions should be played after that. The pitch had a express his concern. The next hall was drawn. One of the few is that the Intouch of the Edgbastons and all the quicker bowlers tended to bowl short, looking for the gloves. England's two best batsmen, Russell and Graham Thorpe, both took painful blows in the part of the body that has the commentators reaching for euphemisms. We're nobody's soft touch," David Lloyd had said, more than once, at Edgbaston. The best example of this is Chris Lewis, who has been portrayed in the past as everybody's soft touch. Lewis's batting, usually stylish but brittle, was unrecognisable on Friday, grinding out 31 from 118 balls: hard to watch, but hard to fault. When Venkat Prasad came in at No 11, Lewis greeted him with a nasty lifter, which rapped him on the bowling hand. While the physio did his stuff, Lewis, who always seems a gentle another lifter. The Indians played hard too, peppering Atherton with bouncers on Sunday afternoon. But the air of unreality persisted. The fifth-day crowd was only a crowd by county standards. India's over-rate was poor. England's was worse.

England's performance was summed up by Lloyd as "absolutely brilliant". Lloyd's enthusiasm is a great thing, but if allowing a demoralised and inexperienced touring team to score 429 constitutes absolute brilliance, then beating them by eight wickets in the first Test was the greatest result in England's history. The press must have misheard him. What he actually said is that England were resolutely resilient. Which they were. This was the sort of match from dians have to be taken seriously. England's next selection meeting will not be just another mobile-phone call. Well as the 12 used so far have gelled, the selectors need to ask questions. What is the point of playing five seam and swing bowlers? Is Ronnie Irani one of the 11 best players in the country, or is he another example of Ray Illingworth's doomed search for the new Basil D'Oliveira? And whom would the Indian batsmen rather face - the admirable Peter Martin, or a revitalised Darren Gough, armed with the variety, aggression and reverse swing that will be needed on a flat pitch like Trent Bridge? Now, if you'll excuse me, I need to get ready for the football.

Tim de Lisle is editor of Wisden Cricket Monthly

Without the right help David Gower might have ended up in court.

uapuriles de Development et boseilense programme NatWest is givina today's bright young haacluis the same chance to shine. Great mans for English chicket, not so bood for the opposition.

NatWest More than just a bank i: "I have a natural t is one o lose frie aid after ow choug juestion O remain

Won $30

oul

asi CJ

at verdict the worker w stural case

ranklin,

ı full fitne cck in on use of Cra

c, a York

eve it was : really lo ad heen a er. If it w vhat was mer wife Avenue, l his roas I'm conv ed him, to with cat suld have if people hologist, y, who ca

> no statis between n an abai

vination

old the in from CJ.

"usual fo ariant he

such a

īrst, he le te unable ffered fro vent by, I ok unco

ths in 198 wed in th trying to CJD car beef tha

Cheshire felled by Emburey

DAVID LLEWELLYN

It may be cricket's most frenetic day - 32 teams and a welter of statistics as they chase 16 second-round places - but the Nat West Trophy first round is also the game's most one-sided hinge.

About the only unpredictable thing was the appearance of a couple of familiar names on the umpiring front. Jeremy Lloyds, the former Somerset and Gloucestershire batsman, was standing in the uncompleted affair in Belfast, and John Steele, once of Leicestershire, was officiating

But back to cricket's answer to the Grand National, in which the first to fall were Cheshire. Northamptonshire, last season's beaten finalists, made short work of the Minors' batting as John Emburey became only the second bowler to take a hat-trick for the county (af-ter David Larter in 1963). Then Richard Montgomerie (69 not out) made even shorter work of the bowling - 25 overs - as the first-class county ran out ninewicket winners by 4pm.

Derbyshire, who rested Dominic Cork, needed about an hour longer, but an unbroken third-wicket stand of 131 between Chris Adams (68 off 41 balls) and Tim O'Gorman (62) got them home by eight wick-ets with more than 23 overs to

It was no more difficult for Essex, Middlesex or Surrey. Nasser Hussain, having taken 26 deliveries to get off the mark, proceeded to make 105 to help Essex to a comfortable 119-run win over Devon.

NatWest Trophy first round

C L Hooper c Adams b Donelar M J Walker not out Extras (b1, lb4, w14, nb2)

Fall: 1-13, 2-26, 3-27, 4-131, 5-179. Did not bat: "TS A Marsh, N W Preston, M M Patel, D W Headley.

Bowling: Masters 12-4-52-2; Ainter 10-3-35-1; Raifs 10-0-61-0; Ecclestone 6-1-20-0; Donelan 12-0-58-1; N Mohammed 10-0-44-1.

trek to Carlisle and emerged victors by 102 runs, Mike Gatting smacking 71 and John Carr 62 against Cumberland. Surrey crushed the Netherlands, who included the former New Zealand Test player Chris Pringle in their line-up. by 159 runs at The Oval.

Warwickshire went west and and so did Cornwall's hopes of progress to the next round, the holders winning by 133 runs. Centuries by the captain, John Stephenson, and by Jason Laney, who set a competition record 269 for the first wicket, helped Hampshire to brush aside Norfolk by 99 runs.

However, the performance of the day had to be that of Vince Wells. He smashed 201 (the second highest individual score in the competition's history) against Berkshire to help Leicestershire reach 406 for 5 (the second highest total of the tournament). Leicestershire won by 106 runs.

Rain frustrated Sussex's efforts to get their match against Ireland finished. They still had five overs left when they called it a day on 323 for 7, just four runs short of their record for the 60-over tournament. The Sussex captain, Alan Wells,

There was more unfinished, and far less happy, business for Sussex off the field after one of their players was named last night as the player who had failed a drug test during the championship match against Kent at Tunbridge Wells last month. However, neither the Test and County Cricket Board nor Sussex would confirm the report until the result of a further, mandatory test on a second urine sample is known.

T Gadsby c Llong b Eatham ... Mohammed c Marsh b Headley M Ecslestone c Patel b Llong ... A Kellett c Marsh b Headley

T P Donelan c Eatham b Llong S L Williams c Patel b Llong

Extras (ID6, w14, nb4) . Total (S8.3 overs)

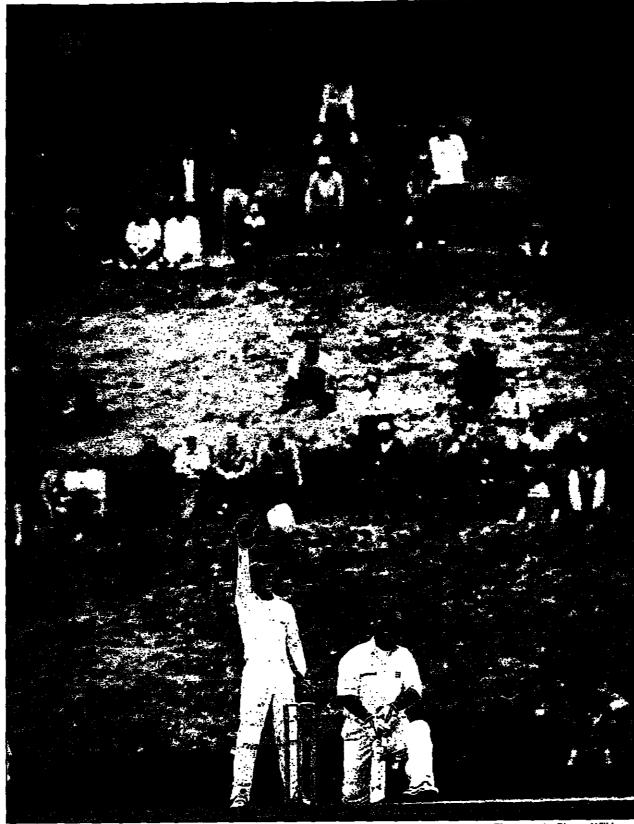

Warwickshire won toss

Flemme b Eathern d c & b Patel

Fait: 1-3, 2-3, 3-8, 4-19, 5-45, 6-131, 7-153, 8-169, 9-179.

Bowling: Headey 6-0-19-2; Eaham 8-2-11-2: Preston 6-2-6-0; Pate 12-2-26-1; Hooper 12-0-47-0; Llong 9-1-36-3; Ward 5-0-28-1; Marsh 0.3-0-3-1.

Comwall v Warwickshire ST AUSTELL: Warwickshire beat Co by 133 runs.

Not out: Middlesex's Mike Gatting survives an Ibw appeal against Cumberland at Carlisle

Bowling: Pollock 5-0-25-0; Small 8.5-1-28-2; Brown 7-1-19-0; Weich 5-2-11-1; N M X Smith 12-3-40-3; Edmond 8-1-24-1; P A Smith 5-0-30-2.

CAPILISLE: Micklesex beet Cumberland by 102

Falt 1-3, 2-110, 3-110, 4-198, 5-235, 6-246, 7-247, 8-270

Did not bet: R A Fay, P C R Tufnel,
Bowling: Sharp 8-3-22-0; Scothern 11-4-233: O'Sheughness; 11-1-74-2; Beech 11-0-601; Fieting 11-3-52-1; Wilson 8-2-22-1.
CIBBSEFELAND
A D Mawson c Tufnell b Fay 41
D J Pearson C Garb b Fraser 1
D J Pearson C Garb b Fraser 1
S T Wrox st Brown b Wellings 8
S T O'Shaughnessy c Brown b Tufnell 0
PS M Dutton C Car b Tufnel 4
J M Reiding law b Fay 1
A G Wilson C Fay b Westes 42
J M Reiding law b Fay 1
A G Wilson C Fay b Westes 0
M A Shap not out 1
States 109, w12, nb24) 5
Total (49.4 overs) 168
Pett 1-5, 2-39, 3-80, 4-81, 5-97, 6-124, 7-

Pet: 1-5, 2-39, 3-80, 4-81, 5-97, 6-124, 7-138, 8-158, 9-163.

Bowling Frastr 3-1.8-1; Fey 12-0-43-2; John-son 8-1-29-1; Tutnell 12-3-22-2; Westings 5-5-1-20-1; Weekes 7-5-0-35-3; Ramprakesh 1-0-2-0.

Impires: V A Holder and G Sharp

CHESTER-LE-STREET: Durham boot !
by 95 runs.
Scotland won toss
DURHAM
S L Campbell b Reifer
S Hutton b Cowen
J E Monta t Tennent b Thomson ...
D A Blenkron c Dowes b Cowen ...
P Santhrade b Williamson

A charman of the state of the s

Did not bat: N Kileen, J Boiling,

D Cowan not out Extres (b2, b5, w9, nb6) ... Total (for 6, 60 overs)

Essex v Devon

Falt: 1-45, 2-103, 3-163, 4-215, 5-245, 6-250, 7-289.

Feb. 1-5, 2-11, 3-37, 4-122, 5-128, 6-160.

Bowling: Brown 7:2-19-1; Bern 12-4-33-3; Bain-bridge 12-3-21-1; Yilleen 12-0-48-1; Builing 12-4-28-0; Berlietin 4-0-31-0; Campbel 1-0-17-0. Umplines: K.E. Palmer and M.A. Johnson.

S G (aw e Pugh a Donohue ... R C Irani e Pugh b Donohue ... P J Prichard not out

Durham v Scotland

Cumberland v Middlesex

'M W Getting b Wilson J C Pooley c Peerson b Beach

I Carr & Dution b O'Shaughnessy
IK R Brown b O'Shaughnessy
P E Wellings not out
R L Johnson liw b Scothern
A R C Fraser c Ingram b Scothern
Botras (b4, b7, w7, nb11)

Did not bet: R A Fay, P C R Tufnell

208, 8-694, 9-494. Beefing: Angere 12-0-55-4; Lovel 12-0-107-2: Wilcock 12-1-43-1; Kent 12-3-23-1; Hands 5-0-33-0; Furse 6-0-17-0; Leio 1-0-12-0.

CORNWALL S M Walerts b N M K Smath .

Photograph: Simon Wilkinson

Yorkshire's trail blazed by Moxon reports from Headingley Yorkshire 345-5 Nattinghamshire 140 Yorkshire won by 205 runs

Putting teams in at Headingley has been known to have its rewards. But not when the sun blazes down from a cloudless sky, not when the pitch is mild mannered and not when much of the bowling is, shall we say, less than distinguished. Above all, not when there is a batsman on view of the class of Martyn Moxon, who shredded Nottinghamshire's attack sterday by making 137 from 157 deliveries in a way that sug-gested, and the watching Ray-mond Illingworth was happy to confirm, that he could still have a Test future rather than a past.

Michael Vaughan shared a free-wheeling opening part-nership of 143 from 32 overs with him and Michael Bevan improvised as possibly only he can to score 69 from 42 balls, a piece of virtuosity that probably devastated bowlers who by then were exceedingly world weary and not a little frustrated.

All this left Nottinghamshire needing to surpass Warwick-shire's 322 in the final three years ago, which is the highest score made by a side batting second and winning in this competition; unsurprisingly the necessary panache was not forthcoming against bowling that was always more controlled than their own.

As ever in most days' cricket, though, there was a finer dividing line between success and failure than the scorecard indicated. While Notts probably felt that they were better equipped for chasing a target, there was some-thing in the pitch for their bowlers while the ball was new.

But this was one of those wretched days for them when the good balls contrived to miss the edge rather than find it. The trouble was that although Chris Cairns produced several beauties, beating even Mozon, there were far too few from other sources and Notis failed to keep an accurate off-stump line.

Thus Moxon never looked back after locating – and dealing with severely – the first of many half-volleys. Thereafter he had a stroke for almost every ball, most of them majestically timed, and gradually he hit pow-erfully through the line, which was not entirely straightforward on a pitch of lowish and occasionally variable bounce.

He gave one, maybe two, hard chances, the first long after Yorkshire were up and away. But judged by the usual helterskelter of one-day cricket, it was flawless batting of a high pedigree. There cannot be a better equipped opener in the country, not withstanding the ven-erable Graham Gooch.

Illingworth knows this. He wanted to take Moson to South Africa last winter but did not get his way. A damaged thumb stemmed the flow of runs that put Moxon in the selectors' minds earlier in the season and although there could be a case for playing three specialist open-ing batsmen against Pakistan later this summer, the presence of Messrs Waqar and Younis means this tendency to pick up such injuries is the only question mark on Moxon's cv.

Ironically, a couple of blows on the boot from yorkers gave Moxon most cause for concern in this innings. In the end he was caught on the boundary, where Nottinghamshire picked up four of their five wickets, which may tell you something about the quality of their attack.

69, w3, nb2).

Umpires: J D Bond and B Lea

SOUTHAMPTON: Reseptitre boot

nson b Goldsmith

322.
Did not bat: †AN Aymes, KD James, MJ Trusfield, C A Cornor, Bowling: Neaman 10-1-36-0; Saggers 10-1-56-0; Goldsreith 12-2-64-4; M W Thomas 6-0-39-0; Powel 3-0-43-0; D R Thomas 3-0-15-0; Boon 11-0-63-1.

Fait 1-2, 2-18, 3-70, 4-78, 5-116, 8-215, 7-216, 8-217, 9-219.

CRICKET SCOREBOARD

IN International	Path 1-96, 2-151, 3-21 7-311. To bat: P W Jarvis, E S Bowling: M W Patters 8-0-41-0; McCrum 12-0-6 52-3: Harrison 12-0-6
Le Fleming b Such0 notice b Law0 red not out25	IRBLAND: *J D R Ber Heastey, A R Duntop, N rison, †A T Rutherford, f A Percerson, D M P Mo
des absent0	Cimpires: N T Pleas an

Fee: 1-66, 2-85, 3-116, 4-119, 5-148, 6-148, 7-152, 8-193. Leicestersbire v Berksbire LEICESTER: Leicester Bowling: Not 6-1-19-0; Covern 8-1-44-1; Iran. 7-0-17-0; Grayson 7-0-19-0; Such 12-0-48-2; Law 6.3-0-36-2.

Umpires: A A Jones and M K Reed.	V J Welts c H M Hall b Govett D L Maddy c Lane b Oxfey
Glamorgan v Worcestershire	A Habib c H M Hall b Govett
CARDET: Worcestershire best Glateorgan by 43 mass.	J M Dakin c T L Hall b Govett
Warcestershire won toss	C C Remy not out
WORCESTERSHIRE T 5 Curtis c Cottey b Parkin12	Extras (b6, w5, rb4)
W P C Weston c & b Parkin	Fall: 1-14, 2-91, 3-293, 4-359, 5-35
"T M Moody c Cottey b Butcher	Did not bat: "J J Whitaker, D J Milins Parsons, A R K Pierson.
V S Solaniù c Parkin b Watlen	Bowling: Barrow 12-2-62-0; Oxfey 12-4 1; Myles 3-0-22-0; Barnett 12-0-54-0;
t$ J Rhodes c Croft b Dale8	est 12-0-103-3: Hartley 5-0-42-0: H k

4-0-31-0. *G E Loveday & Nixon b Dakin R Soza & Nixon b Parsons T t. Hell & Nixon b Simmons ... S D Myles st Nixon b Maddy . H M Hall run out Fait 1-18, 2-46, 3-90, 4-242, 5-286, 6-289. Did not best: J P Govert, J K Barrow, D J B Harriey.

Remny 12-1-65-0: Sammors 5-0-20-1; Datin 12-1-63-0: Sammors 5-0-20-1; Datin 12-1-63-1; Plerson 12-2-48-0; Maddy 7-0-58-2 Usepires: T E Jesty and D R Shepherd. 7:06 Falt 1-53, 2-68, 3-75, 4-111, 5-153, 6-182, 7-184, 8-203, 9-209. Lincolnshire y Giones

> Gloucestershire won toss CH OLICESTERSHURE A J Wright b Gill R I Dawson c Wilson t N J Trainor c Gall b Bro son b GM N J (rainty c Gar b Bradford 14
> A Symonth st Wiston b Bradford 87
> M W Alleyne b Tonse 4
> R C Russell c Gouldstone b Armstrong 27
> T H C Hancock st Wilson b Fell 10
> M C J Batj c Gillett b Gill 31
> C A Wilson c Wilson b Gill 31
> C A Wilson c Wilson b Gill 12
> A M Smith not out 12 Fal: 1-5. 2-13, 3-107, 4-121, 5-130, 6-157, 7-191, 8-196, 9-219.

N' J Armsbong not out ... 1G B Wilson Bw b Alleyn Extres (64, w7, nb8) Bowling: Waish 6-1-23-1; Smith 6-1-21-3; Lawis 9-2-19-2; Alleyne 9.3-3-26-2; Ball 9-3-24-1; Symonds 8-4-18-1.

Northants v Cheshire onshire won tosa

PARTIBLE PROPERTY OF THE PROPE *I Codique Bur b Capel
R G Highelt b Taylor
I'S Branthall run out
S J Rénshaw e Ambrose b Embure
E S Gernett not out
A D Greasley c Belley b Emburey
N D Peel Bur b Emburey Fat 1-0, 2-1, 3-27, 4-52, 5-56, 6-127, 7-135, 8-135, 9-135. Bowling Malcolm 10 1-49-0; Harris 9-4-19-O; DeFeigas 12-3-31-3; Dean 12-1-52-3; Van-drau 12-7-20-1; Jones 0.2-0-0-2.

uer not out: at 8 Loye, K M Curran, 1R J Wer-ren, T C Wafton, A L Pemberthy, J E Emburey, C E L Ambrose, J P Taylor. Sawilage Peel 7-1-37-1; Renshaw 5-0-25-0; Gametr 3-0-25-0; Greadey 7-0-19-0; Bostock 2-0-19-0; Hignett 1-0-8-0. Umpires: R Julian and P Adams.

Oxfordshire v Lancashire ASTON ROWANT: Lancashire best Oxfor shire by 109 nms. Oxfordshire won toss

G D Lloyd c Joyner b Elisor fW K Hegg lbw b Arnold ... I D Austin not out S Elwarity not out Extras (lb5, w18) Total (for 8, 60 overs) ... Fall: 1-147, 2-159, 3-252, 4-260, 5-293, 6-

Bonding Amold 11-1-57-1: Joyner 10-0-48-1: Laudet 10-0-44-0; Curts 3-0-23-0: Jones 4-0-34-0; Exars 10-1-45-1: Elejon 12-0-53-

J N Batty b Austin
R Mustow to Austin
R Mustow to Austin
J Williams o Heigh b Elworthy
J Williams o Heigh b Elworthy
C A Ellison o Fambrother b Fart
S Knightily not out
G Joyner & Heigh b Lloyd
James not out

Filts: 1-1, 2-18, 3-33, 4-101, 5-157, 6-180. Did not bett: "R A Exerts, K A Amobi, 1) Curis. Bowling: Marter 7-4-8-0; Auster 7-1-24-2; E-wordy 6-2-10-1; Chapple 4-0-18-0; Yates 12-5-20-1; Westward 12-6-32-0; Speek 4-0-31-0; Felstrother 5-0-28-1; Lloyd 3-0-23-1.

Somerset v Suffolk TALINTON: Somerset best Suffelk by 62 Somersk von uns Somerser M N Lathwell b Steel P D Bowler fun out S C Exclesione c Brown b Golding... M E Trascothick b Miller

Did not bet: HR J Trump.

Did not bet: H R J Trump.
Beading: Graham 12:0-75-2: Steel 10-1-62-1: Miller 12:1-61-2: Goding 12:1-38-1: Cally 12:0-77-0: Wijesuriya 2:0-15-0: SUFFOLK.
D W Randoal o Lathwell b Pursons 39
S M Clemens o Tumer b Caddick 11.
K M Wijssuriya c Lee b Trump 62
R J Carley b Parsons 16
P J Carley h Parsons 15
A J Square o Tresporthick b Rose 5
A J Square o Tresporthick b Rose 5
C A Miller not out 3
Extres (b1, ib9, w21, rib8) 3
Fotal (for 8, 60 overs) 271.
Falls 1-25, 2-53, 3-118, 4-192, 5-214, 6-232. Did not bet: †A D Brown, A K Golding, S A Bowling: Caddick 12-0-46-2; Rose 12-2-44-1; Tump 12-0-51-1; Lee 8-0-35-0; Parsons 10-0-46-2; Hayfurst 3-0-11-0; Trescotrick 3-0-28-0.

Umpires: J H Hampshire and J F Steele. Staffordskire v Derbyshire

Staffordshire won toss STAFFORDSHIRE P F Show c Kritisan b DeFradas
A Waterinouse tow b Dean
L Potter flow b DeFradas
K N Pases flow b DeFradas A J Dutton e Jones b Deen †M 1 Huxophries e Kriden b Deen C G Fetham b Vandrau

Did not bat: *D M Jones, P A J Defretas, †K M Krikken, M J Vandrau, A J Homs, K J Dean, D E Malcolm. Bowling Brack 6-1-33-1; Richardson 7-0-42-0; Ridgusy 8-1-41-1; Potter 3-0-22-0; Dut-ton 1.5-0-27-0; Feltham 1-0-7-0. Umpires: B Dudieston and K J Lyons, Surrey v Netherlands Surrey won toes

SURREY
D J Bicknell c van Noortwijk b Zulfigar
M A Bucher c Cantrell b Zulfigar
"TA J Stewart Row b Cantrell

Holloake c Zuffoar n Cantrell Total (60 overs) ... Falt: 1-108, 2-135, 3-217, 4-258, 5-277, 6-281, 7-313, 8-318, 9-322, Bowling: Purge 12-2-41-0; Baider 11-0-51 1; Boerstra 7-0-45-1; van Dijk 8-0-57-Cantrell 12-0-59-2; de Leede 1-0-11-0; 2-fiqar 7-0-53-2; Zuiderent 2-0-15-0.

figer 7-0-53-2; Zuiderent 2-0-15-0.

METHERHARDS
P E Cantrell e Stewert b Benjamin
E Goulde nun out
T B M de Leede b Hollioalte
B Zuiderent st Stewart b Peasson
K I van Noorwijk lieb e Hollioalte
A Zuffiger b Julian
A Zuffiger b Julian
H Boerstra liew b Julian
C Pringle c & b Pigott
S van Dijk b Julian
P J Balder not out Pat: 1-43, 2-56, 3-71, 4-90, 5-115, 6-169. 7-170, 6-171, 9-181. Bowling: Julian 9.4-0-48-3; Benjamin 7-2-24-1; Pigoti 9-1-22-2; Holloake 8-0-35-2; Pearson 9-1-39-1.

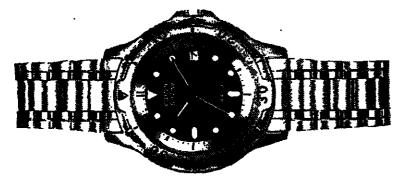

Yorkshire v Nottinghamshire HEADINGLEY: Yorkshire best Notting shire by 205 runs.

Notinghamshire won toss
YORKSHIRE
M D Monorro Pick b Tolley
M P Youghan o Mercarle b Evans
"D Byas C Robmon b Pick
M G Beven b Carris
M G Beven b Carris
C White not out
TR J Blately not out Extras No. 5, 112, 45, 1150
Total (for S, 60 overs)

Total (for S, 60 overs) Fall: 1-143, 2-220, 3-286, 4-308, 5-343. Did not bet: D Gough, P.J Hertley, C.E.W.Sil-verwood, R.D. Stemp. Bowling: Svans 12-1-57-2; Calms 12-1-76-1; Bowler 6-0-42-0; Battle 111-0-56-0; Pick 10-0-42-1; Tolley 9-0-55-1. Trimenamentice
R Pollard b Hardey
T Robinson c Vaughan b White
A Metaotic c Vaughan b Stemp Admission to Stemp
Admission to Stemp
L Galans of Blakey to Gough
M Tolley of Stemp od to Stem
I P Walter the to Stemp
I Battes low to Hartley
P Exerts to White

M N Bowen not out ... R A Pick b Gough ... Extras (65, w7, nb2). Total (43,3 overs) Felt 1-55, 2-76, 3-91, 4-98, 6-114, 6-116, 7-121, 8-131, 9-138. Bowling: Gough 9,3-2-24-2; Silverwood 6-0-21-0; White 8-1-23-2; Hardey 8-1-22-2; Stamp 12-2-45-4 Umpires: G | Burgess and J W Holds

Starting today TOUR MATCH: Fenner's (First day of three): British Universities v India (11.0).

Bad light starts play.

The Citizen Eco-Drive is ace. Just a few minutes murky light is enough to make it run and run. Powered by light. Quartz accuracy. No battery change. No hassle. Prices from £89.50. Model illustrated £145. 3 year guarantee. For more details call 01753 897 210. Net one today.

OCITIZEN Eco-Drive

Gil troubles

Maus returns to a

...

2.

Llong digs of a Fenla

Won $300

oub

ast CJ

atl

verdict that worker wi

itural caus

ranklin, S. full fitness

cck in only ise of Crei

e, a York i

J: "I have f

a natural d

t is one of

lose frien

ow.cuonap

question of Directions

: really low

ad been an

er. If it wa

mer wife,

Avenue.

l his roast

I'm convi

ed him, tog

with cate

ruld have i

if people

nt sure.

hologist.

from Lo

v. who car

unation

old the inq IVO mori

usual for ariant, he s

between id that vas the o

vorker in

id told t

meat, esp

и спопио

had grad

a period

īrst, he lo is sense (

ne unable t

ffered from

vent by, b

xok uncor

fied at hi

reet, York

hs in 1989

CJD can

beef that cted with

Oncerned

rs might

ng CJD is ецштеѕ а

it can be

NATWEST TROPHY FIRST ROUND

Masterful Moody slams Glamorgan

reports from Cardiff

Glamorgan 210 Worcestershire win by 43 runs

Worcestershire have had a dreary season, short of bowling, Graeme Hick inconsistent and playing on a flat, heart-breaker of a square at New Road. A first Championship victory over Somerset lifted spirits and this win, spearheaded by captain Tom Moody, added champagne. For Glamorgan had made the best of starts at bright, breezy Sophia Gardens, the 'unknown'

Owen Parkin knocking off the 16 overs had gone. They were top of the Worcestershire order in a pit and if Moody is tall for only 35 rms. Parkin looks a promising recruit, born in Coventry, arriving via Bath University. Six feet tall, fair-haired and 23, he has a lithe, whippy action, swings the ball away and has a quick faster ball. He made his debut in 1994 and would probably have made an impact last summer but for a serious back injury.

Phil Weston's dismissal revived speculation about the pitch, expected to turn, as the ball seemed to hold up. Tim Curtis was trying to clear extracover, Graeme Hick deep-cover. For whatever reasons, Worcestershire were 35-3 and

Llong digs Kent out of a Fenland mire

DEREK PRINGLE Kent 275-5 Cambridgeshire 182 Kent win by 93 runs

When it is finally formed, the England Cricket Board will have as one of its objects the raising of standards in English cricket at every level. For the moment, however, this remains something of a pipe-dream: and Cambridgeshire, even with the home advantage of a slow springy pitch, were no match for a Kent side at present on top of the Championship table.

It may seem unfair making such sweeping conclusions from the evidence of a Nat West trophy match, but Cambridgeshire, as holders of the MCC one-day trophy, are one of the better Minor County sides around. However, from the moment Nigel Llong's maiden century helped Kent to a total of 275, the home side were never in contention, and after a promising start to the day, they made just 182 - Giles Ecclestone contributing a histy 92.

Ditches abound in the Fens and Kent, having won the toss, found themselves deeply entrenched in one at 27-3, a minicollapse precipitated more by Gill troubles Gloucestershire

reports from Sleaford

Gloucestershire 222

Gloucestershire win by 87 runs

nors take on the somewhat anxious majors produced an impish performance from Lincolnshire. Not many amateurs sixes and nine fours, lifted

Gloncestershire at a well an-pointed ground steeped in history, where W. G. Grace, an illustrious county forebear, once

London Road headquarters for Sleaford have played at the dismiss professionals within 60

Lincolnshire 135

Llong and Mark Ealham proved an able pair of sappers, digging their team from the mire with a fourth-wicket partnership worth 104. Ealham: recently in splendid form with the ball, was first to reach his fifty. He departed soon after, however, yorked by Nadeem

His departure did not affect Llong who, in his fourth NatWest match, continued to accelerate, adding another 144 runs, first with Carl Hooper and then Matthew Walker. Striking the ball cleanly, he finished unbeaten on 115. Already the prime contender for man of the match, Llong sealed the contest with a salmon leap at backward point to get rid of the home team's skipper, Nigel Gadsby. The catch knocked the stuffing out of Cambridgeshire, who had already lost Saleem Mohammed in the first over, caught behind off Dean Headley.

Mohammed.

The recently rehabilitated fast bowler then removed Simon Kellett with a beauty that bounced and left the batsman. With Nick Adams following in the 10th over, the home side found themselves on 18-4. After that, only Ecclestone and Brad Donelan looked able to cope, and only then on re-electrical contractor from Bradford, returning 4 for 44, Lin-colnshire's best return in the competition's history. He also out Jonathan Lewis, backing up in the Bradford League, bowled fast left arm and troubled

Gloucestershire with the support of a ridge which must have reminded Jack Russell,

England's saviour at Lord's, of

A crowd of 2,000 applauded

Russell all the way to the crease

before he took root at 121 for

4. Another day, another challenge, met with the firm Russell

Russell found an ally in Mar-posite end, down the hill.

handshake.

enough to stand on the bottom and look over the top, he still had to call upon that Australian resilience to lead them

He found a reliable partner in Vikram Solanki, the pair adding 100 in 20 overs; only Steve Watkin seemed able to block the escape. But even Watkin could do little about the rampaging Moody and he crowned a fine innings with a thunderous 54th over in which he hit Gary Butcher straight for six, lofted him over extra for another and was only a few feet short of a third to long-off. Moody's 123 came off 129 balls and also included six fours.

Glamorgan set off just before 3 p.m. and for 15 overs Steve James and Hugh Morris batted as though victory was a for-mality. Three seamers made no impact, but as soon as Richard Illingworth appeared, a wicket fell, but not to the bowler.

James pushed to cover and set off; Morris, seeing that there was only a 50-50 chance of a run, sent him back: Steve Lampitt had the ball into Steve Rhodes first. Four overs later, Morris was taken at the wicket as Illingworth tied him up and Glamorgan were struggling when the captain, Matthew Maynard, anxious to maintain momentum, mistimed a pull. The retrenchment was slow,

Adrian Dale and Tony Cottey raising 36 in 14 overs before Cottey took a chance and Phil Newport fired in and hit the stumps. By then Worcester-shire had unveiled their own quick bowler, Scott Ellis, 22, a Warwick student, strong build, shortish run, fast-arm action, late of England under-19. He may have been nervous, tending to over-pitch, Dale and Gary Butcher taking advantage as they reduced the target to 113 off the last 20 overs.

Dale was then tempted by Hick for Moody, at square leg to run with his back to the ball, circle and with the sun in his eves, take the catch with extraordinary judgement. When Phil Newport limped out, after eight overs, Glamorgan might have glimpsed a last chance but Stuart Lampitt the slow pitch than the guile of duced terms, with even Kent's bowled both Robert Croft and the opening bowler Kevin Masacting captain and wicket-Colin Metson and the rest, 69 bowled both Robert Croft and ters, who was once a peripheral member of the Kent staff. keeper, Steve Marsh, giving off 42 balls, three wickets real member of the Kent staff. himself a bowl by the end. maining, was arithmetic.

This is the yearly jamboree of candlestick maker, whose closest touch to playing against big board. Fell, a former Notting-hamshire batsman, is loosely termed a florist, working in the family business, but offered a distinct touch of flower power in a defiant innings of 31 before

Oakes also added to the respectability zone, sharing an eighth-wicket partnership of 49. Other definitive performances were few but those of the Sleaford back-up crew could not be underestimated. No one,

apart from weekend bar staff,

receives any payment.

This special day when the professionals meet the amateurs is a salutary reminder of their own origins and genial Gloucestershire loved every minute of

Anthony Towse and Simon

being fifth out at 62.

their history, illuminated by Mark Fell, Lincolnshire's cap-the 24-year-old Neil Gill, an tain.

held a towering catch and ran names is the newsprint score-

صكنا من الاجل

Freedom, the historic 12-metre yacht, punches through the swell of St Tropez in the Rolex Cup

Diagana to miss the Olympics

Stephane Diagana, the world 400 metres hurdles bronze medallist, has pulled out of the French team for next month's Olympics with a foot injury. There was no solution," said the 27-year-old European record holder. "One month ahead of the Games, there was too much work to do. It was impossible. I didn't want to make it worse."

Antonella Bevilacqua, the high jumper who last month failed two dope tests for the banned stimulant ephedrine, was yesterday named in Italy's equad for Atlanta.

The Italian athletic federation (Fidal) argued that there mittee ruling allows leeway for are no grounds to ban her from international competition, although the squad has to be approved by the Italian Olympic Committee later this week. An Italian judicial enquiry ter the first positive test in Milan on 4 May, but a ruling has yet to be made on the second positive test in Bologna on 26 May. Fidal has sent the International Amateur Athletic Federation all the details of their enquiry into the first case for a cleared Bevilacqua of blame af-

The Monte Carlo-based IAAF have a mandatory threemonth ban for ephedrine, but an International Olympic Com-final ruling.

errors made in good faith providing they are not due to negligence or imprudence. The decision to include Bevilacqua in the Olympic squad could lead to the athlete competing at Atlanta while being subject to an IAAF ban or But the Fidal president, Gianni Gola, insisted the sce-nario was unlikely: "I don't believe the IAAF will do it [imnose a banl because competing in the Olympics is governed by IOC rules. I think it's clear that since the federation judge applied an IOC ruling, no rules have been broken.

himself out of Kenya's team yesterday, saying he was in no shape to compete. "I am not coming to Nairobi for the trials [starting tomorrow]." he said. "I have been down with knee problems and I am now undergoing treatment. My doctors have not allowed me to do speed training yet," said Konchellah from his summer home in the Netherlands.

"It is disappointing that I canadded Konchellah, who turns 34 not do the trials and cannot do the Olympics. This would have to be my last opportunity to try to win an Olympic place. Sydney [2000] will be too late.

Juve bid for Shearer Moriarty takes over

Football

Juventus have offered Black-burn £12m for Alan Shearer, according to Italian television and newspaper reports. The deal, which might suit both the club and the player, reported-ly would involve the Italian international striker Fabrizio Ravanelli going to Ewood Park, plus a substantial cash settlement for Rovers. Alex Ferguson hopes today to sign the 31-year-old Dutch goalkeeper Raymond van der Gouw on a free transfer from Vitesse Arnhem as Manchester Unit-ed's No 2. United have offered van der Gouw a three-year deal and he was at Old Trafford yesthe butcher, the baker and the terday finalising terms. Birmingham's hopes of signing Jean-Pierre Papin from Bayern Munich may rest on the readiness of businesses in the

of foot which no one could

Nations Cup Show in Germany.

It was their second successive win in this competition and they were runners-up in 1994. Whitaker was second to go in a field of 71 horses, which would normally be considered a bopeless draw. But he whizzed round to such effect that Piet Ray-makers, who finished second for Division club pay the former French international's salary. Trevor Francis, the Birmingham manager, said that Papin was very interested" in moving to St Andrew's and called for sponsors to help meet wage demands believed to be around £15,000 a week.

Mark McGhee, the Wolves manager, will watch the Czech

Republic's £2m-rated goalkeeper, Petr Kouba, at Old Trafford today, having confirmed that he had contacted Sparta Prague about the fee they are seeking.
The forward Paul Stewart, who helped Sunderland clinch

the First Division title after ioining them on a free transfer from Liverpool, has signed a two-year contract.
Leeds' South African striker

Phil Masinga flew to Switzerland yesterday to discuss a transfer to St Gallen after the fresh from Australia, in the West Midlands to help the First clubs had agreed a £500,000 fee. | centres.

slower. Close behind came Ger-couple of weeks off since twisting his off-fore fetlock in St

Gallen earlier this month. Assuming he remains sound - and retains the wonderful form

he showed yesterday - he is likely to go to Atlanta as Whitakchoice, continues to progress

Twostep, Whitaker's first

er's reserve horse.

Rugby League DAVE HADFIELD

By a masterpiece of planning, even by the standards of this sport, Wales and England will decide one European Championship tonight in Cardiff while the attention of most of the country will be on Euro-matters 150 miles away.

Appropriately, Paul Moriarty - no mean schoolboy football player himself - will be Wales' captain as they try to retain their title. He succeeds David Young, an ever-present in recent Welsh sides, who tore ankle ligaments in France three weeks ago. The other injury news for Wales is mixed. Anthony Sullivan is fit to play on one wing, but Gerald Cordle misses out, with Jason Critchley moving to the flank and Allan Bateman, jumped double clear rounds in Grand Prix competitions, fin-

two Sundays. Midnight Madness

is expected to be in the British team for Friday's Nations Cup, with Twostep being saved for the British team manager, will not pick the Nations Cup team un-til tomorrow, but it seems likely his own horse, Orthos, now

Ronnie Massarella, the Grand Prix on Sunday.

Michael Whitaker and Mid-night Madness produced a turn

The Netherlands on Jewel's since cracking two bones in his being ridden by Robert Smith, and Mid-night Madness produced a turn

Amethyst, was some 6.45sec withers in February. He has will be included. Yesterday

'We still think it is a pretty strong side," said a wary England coach, Phil Larder. "We alwavs think Wales are likely to be formidable on home soil. They will certainly play with a lot of passion."

For once, however, that passion is unlikely to be quite enough. Despite the loss of Martin Offiah, Paul Newlove and Karl Harrison from his team of true international calibre at his disposal.

IDIC 81. IIIS CUSPICSION WALEE; PAthieses (Idicam Bears); A Sullivas ISI Helena), A Badesman (Corunta), G Davies (Narringon), J Ortholivey (Heggide) Cougast; I Harrin (Marringon), I Watson (Sallost Resis; M Jones (Marringon), K Ganningham (St Helenas), N Contect (Hellan), P Mastarry (South Wales, capt), M Perest (Hellan Flue Son, C Marring (St Helena), Substitutes: D Edwards (Eastheford Tigers), M Heal (Migan), P Pallips (Workington Town), R Webster (Sallord Rack).

ster ISaford Rock.

ENGLAND: S Prescott (St Heiers); J Robinson
Wiger), G Consolly (Wiger), N McArrey (Saford Reds), J Bentley (Heise: Bue Sod), D Powell (Regity), Coughts), S Etheude (Wiger); P Branch bent (Sheffield Engles), J Lawless (Sheffiel), P Grandgest), S Molloy (Festiverson's Rovers), C Joynt (St Velens), P Scutthorpe (Warmigton), A Farreal (Wiger, C southorpe (Warmigton), A Farreal (Wiger, C southorpe (Warmigton), B McDersout (Leects), M Canadaly (Miger). Whitaker leaves the field in his wake

Smith jumped the grey steadily in the Mannesmann contest

1131 (IOUIDIE).

AACHEN NATIONS CLIP SHOW: MercedesBenz Prize: 1. Midnight Madness (M Whitaker, GB) clear, GB, 49sec; 2. Jewel's Amethyst
(P Roymakers, Neht) clear, 75,94; 3 Geylord
(I. Beerbaum, Ger) clear, 76,60. SchollerFellen Prizes: 1. Unoxo du Manor (P Delareau, Pr) clear, 64,20; 2. Loro Pana Rosegarden (R Pessoa, Braj clear, G6,40; 3 Caonceux (S van Pessotien, Berl clear, 65,20. Manmesmann Prizes: 1 May Day (A Bologn, It) clear, 63,18; 2. Ten Cate Edison (E Hendro, Neth) clear, 71,85; 3 Bellerina (M Merschformann, Gerl clear, 76,25.

Cooke, who took England to one World Cup final and two doubt think something similar first-choice side, Larder has a | as rugby's map changes according to where the money is. Yesterday, Craig Quinnell left Llanelli to join his brother Scott at Richmond, bringing to five the number of internationals they can field in the pack. The back row of Quinnell, Quinnell and Ben Clarke will be as good as any in the land, let alone the Second Division. Still in the Second, Moseley have found a seven-man consortium of local businessmen to invest £600,000 in the club, and have called a special meeting on 11 July to turn the club into a

TODAY'S NUMBER

The pounds a gambler will col-lect on a £122 accumulator

Nicklaus returns for the Open at least 162 years. Even the club tyn Ball, who later clutched the cannot pinpoint a specific date. catch of the match, a hot one

This was another golden day in at backward point to dismiss

Cricket's annual one-day funathon when the optimistic mi-

Only an innings of 87 from 83 the one situated a considerable balls by Andrew Symonds, the distance south; Courtney Walsh man of the match who hit four still opted to bowl from the op-

Jack Nicklaus will extend his unbroken run in the majors to 139
when he tees off in the 124th

Ballesteros, who won at Royal Lytham in 1979 and 1988, will Open at Royal Lytham and St Annes on 18 July.

Tournament organisers yesterday confirmed that Nick- since Scotland's Tom Morris Inr laus, who won the Open in 1966 and 1978, had decided to 1870. enter the event after his solid performance earlier this Steve Jones, is also in the list of month in the US Open. Nick- 93 players who are guaranteed month in the US Open. Nick-laus, 56, had said he would not make the trip to England un-other wonderful entry, not only less he felt that he could be competitive.

other former Open champions, including Americans Mark cient club. a Calcavecchia (1989), five-times winner Tom Watson and the Player will contest his 42nd defending champion, John

The other former champions in the record entry of 1,919 are 139." Bob Charles, winner in 1963, Gary Player, who won in 1974, Sandy Lyle champion in 1985, Greg Norman (1986 and 1993), nan R Nick Faldo (1987, 1990 and 1980.

1992), Ian Baker-Finch (1991). Nick Price (1994) and Seve Ballesteros (1979, 1984 and Ballesteros, who won at Roy-be bidding to become the first player to win the Open three times in a row at the same venue managed it at Prestwick in The US Open champion, with unparalleled strength in depth, but also full of interest," Nicklaus will be joined by 11 said Michael Bonallack, the secretary of the Royal and An-

"We are delighted that Gary straight Open, and that Jack Nicklaus will extend his long unbroken run in the majors to

Spain's Sergio Garcia, at 16, will become the youngest Open participant since Ireland's Ronan Rafferty first appeared in Athletics

Athertics
France's Stephane Diagana, the world 400 metres hundles bronze medallist, putied out from the French team for next month's Olympics with a foot injury. Diagana, the 27-year-old European record holder, who was one of France's best hopes for a track and field medal in Atlanta, hed an unsuccessful times test at the French championships last weekend. Also injured and unable to compate is the twice world 800m champion, Billy Konchellah, who yesterday ruled himself out of Kenya's Olympic team because of knee problems.

Namibla's Frankle Fredericks came Namibla's Frankle Fredericks came close to the 100 metres world record yesterday, clocking 9.87 seconds at an yesterday, clocking 9.87 seconds at an international athletics event in Heisinlii, Finland. Fredericks's time was the fastest this year and just 0.02sec outside the American Lercy Burreli's world record of 9.85sec set in Lausanne nearsecord of 9.85sec set in Lausanne nearly two years ago.

Internutrional, Internet (Related, Fle)
Leading positions: Men's 100mc 1.F Finderloss (Nam) 9.87; 2.0 Brashwate (GB) 10.13;
3.0 Balley (Car) 10.15; 1.10m herdies: 1.T
lames (GB) 13.48sec; 2.F Balze (Bar) 1366;
3.1 Long (Dnne) 13.67; 2.00mc 1.V Dologosin
(Isin) 20.63ec; 2.R Demper (SA) 2061; 3.0
Delic (US) 2088, 400mc 1.1 Thorpas (EB)
45.14sec; 2.D thine Lates (GB) 45.18; 2.Rober
(GW) (SA) 45.65; 1.500mc 1.F Notro
(Ref) 3min 4500mc; 2.6 Sevent (SB) 3.4511;
3.P Mwang (Ren) 3.4407, Janesim 2.B Henry (Ge) 38.48mc 2.P Bolon (Swe) 92.20; 3.4
Heidaminen (Fr) 81.75; Women's 100mc 1.

M Tranderious (Rus) 11.15sec; 2.M Rechardson (GB) 11.83 J Marsmen (Fr) 151.400mc
1.A Artsento (Idy) 5278sec; 2.1 Maylor (Aus)
5333; 3.Y Warren (IS) 5368, Long James 1.1
Ninose (Aut) 6.95ct; 2.Y Chen (Rus) 6.71; 3.V
Vershnina (Us) 6.64.

AMERICAN LENGIE: Chrono White Sox 4 Cal-torns 2 eller genet: Chiconia 6 Discap White Sox 4 rescond genet: Minnesota 3 New York Yan-lees C: Bellomore 8 Texts 3; Celdend 4 Detox 2.

SPORTING DIGEST League East v West select foture. John Harkes, the former Sheffield Wednesmatch when winning yester-day's Mercedes-Benz Prize on the opening day of the Aachen many's Olympic champion, Ludger Beerbaum on Gaylord. Midnight Madness has had a NATIONAL LEASUE: Montreal 11 Pittsburgh 3; Florida 2 San Francisco 1; Cincinnati 7 Philiadel-phia 0; St Louis 9 Atlanta 2; New York Mets 2 Colorado 1.

Broking

Britain's Henry Akinwande has been given a change of opponent in his bid for the vacant World Boxing Organisation heavyweight tide in Indio, California on Saturday. The 29-year-old London-born fighter will now face Jeremy Williams, of California, after his original scheduled opponent, Alex Zolken, suffered a cut over his left eye in training that needed 12 stitches.

Menuich's lungitan Thartan faced a late ing that needed 12 stitches.

Nowich's Jonathan Thadan faced a late change of opponent for last night's fight for the vacant International Boxing Federation inter-Continental title. Thattan was due to meet Mark Hammon, of the United States, at Mansifeld Jesure Cantre, but the Oldahoma-based boxer falled a medical. The 21-year-old, who unexpectedly innocked-out Paul "Scraping" Ryan in his last fight, will now face Wolverhampton's Mark Collins.

INTERNATIONAL BOXING FEDERATION MEANTWEIGHT TITLE CONTEST (Dertaund, Gar, Mon): M Moorer (US) bt A Schulz (Ger, holder) pts

Football

Luton will play a testimonial match against West Ham at Kenliworth Road on 5 August for their former England Under-21 defender, Julian James, who joined the club 10 years ago as a 16-year-old.

England midfielder Paul Ince and New-England midfleder Paul Ince and New-castle's French winger David Ginota have been selected for a FIFA All Stars world squad to face Brazil in New York on 1.4 July. The match will form one half of a double-header at the Glants Stadium and will be followed by a US Major Harkes, the former Sheffield Wednesday and Derby midfielder now playing for Washington side, DC United, has been called up both for the world squad and the "East' select.

FAR WORLD ALL-STARS (v Brazil, New York, 14 July: Goalknopers: Campos (Vec), Hightle (Dd.), Bicodeses Despilly (F), Hiero (SD, Falle (Max), Midfielders: Bealalow (Bul), Ginch (F), Hartes (US), Ince (Erg.), Redouds (Arg.), Forestrifes (US), ince (Erg.), Redouds (Arg.), Forestrifes (Us), more (Gene), Homario (Br), Visiti (II), Westl. (Libertal, Zole (II).

Manchester City, relegated last season, will help kick-off Sky Sports the coverage of the Nationwide Football League next season. City's First Division game against loswich at Maine Road on Fridey 16 August will be the first of 60 live target from severe the three discioner agginst (ISMICT) at wainer rused on hir day 16 August will be the first of 60 live games from across the three divisions that Sky will screen.

NOTIONWINE FOOTBALL LEAGUE: Live games on Sky Sports: Fri 16 Augu Manchester Cay vitositelt; Son 18. Birmangham v Cystar Preises. Toss 20: Swindon v Wolves (Coca Cola Cup); Fri 23: Portsmouth v QFR; Sun 22: Bernsley v Huddenfeld; Fri 30: West Brom v Shedfield United. Sun 1. September: QFR; Sun 22: Bernsley v Huddenfeld; Fri 30: West Brom v Shedfield United. Sun 1. September: QFR; Sun 22: Bernsley v Huddenfeld; Pri 30: West Brom v Shedfield United Shedfield; Fri 31: Nortich v Charlen; Sun 22: Stoke v Huddenfeld; Pri 37: Swindom v Wolves; Fri 30: Igandion; Fri 4 Oct; South v Norwich; Sun 26: Southend v Wolves; Fri 18: Oxford v Berningham; Sun 20: Trainings v QFR; Fri 25: Bernsley v Bolton; Sun 27: Manchester Cay v Wicker: Sun 3 Nor: Grinsby v Sheffield United: Fri 41: Norwich v QFR; Fri 25: Bernsley v Bolton; Sun 27: Manchester Cay v Wicker: Sun 3 Nor: Grinsby v Sheffield United: Fri 41: Huddenfeld v Brindon; Sun 10: Indian Sheffield United: Fri 41: Huddenfeld v Brindon; Sun 10: Indian Sheffield United: Fri 51: Huddenfeld v Brindon; Sun 10: Indian Sheffield United: Fri 51: Huddenfeld v Brindon; Sun 10: Indian Sheffield United: She

Jack Nickleus will extend his unbroken run in the majors to 139 when he tees of in the 124th Open at Royal Lytham and St Annes on 18 July. Organisers yes-terday confirmed that Nicklaus, who won the Open in 1966 and 1978, had de-cided to enter the tournament after his solid performance earlier this month in the US Open. Nicklaus will be joined by 11 other former Open champions, in-cluding Americans Mark Calcavecchia (1989), five-times winner form Watson and the defending champion John Daly. Spain's Sergio Garcia, at 16, will become the youngest Open participant since Ireland's Ron Rafferty in 1980.

Hockey

Mandy Nicholis, the Slough striker, en-sured that Great Britain shared the spoils yesterday in Madrid in an entertaining 1-1 draw against Spein. She scored the vital equaliser in the 29th minute, af-ter Lucia Lopez had put Spain, the Olympic champions, ahead four minutes earlier Alex Zanardi, of Italy, started on the pole and finished all alone to win the IndyCar Budweiser/C.1. Joe's 200 at Port-Inductor ButwesserGLT Des 2000 at Por-land Internationel Raceway on Sunday. Zanardi, who took over the lead for good on the 58th of the 108 lap race around the 1.95 mile (3.13 km) course, be-came the first rookle to win an IndyCar

Regby Union

Rowen Shepherd and Kevin McKenzie have shared Scotland's Player of the Tour award for the recent New Zealand trip.
Full-back Shepherd scored 23 points in the two lests against the All Blacks while the hooker McKerzie was described by his direct opponent the All Blacks captain Sean Fespetrick as "an outstanding player".

nai double.

ishing fourth in Luxembourg and he was clear until making and third in Arnhem on the last a single error going into the fi-

Sailing
The Olympic yachtsman Lawrie Smith was yesterday named as the skipper for Team EF's crew in the 1997-98 Whitbread Round the World Race. John salen, the Team EF's trice-president, said Smith, who won a brorze medal in the Soling class at the Barcelona Olympics four years ago, had always been his first choice: "For a variety of reasons it has taken some time to reach a finel agreement, but I couldn't be happier with the end result." he said.

MOMBAYS LATE RESULTS: Waterford Orwina. MONDAY'S LATE RESEATS: Waterford Crystal Squb National Champiosetalp (Howth): 1 Arc-tic Fox (5 Brower); 2 Inly Finger (1 Keely); 2 Too Dee (R O'Rjemaght; 4 Moorsone De Blackburnt; 5 Free Trader (R Batt); 6 Perfection (J Tubby).

Speedway
MORDAY'S LATE RESULTS: Premier Leagues
Enter 51 Swindon 45; Reading 42 Cradiey Heath & Stoke 54; Wolverhempton 56 Peterbatougs 40.

TODAY'S FIXTURES

Football EUROPEAN CHAMPIONS SEMI-FINALS

(Old Trafford, Manchester) England v Germany (7.30) (Wembley Statium) event this year and the latest driver to move from the Formula One ranks to earn a title in an IndyCar event.

EUROPEAN SUPER LEAGUE CHAMPION Wales v England (8.0) ...

Speedway SPEEDWAY STAR CUP Second round, sec-cod log: Poole (51) v Exster (45) (7.30). TENNES: Wimbledon Championships (All Englished Club).

Bedford crusade Rugby Union HUGH BATESON

It says something about the size

Turner

to lead

of Bedford's two coups yesterday that the recruitment of Geoff Cooke, the former England manager, was probably of sec-ondary excitement to the announcement that Paul Turner, the Welsh mastermind of Sale's resurgence, has been signed up as player-coach. His influence on the top flight of English rughy has been such that his fellow First-Division players voted him the No1 stand-off last year, before a falling-out ended his liaison with the Manchester club. "I'm raring to go," he said.

"There would seem to be so much untapped rughy potential in the county of Bedford and I'm thrilled to be working with a group of people who have a clear vision of where rugby is going in the new professional era." It is his vision that Bedford will be paying for - the mastery of the game which made Sale unique among sides promoted to the First Division in that they actually prospered there. So it is hardly surprising that Bedford are regarding their newcomers - Cooke will be director of rugby - with uncon-cealed delight. The move comes about directly through their connection with Sports Network Europe, a partnership in-volving Frank Warren, which will take a 50 per cent stake in the club. Bob Burrows, the former head of ITV Sport is SNE's representative at the club, and becomes its chief executive. "In my opinion, Cooke and Turner will be the 'dream team' to handle the playing affairs of the new Bedford rugby club," he said. "They provide an irresistible combination in our ambition to restore Bedford to former glories."

Grand Slams, said: "We have some exciting plans and a number of top names have expressed an interest in playing a part in our future. Our priority is to take the club back to its rightful position in Division One. The chih and the people of Bedford deserve nothing else." The people of Richmond no limited company.

201,069

if Germany win Euro 96. His bets that Manchester United, Rangers, Sunderland, Preston and Dunfermline would win their divisions and his selections for the 1,000 and 2,000 Guineas all came up.

THE INDEPENDENT : International : Tour Line 0891 881 485 All Counties News and Results 0891 525 075

Notts. 0891 525 381 Somerset 0891 525 382 Surrey 0891 525 383 Sussex 0891 525 384 0891 525 384 Warwicks. 0891 525 385

Worcs. 0891 525 386 Yorkshire 0891 525 387

Palain chesp. Palain other times. LLM. Ltd. Landon EM 9CE

on: Na

alsı

bin

Henman leads British charge

JOHN ROBERTS

Tennis Correspondent

Tim Henman was in disgrace, the first player ever to be disqualified at Wimbledon in the open era. This morning he is a national hero, having eliminated Yevgeny Kafelnikov, the fifth seed and French Onen champion, in a magnificent contest on the Centre Court.

One shot hit in anger which struck a ball-girl ended Henman's participation 12 months ago. Yesterday, the 21-yearold from Oxford displayed his full range of strokes and also showed tremendous character in overcoming the Russian, 7-6, 6-3, 6-7, 4-6, 7-5 after three hours and 36 minutes.

The triumph capped a splendid two days for the British men, seven of whom have advanced to the second round, a number last achieved 20 years ago. Henman was joined yesterday by Greg Rusedski, Mark Petchey. Danny Sapsford and Luke Milligan, as well as Chris Wilkinson and Colin Beecher, who had successfully negotiated the

One is guaranteed to make further progress, Sapsford being Henman's next opponent, which would not be good news for anybody.

There were moments in Hen-

YESTERDAY AT WIMBLEDON

Henman shows Britons the way with five-set victory over Kafelnikov

> Rusedski, Petchey, Milligan and Sapsford all add to British joy

Graf and Sanchez Vicario, last year's finalists, make comfortable progress very confident because I knew

British support."

It was Milligan's first win oth-

19-year-old from Muswell Hill,

Middlesex, ranked No 278, had not previously competed at the

All England Club, but he was able to hold his nerve after slipping two sets to one down to de-feat the Swedish Davis Cup player, Jonas Bjorkman, 4-6,

"Once the first set was over,

6-1, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4.

in straight sets. But Kafelnikov surived three break points at 3-3 in the third set, and then proceeded to make life most uncomfortable for the British

Indeed, when it came down bed. Fortunately my physic to the fifth set. Henman appeared to be on the verge of adding his name to the great British near-misses on the world's most famous court.

Trailing 3-5, he saved two match points - both of them with aces. Kafelnikov then double-faulted to present Henman with a couple of break points in the next game, and the Briton devoured the first with a confident forehand down the Henman saved a set point in the 11th game with a winning serve, and reached match point at 7-5 by out-rallying his opponent. And when it came to the crunch for the Russian, Henman lured him into netting a backhand.

Rusedski revealed that he man's match yesterday when he almost missed the tournaseemed about to wrap things up ment. "I didn't know whether played a very good second set. He upped his game a lot in the third set, and the third and fourth were very tight, but I came out with a few good shots on important points, which swung it my way."

Inexperience did threaten to unsettle Milligan when it came to closing the match out, "I was very nervous in my last service game especially, but a couple of people who were watching said I was going to be playing, be-cause I put my hip out of joint in Nottingham," he said. "I felt Î didu't look it, so I must have it on Saturday, and then on hidden it pretty well."

Sunday morning I woke up and almost couldn't get out of Milligan now plays Nicolas Lapentti, from Ecuador, ranked 192 places above him at No 86. "He's the same age as managed to put me together me. and we know each other The British No 2 was fit well from the juniors a couple of years back. I've watched enough to overcome the challenge of Daniel Nestor, a 23him a lot and he's watched me year-old Canadian who was a lot, but I've only ever played born in Belgrade, 7-6, 7-6, 6-2 him in doubles. It will be "We've always had close matches," Rudedski said. "I just felt interesting."
Sapsford also marked a breakthrough with his victory against Leander Paes, 1-6, 6-2, 6-4, 7-6. "Tve played four main that if I got into a tie-break I could manage a win with the draws and five qualifying and two juniors and it's the first siner than in satellite events. The gles match I've won at Wimbledon, so I feel as if I've exorcised a demon today."

The 27-year-old from Weybridge, Surrey, who is ranked No 195, stopped playing and tried coaching for nine months in 1992, until a sponsor helped finance his return to the tour.

"It's nice to actually produce a win at Wimbledon, where the majority of the British public think that this is the only tournament of the year." he added.

Petchey's win against Paes was a source of particular sat-isfaction, the Indian being one of a list of players who have defeated the Essex man in Davis Cup ties. Their only previous meeting was in a dead rubber in the World Group qualifying round in New Delhi in 1992, Paes winning, 6-2, 6-4. Yesterday, Petchey created his first match point at 5-4 in the fourth set before being taken to a tie-break. He then saved five set points before converting his fourth match point, 13-11. "I was getting a bit frustrated with the fact that I should have put the guy away before we got to the breaker,"

More reports and results,

Tim Henman stoops to conquer on Wimbledon's Centre Court yesterday where he beat Yevgeny Kafelnikov, 🕏 Photograph: David Ashdown French Open champion and No 5 seed from Russia, in five sets Below: Brenda Schultz-McCarthy, the No 11 seed, on her way to victory over Joannette Kruger Photograph: Empios

Did you guess our hidden personality?

A former Borussia Mönchengladbach defender, given his nickname because of the way he used to snap at defenders' heels, Berti Vogts has been the Germany coach since 1990, succeeding Franz Beckenbauer. After Germany fell in the quarter-finals of the World Cup in 1994, Vogts has rebuffed his critics by building a new team which has cruised through to the semi-finals of Euro 96.

THE INDEPENDENT CROSSWORD

of debts (6)

Long snake makes one run 25

h (5) Holds beads on trains (4) Rock Mass derived from concertino parts (10) Crazy, he will contract shortly in here (8) 15 Play abandoned around middle of match, as is liting (5)

17 Preoccupation of underweight German leader (5) 19 Bounty, paradoxically, brings misery and want (8)

state, is hostile (10) overdrawn, with reminders 23 Most impressed, Adam's first to get married (4) 6 City in which A Trollope is 7 said to be retired (5)

Story collector, a friend in fected (9) time of need? (4-5)
Second eleven to go quick- 27 High peak, finally, of patriarch's voyage (6) Writer of whimsy for listeners? (6)

can be pushed around (7) What is accomplished

Plant buried, would you say, on the beach? (3-5) The French camp holding Charles's first bequest (6)

Slight girl's view? (9) He covers all the points of fencing (7) Association of ideas (6,5) Yen promised, possibly, by this lucky thing in Japan? One raises the issue at mealtimes (4-5)

Sheriff's men very loud in DOWN destroying alibis? (8) 2 Shoe-cleaner, the sort that 18 Isolated city in ruins, sadly ... (7) ...still, we hang about out-20

side (7)
21 Job, perhaps, in the theaire? (6) Make out England's first

Mata

Spice up your snack life.

@ **@ ⊕